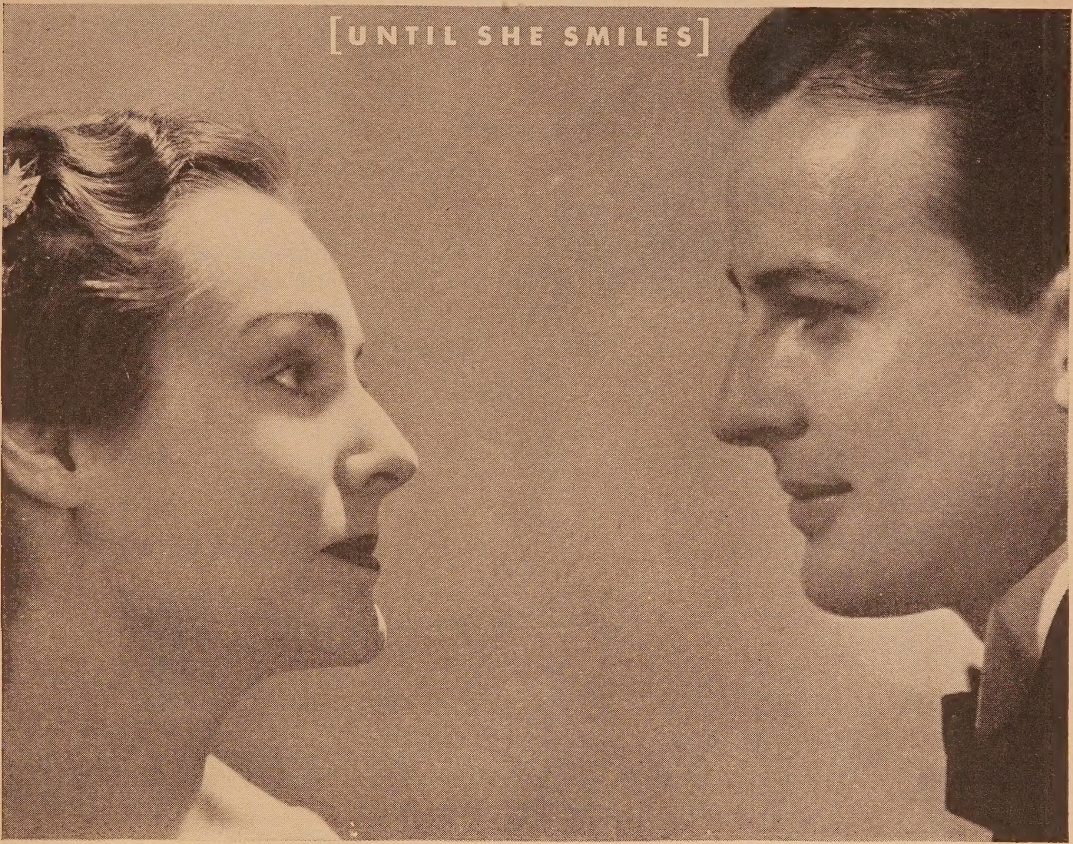
Enchanted Moment

[UNTIL SHE SMILES]



"PINK TOOTH BRUSH" makes her avoid all close-ups—dingy teeth and tender gums destroy her charm

A MAN'S first swift look sometimes says . . . "You're a charming woman."

And a woman's eyes may answer . . . "You're a likeable person."

And then she smiles. Lucky for both of them if it's a lovely, quick flash of white teeth, in healthy gums.

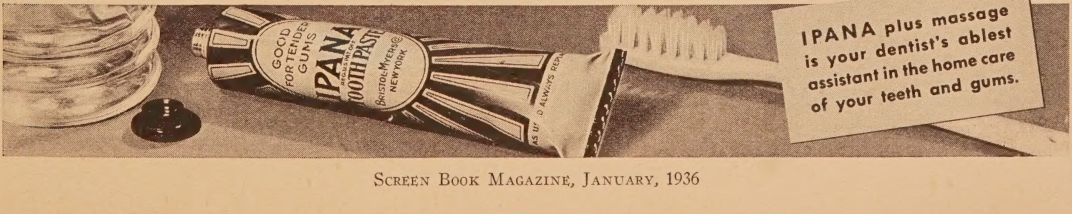
For a glimpse of dingy teeth and tender gums can blast a budding romance in a split second!

WHY IS "PINK TOOTH BRUSH" SO COMMON?

It's very simple. The soft foods that we all eat nowadays—almost exclusively—cannot possibly give teeth and gums enough work to do to keep them healthy. They grow lazy. Deprived of the natural stimulation of hard, coarse foods, they become sensitive, tender. And then, presently, "pink tooth brush" warns you that your gums are unhealthy—susceptible to infection.

Modern dental practice suggests Ipana plus massage for several good reasons. If you will put a little extra Ipana on brush or fingertip and massage your gums every time you brush your teeth, you will understand. Rub it in thoroughly. Massage it vigorously. Do it regularly. And your mouth will feel cleaner. There will be a new and livelier tingle in your gums—new circulation, new firmness, new health.

Make Ipana plus massage a regular part of your routine. It is the dentist's ablest assistant in the home care of the teeth and gums. For with healthy gums, you've ceased to invite "pink tooth brush." You are not likely to get gingivitis, pyorrhea and Vincent's disease. And you'll bring the clear and brilliant beauty of a lovely smile into any and every close-up.



IPANA plus massage is your dentist's ablest assistant in the home care of your teeth and gums.

THE FUNNIEST PICTURE SINCE CHAPLIN'S "SHOULDER ARMS"

If your memory is good . .
Was way back yonder!

We've gone a long way back
We admit.
But then, consider what
"A NIGHT AT THE OPERA" has—
And you'll see why
We feel safe
In making
This comparison.

It has
The Marx Brothers—
Groucho . . . Chico
And Harpo—
Every one of them a comic genius,
And together the funniest trio
That ever played on stage or screen
In this
Or any other country.

And it was written by
Two famous comedy dramatists—
George Kaufman
And Morrie Ryskind
(George is the fellow who wrote
"Once in a Lifetime,"
"Merrily We Roll Along,"
And Morrie collaborated With George on
"Of Thee I Sing" and other hits).
This is their first joint job
Of movie writing.
Their stage successes were Laugh riots—
Imagine what they do
With the wider range
Of the screen—
And three master comics
To do their stuff.

Then Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer
Put $1,000,000 into Making this picture.
Yes, sir! One million dollars
For ninety consecutive minutes
Of entertainment.
Which,
So our Certified Public Accountant says,
Is $12,000 worth of laughs
Per minute (and that, we think,
Is an all-time high).

And lest we forget,
That new song—"Alone"
By Nacio Herb Brown
And Arthur Freed
(The tunesmiths who gave you
Five happy hit numbers in "Broadway Melody of 1936")—
And there's lots of Music and romance
For instance
Allan Jones' rendition
Of "Il Trovatore" (Watch this boy, he's A new singing star)
And watch
Kitty Carlisle—
She is something
To watch!

Anita Louise and Nino Martini, stars of Here's to Romance, are being seen everywhere together

Isabel Jewell and Ronald Colman in a pensive mood on the set of A Tale of Two Cities

Katharine Hepburn adjusts her pierrot's cap before facing the camera in Sylvia Scarlett

Sylvia Sidney weds at last—to Bennett Cerf, prominent book publisher. Following the ceremony in Phoenix, Arizona, they returned to Hollywood

By the Star Reporter

MORE than one movie-goer will be surprised when he sees Transatlantic Tunnel to note George Arliss and Walter Huston in comparatively minor rôles as the Prime Minister of England and the President of the United States, respectively. Not that such rôles are insignificant—it's just that there are a good many actors who could have taken the parts. The fact is, however, that both Arliss and Huston were so interested in the picture that they offered to do their bits for nothing.

On the other hand, Arliss balks at returning to Hollywood. He'd rather accept a smaller salary in England than be subjected to heavy taxes in this country.

DURING the Myrna Loy controversy over her salary, stories were printed to the effect that Ginger Rogers and Fred Astaire were battling their studio bosses along the same lines. While it may be true of Ginger, it certainly is not of Astaire.

RKO-Radio has Astaire under contract at less than $2,000 per week, but they have added a clause that gives him a percentage on his pictures from now on. After Follow the Fleet hits the theaters, Fred is certain to be rolling in wealth.

SHIRLEY TEMPLE'S latest achievement is the mastery of French. She has been taking a lesson a day for more than eight months, and already has a vocabulary quite ample for the needs of everyday conversation. Starting with her new picture, The Littlest Rebel, the plan is to star her in French versions of all her pictures, as Shirley is very popular in France.

BING CROSBY, when in college, had as his closest pal a chap by the name of Freddie Steele. After college, Bing chose singing for a career. His friend turned toward the prize ring. The turn of Life's wheel now finds Bing "King of the Crooners" and Freddie making a bid to become "King of Middleweights." Their friendship has never lapsed. In fact, it is so strong that Bing recently bought half interest in Steele's fight career.

MAE WEST is not a Catholic, but she has an abiding faith in that religion. Since she came to Hollywood and pictures, she has had a mass said in a little church close by her home before she starts each picture.

EVERYONE is now aware that Top Hat is such a smash hit that it should bring a grand total of more than $3,000,000 into the box office. Another interesting note is that Irving Berlin received a flat $75,000 for the songs used in the picture. Berlin wrote his first published song in 1907. It was Marie from Sunny Italy—and it wasn't so good. But, in 1911, Berlin turned out Alexander's Ragtime Band, which was the first tune written with a jazz rhythm. He has been going strong ever since.

PLENTY of film money is invested these days in side enterprises. Wallace Beery and Charles Bickford operate prosperous

Come Adventuring with "CAPTAIN BLOOD"

The buccaneers are coming!... in Warner Bros.' vivid picturization of Rafael Sabatini's immortal story of the 17th century sea rovers. After two years of preparation and, according to reliable Hollywood sources, the expenditure of a million dollars, "Captain Blood" is ready to furnish America with its big holiday screen thrill. What with great ships, 250 feet in length, crashing in combat, with more than 1000 players in rip-roaring fight scenes—with an entire town destroyed by gunfire—this drama of unrepressed hates and loves, the story of a man driven by treachery into becoming the scourge of the seas, is superb beyond any screen parallel.

THE PICTURE OF THE MONTH

And the cast is just as exciting as the production! First there's a brand-new star, handsome Errol Flynn, captured from the London stage for the title role; and lovely Olivia de Havilland who brilliantly repeats the success she scored in "A Midsummer Night's Dream". Others in a long list of famous names are Lionel Atwill, Basil Rathbone, Ross Alexander, Guy Kibbee, Henry Stephenson, Robert Barrat, and Hobart Cavanaugh, with Michael Curtiz directing for First National Pictures.

To do justice with words to the fascination of "Captain Blood" is impossible. See it! It's easily the month's grandest entertainment. And Warner Bros. deserve our thanks for so brilliantly bringing alive a great epoch and a great story!

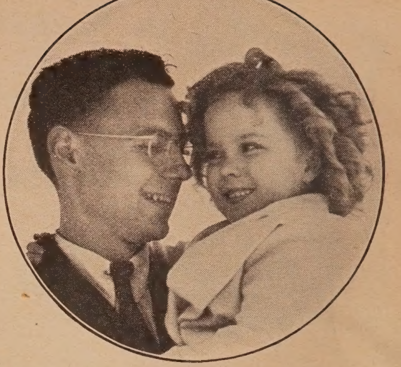
service stations. Bebe Daniels owns a gown factory and two dress shops, where she spends her spare time with great profit. Mae West owns a chowmein factory and Gary Cooper has a dude ranch.

INVARIABLY a divorce in the film colony is followed by statements from both parties to the effect that they will remain good friends. Not so, however, in the case of Joan Blondell. After she divorced her cameraman husband, George Barnes, she was asked if she and George would continue to be good friends.

"Not," snapped Joan in her usual frank manner, "if I remain in my right mind." She has been seen with him in public, however.

CECIL B. DeMILLE is readying his next super-collosal picture for Paramount. It will be a screen version of Samson and Delilah. C. B. has even decided whom he wants to play Delilah. You'd never guess, but we'll let you try. She is blonde, handsome and has what it takes. Her initials are M. W.

BILLY BEVAN, whose next screen appearance is in A Tale of Two Cities, is the only actor in Hollywood who lives more than two hundred miles from the movie capitol. Bevan headquarters on his orange and avocado ranch at Ensenada and commutes to Hollywood by plane.



Jack Temple, one of Shirley's big brothers, in a camera testimonial, showing that he is as fond of his sister as the rest of the world

LAWRENCE TIBBETT is the prince of good fellows according to every man who ever worked on one of his sets, and many are the stories told to prove his total lack of temperament. One of the most recent concerns the production of Metropolitan. It seems that Larry is woefully weak on memorizing lines and frequently "blows up." By compact with Boleslawski, the director, whenever he muffed his lines in any scene twice in succession, the company declared a recess and Tibbett took the entire crew across the street to a beer parlor and bought the drinks.

GRACE MOORE, prima donna, concert star, musical comedy star and screen star, has now added another achievement to her remarkable list. She has turned author and has sold to one of the leading general magazines a series of articles. Report has it that she received one of the largest prices ever paid by the publisher.

JEANETTE MacDONALD, in spite of the many rumors linking her name with Gene Raymond, is still deeply in love with her fiancé, Bob Ritchie. No one, watching their devotion to one another when he visited her on location at Lake Tahoe, where she was working in Rose Marie, could possibly credit the gossip which has insisted that she and Gene would be married in the near future. Ritchie, by the way, will go to England sometime this winter to head a newly organized production company.

MIRIAM HOPKINS, commonly reputed to be one of the most haughty young ladies of the screen, rates this month's orchid award for as considerate an act as Hollywood has ever witnessed.

Her picture, Splendor, was over schedule. Another production had to be started immediately and that meant that Goldwyn would have to hire a second production crew. And that meant that his regular crew, on finishing Splendor, would find themselves out of work until such time as a third picture could be launched. Goldwyn makes only a few pictures each year, and their prospects were dismal. Dismal, that is, until Miriam came to the rescue, and announced that if they were willing to work overtime, so was she.

She brought her cook and her maid to the studio, moved into a suite of dressing rooms and lived on the job,

Unusual Facts About Mutiny on the Bounty

THIS picture, starring Charles Laughton, Clark Gable and Franchot Tone, cost almost $2,000,000 to make, requiring three location trips—to Tahiti, Pitcairn's Island and Catalina.

Much of the scenery in the picture is from Pitcairn, while the action takes place in Catalina. You will see only one ship, Bounty, on the screen, but there were actually two, built identically the same. One was used during filming in Tahiti and the other at Catalina. The ship's crew is made up mainly from young athletes of colleges around Los Angeles—all of them trained for days to act like sailors.

Although Charles Laughton looks and acts the part of a sailor perfectly, he was sea-sick during the more stormy scenes. For a complete review of this great picture, see page 45.

shooting night and day. Thanks to her sacrifice, the picture was finished one day before production started on the other and the thirty-odd members of the production crew never lost a day's pay.

JACK OAKIE likes to tell about a yes-man who works on his set. He says the chap is so terrified of the big boss that whenever he has to disagree, he talks sign language and keeps his hands in his pocket!"

JOAN CRAWFORD and Franchot Tone were married within a week of the date which she set in talking to an interviewer in October, 1933. At that time, she was asked whether or not she would ever marry Franchot, and replied:

"My first marriage caused me so much heart-ache that I want to be very, very sure before marrying again. I will not marry Franchot for two years. If, by that time, we have had no quarrels or unhappiness, we will be married."

TOBY WING, it seems, objected to so much publicity about her reputed romance with Jackie Coogan, and, result, the two have pfft. At the moment, Toby is going places with Tom Brown and Jackie is escorting Betty Grable.

NORMA SHEARER was rated the best gowned woman at the lavish première of A Midsummer Night's Dream in Beverly Hills. Norma electrified the crowd when she stepped from her car, displaying a brown mink fur hood. "Ear muffs" was the classification of the crowd on the sidelines. "Imagine, ear muffs in California!"

BING CROSBY sold his home at Toluca Lake because he said his family was growing too large for the place. Al Jolson bought it, and Bing is now living in the palatial Beverly Hills home of Marion Davies. It's big enough for the Crosby twins to get lost in—and just Bing's idea of a little home in the west.

JOAN BLONDELL and Adrienne Ames attracted more attention at the première of A Midsummer Night's Dream than any other of the beautiful women present on that gala occasion. Six months ago, neither of the girls would have occupied the spotlight, but it just happens that both decided to step out with their ex-husbands.

FRANCES LANGFORD, the little cutie of radio fame, has achieved her one great ambition. She is going to play opposite Bing Crosby in a forthcoming film, and is about the happiest girl in the whole film colony.

CAROLE LOMBARD has introduced something novel in Hollywood. She has a red lacquer preparation which she uses on the toe nails of her pet dachshund. There's no copyright on the idea. You are welcome to use it on your own pup—if he'll stand for it!

WHEN the smoke of the big fire had gone away at Malibu, it was discovered that the homes of Lionel Atwill, Charles Farrell and Director Mel Brown had been destroyed. Had it not been for the valiant efforts of C. C. C. workers, the whole beach colony might have burned to the ground. In addition, the fire delayed shooting on the Rose of the Rancho set for a full day. Smoke and drifting ashes made it impossible to use the cameras.

DICK POWELL is going to lose Ruby Keeler as a leading lady, at least temporarily. Her next picture will be Stage Struck, in which she appears opposite two-fisted Jimmy Cagney.

MAE WEST has a horror of moving. Since she arrived in Hollywood she has occupied the same dressing room at Paramount and the same apartment in the fashionable Ravenswood. Recently, she learned that the Ravenswood was on the market and thought perhaps the change in ownership might cause her to move. She got around that by buying the apartment house herself.

WHEN Jackie Coogan became of age recently, he did not get $250,000 as the first installment on his million dollar trust fund as was generally believed. He continues to survive on the $200 weekly check, and not until the death of his mother will he come into cash and property valued at $1,500,000.

THE sympathy of studio workers is with Fred Astaire these days. Just as he was beginning work on Follow the Fleet, he received word that twins born to his sister, Adele, in London had died at birth. He was deeply grieved, but had no choice but to carry on with his work.

AS MUCH as Ruth Chatterton likes to fly, her plane hasn't been off the ground since she began work at Columbia studio in No More Yesterdays.

BECAUSE she needed a rest to avoid serious illness, Ann Dvorak has been replaced by Patricia Ellis in Backfire. Overwork has caused an unusual number of hospital jaunts among members of the film colony in the past month.

NEWS NOTES

Dick Powell and Joan Blondell are a new twosome. Is Joan replacing Mary Brian?

Travel: After letting her public see her on the stage of many a theater in many a South American country, Lupe Velez returned recently to Hollywood. . . . discovers the sure, safe way to reduce . . THE PERFOLASTIC GIRDLE

"IS EXERCISE EFFECTIVE?" "I'm all tired out going through dozens of strenuous exercises. I have no pep left for any fun."

"DID DIET REDUCE YOU?" "It took off the weight, but chiefly from neck and face. I look like a scarecrow and I'm so irritable."

"DRUGS TAKE OFF FAT?" "Yes, too much of it, and now I can't get it back. I feel miserable most of the time and look haggard."

Reduce YOUR WAIST AND HIPS
3 inches in 10 days . . or no cost!

WOULD YOU like to have the slender, graceful figure so admired by everyone? Of course you would! Our roving reporter found that the majority of women want to be slimmer. Yet many go about it in a way to get unpleasant, and even harmful results. Profit by the experience of 200,000 women and reduce the safe Perfolastic way! You will appear smaller immediately and then, after a few days those unwanted inches actually disappear. Remember, you lose 3 pounds in 10 days . . . or it costs you nothing!

Massage-Like Action Reduces Quickly
■ The healthful, invigorating principle of massage is the basis of Perfolastic's great success. The special Perfolastic material is so designed that it exerts a gentle massage-like action on your flesh. With every move you make, every breath you take, this massage-like action takes away those extra inches, and with the loss of burdensome fat comes added energy and pep.

No Diet . . No Drugs . . No Exercises
■ All this is accomplished without any discomfort or effort on your part. You do not have to deny yourself the good things of life. You eat what you want and take as much—or as little—exercise as you wish. Yet the extra inches disappear from waist, hips and diaphragm with a rapidity that is amazing!

Perforations Keep Your Body Cool
■ The inner surface of the special Perfolastic material is soft and delightfully silky to feel next to your body. The many perforations allow your skin to breathe and moisture to evaporate without the usual sticky-corset unpleasantness. The specially designed lace-back keeps your Perfolastic fitting perfectly as the inches disappear.

Ten Years Hence

NONE of us can prophesy how Shirley Temple will look ten years from now, but we do know that the quality which sets Shirley apart will still be there. That quality is not prettiness; it is not youth. It is a much greater thing called genius. Genius is not a thing that lives for an hour, a day, or a year. At sixteen, at thirty-six, at eighty, Shirley will still carry inside her that God-given spark which makes her different from anyone else. Shirley will never be a "type." Is anyone like Elisabeth Bergner? Is there another Charles Laughton in the world? Has anyone ever been able to fill the place of the beloved Marie Dressler? No—and that is why ten years from now our Shirley will be—Shirley! The essential personality of her will be the personality we love now, grown a little older. For genius unfolds, develops, but its central, essential being doesn't change.—Bliss Buchan, 723 Exposition Blvd., New Orleans, La.

Zanuck Tribute

SINCE I am only a fan and not a film worker, I do not know exactly what Darryl Zanuck has to do with making pictures, but I do know that a movie labeled a "Darryl Zanuck Production" always satisfies. These pictures have finesse, wit, charm, and polish. A poor actor seems to become a good actor under Mr. Zanuck's tutelage. He eliminates the weak spots in a play and builds it into a complete and pleasing whole. After having seen The Affairs of Cellini, Barretts of Wimpole Street and Les Miserables, I decided not to miss any more Darryl Zanuck pictures.—Isabell Johnston, Mindenmines, Mo.

What Hepburn Needs

ALTHOUGH frankly Katharine Hepburn cannot be accused of being a beauty, there is a soft, elusive charm about her thin, angular face that is unforgettable. A certain mobility of expression is one of her chief screen powers. An effective, easy transition from one emotion to another lends a dynamic quality to her portrayal of any rôle. Katharine Hepburn should always have a strong, dynamic character to present in her pictures. The girl or woman whose part she assumes should be vital, splendid and full of the courage of her convictions. No namby-pamby rôle becomes her. Give Hepburn a strong, dynamic part, and she will never be weighed in the balance and found wanting.—Mrs. William V. Albough, 774 Grantely St., Baltimore, Md.

This Fellow Powell

THERE are stars who entertain certain types of women. Big he-men have their appeal. Sophisticated males intrigue others. Rough, tough lovers captivate some. But Dick Powell holds them all. He has the whole of feminine America listening to him on the air, no matter if they are sixteen or sixty. It is said that Dick is forbidden to marry by his studio contract. Why? For the obvious reason that Dick Powell, single, is America's greatest heart-throb. Married, it might be a different matter. May his screen work continue for many years to come.—Martha Phelka, 12505 Gallagher Ave., Detroit, Mich.

Bouquets for Mrs. Clark

I HAVE long enjoyed the stories in SCREEN BOOK, but to my mind the article, "The Man I Married," by Mrs. Clark Gable, was one of the most interesting in many issues. Writers have pictured Clark as a super-hero, but in that story Mrs. Clark showed us a truly human, likeable man—the real Gable minus the usual adjectives.—*Schuyler C. Hill, P. O. Don't Forget Rogers

IN REPLY to the question, "Should we see Will Rogers' pictures now that he has gone?" I would answer most emphatically yes. We could not offer a greater tribute to this great humanitarian than to attend the theaters where his pictures are shown. I feel sure that he would appreciate this far more than any praise we could offer. Unless I am mistaken, it was Robert G. Ingersoll who said of his brother: "If every one for whom the deceased has performed a kind deed would cast a rose on his grave, he would sleep tonight beneath a wilderness of roses." If everyone for whom Will Rogers performed a kind deed would go to see one of his pictures, there would be the greatest assemblage of people ever recorded. —K. M. Smith, Vinton, Virginia.

Frank Observations

PLEASE accept these few observations. World's Worst Picture: Werewolf of London (instead of being stiff with fright, I'm afraid I dozed). England overwhelms the United States with the personage of one Robert Donat. Joan Crawford must do something about her locks, and it may just as well be now as later. Janet Gaynor cannot act, but for all that she has one of the sweetest smiles in Hollywood. Score one for that delightful young man, Henry Fonda, in The Farmer Takes a Wife. Handclaps to the producers of Dante's Inferno. It was an unforgettable event.—*D. M. Best Musical Comedy

THIS is my first fan letter, but I must get it off my chest. Metro's Broadway Melody of 1936 is the best musical comedy yet. It has a good love story, excellent singing, dancing and comedy. It all has sense to it. For instance, Robert Taylor and Eleanor Powell were not fighting all through the picture and then suddenly finding themselves in love with each other in the end, just in time to kiss. Eleanor Powell's tap dancing is grand—and what a smile! June Knight and Nick Long, Jr., make a wonderful dance team. Una Merkel is her own, sweet and witty self. Frances Langford can really sing, and even when her mouth is too wide open, she is pretty. Robert Taylor doesn't appear to be "acting," everything he does seems natural.—Mrs. Doyle Terrell, Norphlet, Arkansas.

A Brilliant Barrymore

IN LIONEL BARRYMORE one witnesses an actor of the old school who is equally adept in the portrayal of any rôle—a real actor in every sense of the word. Praise is useless; his achievements speak for themselves. I was one of the many who recently saw Lionel Barrymore portray the character of Peter Grimm, and it is with thoughts of this performance that I decided to write this letter. Barrymore is one star who satisfies youth and age. The niche that he has carved is a deserving and brilliant one.—Louise Choppin, 812 Maqueda Place, New Orleans, La.

Give Us More!

I'D LIKE to see more light comedies—female gender. Life is dull and dreary enough for office-working girls like me without adding to its sorry wail by seeing sob-rendering screen stuff. Why was it that It Happened One Night was such a tremendous success? Because it made us laugh. We don't want an overdose of slapstick or emotional pictures. We want to see cute Colberts and handsome Harlows cutting up—like we'd like to ourselves sometimes. It's a great "outlet" for the audience. She Married Her Boss—there's another good one, but, dear me, they are so few and far between. Will you speak to someone about it, please?—Sarah L. Sollars, Sebastopol, Calif.

Representative of many letters received is this plea for light screen comedies. Movie-goers know what they want.

Aha! Monkey business! One of Mr. Darwin's boys talks things over with Johnny Weissmuller on the set of Tarzan Escapes, Hollywood's newest jungle thriller

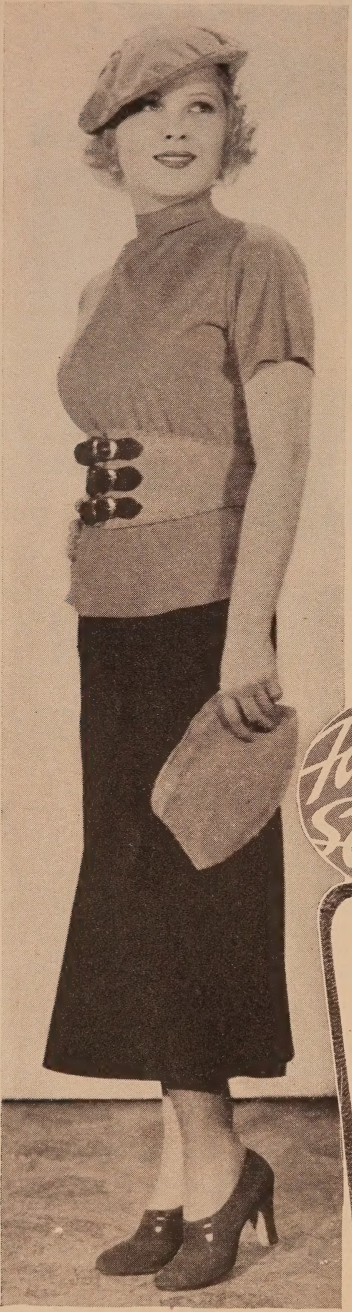
HOLLYWOOD SHOP TALK

Notes on zippy new styles for the younger generation in a style preview from one of Movieland's foremost fashion experts

By GRACE MACK



Mary Carlisle wearing her tricky new sports outfit, with its blouse of Vorelda. Notice the new polo belt which is a smart new contribution to the world of fashion

BEFORE we ring up the curtain on this month's fashion show I want to take time out to thank you girls for all those grand letters you've been writing to me. And just to show you that I appreciate them and really have your wardrobe interests at heart, each month, in addition to my regular fashion chatter, I'm going to tell you about various things I've discovered in the Hollywood shops . . . the sort of things the stars buy for their personal wardrobes and which I think you might like to add to yours.

As a starter, I'm chalking up the clever little sports outfit which I saw Mary Carlisle buying the other day. I'm choosing it for three reasons: It's smart. It's different. The price is low, and it has a definite Hollywood flavor.

The blouse is of Vorelda, a material which looks and feels enough like chamois really to be chamois. It can be had in almost any color your heart desires. Mary chose a mustard shade which is grand with her blond hair and fair skin. The blouse is tailored to resemble a turtle neck sweater and it can be worn as a tuck-in or an overblouse. Mary wears hers as an overblouse because she wanted an excuse to wear one of those new polo-type belts. The tailored skirt is of hunter's green suede. When it came to choosing a beret to go with this outfit she couldn't decide whether to get one of the chamois-like material to match the blouse or a crazy little cap with a vizor to match the skirt. I saw her peeking at the price tags and when she discovered that they were only $3.50 she took both of them. Personally, I think the visored cap is the really cute trick and I have a hunch that a lot of you girls with young ideas will be wanting one. Not only would it be fun to wear, but tilted over one eye, the way Mary wears hers, I think it could be practically guaranteed to give the object of your affections a brand new slant on you.

Incidentally this outfit can be ordered as an ensemble or you can order the cap or the belt or the blouse separately. The blouse would be smart with any kind of a tailored suit or with a tweed skirt. And I might add that when it's soiled it doesn't ask to be sent to the cleaner. All it asks is that you get a little rubber sponge from the ten cent store and sponge it off now and then.

Maureen O'Sullivan's new hunch for evening wear is cellophane hair ribbons in a color to suit her frock.

Belts are important. Try the new polo belt or one which features your initials in a huge wooden buckle.

You ought to have at least one hooded coat for winter wear.

But the thing which really sent my enthusiasm zooming was the little call-of-the-wild coat which Mary bought. The real name for it is "Parka" but it looks so much like the hooded coat which Clark Gable wore in The Call of the Wild that I tacked that name on to it. Mary says the coat is just the thing for chilly winter evenings in the open. It has a zippered-up front and two little slantwise pockets to slip your hands through. The furred hood can be worn up or down. While this coat is essentially for sports, if you ordered it in any of the pastel shades it would be festive enough to pinch hit for an evening wrap. And in an open car, with a dash of moonlight added, a coat like this ought to do wonders for you.

If you're one of those girls who go in for winter sports you'll be interested in the ski-ing oufit which Gladys Swarthout bought for herself. It consists of a closely woven turtle neck sweater in a bright Kelly green with green knitted gloves to match. The trousers are a heavy brown wool with the cuffs tucked into regulation snow shoes. The cap is of white angora. If you want to know where an outfit like this can be purchased, drop me a note and I'll send you the lowdown.

By the way, I think you are going to hear a lot about Gladys Swarthout as a fashion personality. She wears clothes with decided authority and her personal wardrobe is really something to rave about. I saw her the other day wearing a nutria swagger coat which was lined with a bright tomato-colored kasha. With this coat she wore a black street frock of very nubby crêpe. The bodice was plain and rather tight fitting and the skirt had a lot of front fullness. A tiny fez-like hat of black felt was perched atop her dark curls and a homespun scarf with fringed ends of the same shade as the lining of the coat added the right splash of color.

AND now for some clothes news from the studios. Adrian has been having the time of his life doing the clothes for The Great Ziegfeld. One costume has fifty-five dozen pheasant tails! Another has 2,000 yards of pleated chiffon! And he's indulged in some ultra-fancy costumes for Rose Marie; so much so that when the company went on location it took twenty-five trucks to carry seventy-five costumes—three costumes to a truck. Since these are costume pictures this extravagance was of course legitimate.

But—and this is news—with regard to clothes for coming pictures, clothes which are to express present day trends, Adrian is sitting with his fingers crossed.

"If the war continues," says Adrian, "it will have a definite effect upon feminine clothes. They will be more simple and less material will be used. This undoubtedly will result in shorter skirts—much shorter than we now anticipate."

IF YOU are an Idle Ida, please skip this beauty article. Its strictly for women who are too busy! It's aim is to tell them how to be beautiful with a minimum expenditure of time.

I have a feeling that I become so enthusiastic about involved beauty treatments that I forget most of my readers are in a hurry ninety per cent of the time. So I feel sure that nearly all of you will appreciate some hints on saving minutes without sacrificing beauty.

When I say that I am going to give you some beauty time-savers, please don't think that I'm being inconsistent. Don't think that I am repudiating all the columns and columns of advice I have written to the effect that the more time you spend on your appearance, the more beautiful you will be!

That still stands.

But the rule can be modified slightly to suit the hectic lives we lead. You must not neglect to tend to any one beauty task—such as brushing your hair or plucking your brows or renewing nail polish—but you can devise methods of performing these duties quickly yet thoroughly.

One of the commonest crimes against good grooming is the habit of allowing your hair to go without a shampoo when it needs one ever so badly. I'll admit that the prospect of shampooing your own hair, rinsing it thoroughly and then re-setting the wave is no joyful one, when you are tired and faced with only a brief period of freedom.

But here's where an oil shampoo comes in handy, with its lightning ways. Some of you may not be familiar with the double-quick action of these hair cleansers. They are especially processed oils, soluble in water and they require only two minutes to make your hair and scalp perfectly clean. The hair is left glossy, pliable and easy to manage and it dries in a very short time.

To expedite matters, apply a quick-drying wave-set while your hair is still damp, insert your waves and fasten these swiftly with bob pins. Then put up your ends on the new type perforated curlers that hasten drying time by several minutes. These particular curlers are easy to handle, so that you can roll up your ends in no time, as ably as a hairdresser! If you want the [Continued on page 62]

Christmas Hints from HOLLYWOOD

Janet Lynn's Last Minute Suggestions

IF YOU haven't yet finished your Christmas shopping, you'll find some suggestions on this page that will quite solve your problems. . . . For example, there's that grand Daggett & Ramsdell "Traveler Kit" (1). It contains all the essential beauty aids, tucked compactly in a washable white leather case that takes up no room at all. A bargain for $3.00.

Every woman who receives perfume for Christmas (and what woman doesn't?) should also receive an atomizer, for spraying is without question the most satisfactory method of applying scents. . . . The DeVilbiss people specialize in very efficient and beautifully designed atomizers and this season are offering one with a powder box to match (2). The set costs only $1.50.

The perfect gift—this new swivel lipstick and loose powder and rouge compact by Harriet Hubbard Ayer (3). Both come in delectable costume colors for day and evening—green, rust, brown, black, ivory, black with ivory and pale blue . . . and there's space on the compact for a monogram! The lipstick sells for $1.00 and the compact for $2.00.

Lentheric has the answer to "What shall I give 'him'?" in a travel kit of genuine black cowhide (4), containing a regular size sprinkler flacon of After-Shave Lotion, a tube of Lather Shaving Cream and After-Shave Powder. The stunningly simple ivory plastic powder container is the sort to make "him" realize that this is a man's world. Only $2.75.

Oust it Promptly with This Fourfold Treatment!

BEWARE of a cold—even a slight cold—and any cold! A cold can quickly take a serious turn.

What you want to do is treat it promptly and thoroughly. Don't be satisfied with mere palliatives. A cold, being an internal infection, calls for internal treatment. That's common sense. A cold, moreover, calls for a cold treatment and not for a cure-all.

Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine is what you want for a cold. First of all, it is expressly a cold tablet and not a preparation good for half a dozen other things as well. Secondly, it is internal medication and does four important things.

Fourfold Effect

First, it opens the bowels. Second, it checks the infection in the system. Third, it relieves the headache and fever. Fourth, it tones the system and helps fortify against further attack.

All drug stores sell Grove's Bromo Quinine—and the few pennies' cost may save you a lot in worry, suspense and expense. Ask firmly for Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine and accept no substitute.

Will Marriage Help JOAN CRAWFORD?

By Jay Brien Chapman

IT ISN'T that marriage as an institution is essential in Joan Crawford's life; a protective charm against the danger she faces today.

Rather, it is specifically her marriage to Franchot Tone, at this particular period of her life, which should help Joan safely past a crisis graver than most people, even those closest to the star, realize.

Joan has never explained herself more revealingly than in these words: "The fullest, richest experience for a woman is a career. You hear about sacrifices for fame. You hear about giving up the things that belong to a woman. But it's all nonsense; old-fashioned. There is nothing greater than having each day filled to the brim; nothing more stimulating."

Hearing those words, or reading them, you feel that the most dangerous thing which could threaten Joan would be a threat to her career; the greatest disaster which could befall her, a termination of her day in the busy, happy, all-absorbing limelight. Her fear of losing it all rings out in this remark: "I have watched women in other walks of life. . . . They take on weight, grow lethargic. Lines creep into their faces, and their cheeks become flabby."

Yet there is something more vital to Joan's continued happiness, to her very existence. Self-improvement! The aspiration to become better than she is at the moment. The need to set a goal ahead, a goal that is not necessarily advancement of career.

I learned this secret some years ago, when Joan was going to marry my friend, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr. Learned that to Joan, even when she was a little scullery maid working her way through boarding school—or when she was clerking in a department store, or hoofing in a chorus—aspiration was her life's whole motif. When it temporarily failed her, at various stages of her progress (that is, when she had reached some goal and had not as yet seen her next, or realized that any lay beyond) she would despair even to the point of contemplating suicide!

Behind the Scenes with FRED ASTAIRE

By Grace Mack

IT WAS one of those mornings that Californians refer to as "unusual." In other words, it was raining. Traffic on Melrose Avenue was moving slowly and as a line of cars drew up at a stop signal, wind-shield wipers moved in unison. Just one wind-shield wiper was out of step. Instead of clicking back and forth with monotonous precision it was doing strange, staccato things. Its unorthodox behavior attracted the attention of the man who was driving the sedan that was next in line.

"What the devil's wrong with that guy's wind-shield wiper," he remarked to the girl who was with him. "Look at it. The crazy thing acts like it's doing a tap dance."

"Maybe it's trying to imitate Fred Astaire," said the girl.

"Yes, you would think of that."

The green light flashed on and the line of cars moved forward. Suddenly the girl in the sedan grabbed her companion's arm.

"Say—that was Fred Astaire!" she exclaimed excitedly. "He was driving that roadster."

The girl was right. And had she but known it she had glimpsed Astaire in the throes of creating a new dance step. For while driving to the studio in the rain he had discovered that he could make the wind-shield wiper do tricky things to the music of the motor and while watching it he got an idea for a new step.

A FEW moments later the telephone on Mark Sandrich's desk was ringing violently. Sandrich, you know, is that clever young director who did The Gay Divorcée and Top Hat and who will direct the new Astaire picture, Follow the Fleet.

"Hello, Mark. This is Fred. Have you got a minute to spare? I want to show you Fransten."

"Okay, Freddie. Come on over."

Had Sandrich been less acquainted with Astaire he might have expected him to arrive at his office with a little blonde in tow. But knowing Freddie he suspected that "Fransten" was merely the name for some new step for Astaire always gives names to the various steps

It took Fred hours to work out his clever "machine gun" number he works out. Sometimes it's "Enchillada!" Sometimes it's "Old Dutch Hop." Or it might even be a strange moniker like "Crovnee."

In less time than it takes to write it Sandrich was giving "Fransten" the once-over.

"How do you like it?" Astaire asked when he had finished the dance.

"I think it's great, Freddie," said Sandrich enthusiastically.

"It's sort of funny the way it came to me," Astaire explained in that half-embarrassed manner which so characterizes his work on the screen. "I was driving down to the studio in the rain and I got to fooling with the windshield wiper, making it do 'brakes,' and suddenly I had an idea—"

Sandrich smiled knowingly, for he was well aware that Freddie's inspirations for dance steps are often the result of some perfectly incongruous happening. And they are jotted down wherever he happens to be. The tablecloths at the RKO commissary are frequently littered with strange hieroglyphics which, when translated, spell a new dance by Astaire. There is never any telling how long it may take to create a dance. Sometimes the steps come quickly, born on the wings of inspiration. Again, he may worry for days before he finds the right step to fit a certain bar in music. You see his system is first to plot out the general pattern for the dance. He then maps out diagrams of the intricate path his feet are to travel. These diagrams are split up into "sequences" and fitted in, piece by piece. Sometimes the steps and the music refuse to synchronize. During the making of Top Hat, the finish routine for the Piccolino number proved very elusive.

"Don't worry, Mark," Astaire assured the director. "I'll get it." And he did. Some perfectly incongruous thing gave him the inspiration.

Consequently, Sandrich was not at all surprised to learn that a wind-shield wiper had been [Continued on page 50]

Introducing a star who is destined to become one of Hollywood's greatest

MARTINI In Person

By Woody Sutton

IN OLD Italy, at the legendary tomb of Romeo and Juliet, guarded by his father, whose job was that of custodian, Nino Martini discovered that he had a voice. As a young lad, smarting under a verdict from his elders that he didn't have a voice and would never be able to sing, Nino practiced secretly in the quiet garden surrounding the final resting place of fiction's greatest lovers.

Perhaps it was here, too, in some mysterious, supernatural way, that he absorbed the romantic nature that is so much a part of his personality, for not in recent years has there been an actor who so completely dominated the hearts of his audience. The huge stack of fan mail Nino Martini receives daily consists largely of passionate notes and proposals from women, old and young.

In person, this amazing young man from Verona, in the north of Italy, is even more imposing than on the screen. He has the build of an athlete, a profile and classic features that stamp him unmistakably as a descendant of the Romans. For a man so blessed with talent and perfection of face and figure, he is astonishingly lacking in conceit.

"I am surprised," Nino admits, "that the people give me such a wonderful reception in Here's to Romance. When I came first to Hollywood in 1931, I appeared only in small parts. The people weren't ready for songs in the movies, but now it is wonderful!"

Martini has never done anything but sing, yet at twenty-nine he looks like a college football hero. It is singing, he claims, that has given him a splendid physique.

"You see," he explains, choosing unfamiliar English words carefully, "when I sing I use almost every muscle in my body, from my legs to the tips of my fingers. Singing is very strenuous—don't laugh—it is. But I like to swim, too, and riding is my favorite sport."

DESPITE Martini's love for sports and social life, he is forced to discipline himself strictly. No late hours, no cigarettes, no liquor. "In Hollywood," Nino confesses sadly, "I have to turn down parties—and work!—imagine, getting to the studio at seven-thirty every morning. And to sing in the morning—it is the first time I do that!"

It is odd that, despite little experience in pictures, Nino experienced no difficulty with his lines, and in fact had but a single re-take in Here's to Romance.

He tells an interesting, touching anecdote about Madame Schumann-Heink, of whom he is very fond. This seventy-four-year-old mother of a million soldier boys, trained for years in stage technique, had a great deal of difficulty with her scenes during the early part of the picture. In one sequence, she was to pull her hat down over one eye and scold Nino affectionately. But the grand old lady couldn't quite master her lines. On the fifteenth try, she broke down.

"I'll never do it," she sighed, tears rolling down her handsome face. "Send me away—tear up my contract." Nino and his manager rushed to her side with encouragement. They pointed out that this was almost the same as her début as a young girl. She was nervous then; she was now. But she could do it—Schumann-Heink never quit. With that, she pulled herself together and made one last try. The scene was perfect, and, if you will remember, one of the best in the picture.

Nino Martini has a host of friends in Hollywood, but none better than Regis Toomey. When Nino made his first rather inconspicuous stab at pictures back [Continued on page 58]

Hollywood's THREE AMAZING WOMEN

"Ginger Rogers became the sensation of New York while still only in her 'teens," says Jim Tully of Ginger's stage experience, "just as she is now the sensation of the screen"

By JIM TULLY

TO SELECT the three most interesting women in Hollywood when there are so many is difficult. Likewise, it is an engaging task.

One could hardly leave Ginger Rogers out of the number. The daughter of a gifted mother, the story of her life might have been invented by a master weaver of tales; and it is likely that even as a work of fiction, there would be those in the world who would say that "it just couldn't happen." The only answer is—it did happen—in real life.

Ginger, in Top Hat with Fred Astaire, is one of the most sensational successes of the year. She learned to dance in a Texas barn, and was first taught by an old vaudeville trouper, long retired from the road. But that is miles ahead of the story. Ginger is gay and nonchalant on the surface—but she knows what it is to have lived—and such people are never without interest.

GINGER'S mother was alone in the world. Ginger would be born in six months. Mrs. Rogers, young and beautiful, went to a town in Missouri, secured work on a newspaper, and began the building of her life over again. She found friends everywhere in Independence.

Ginger was born. Her mother was becoming known as a newspaper woman in her vicinity, when the threat of kidnaping crossed her path. To avoid the possible giving up of her beloved child, Mrs. Rogers burned all her bridges, and went to Dallas, Texas. She had plenty of initiative and ingenuity. Well able and willing to help herself, she found others willing to help her. She secured work in a hotel as a public stenographer. The young mother often worked while little Ginger played in the lobby.

To Mrs. Rogers' consternation one day, she could not find the child. The indomitable young mother hired an automobile and went in search of Ginger. After unbelievable hardships, she found the youngster with its father several hundred miles away. Watching until her husband left for work, one morning, she went to the house, took the child from the giant colored woman in charge by calmly showing a small revolver, and then went into hiding with her baby. Later, when the danger had blown over, she returned to Dallas. Her hotel position was still open. She remained there several months until given a position as reporter on a newspaper. In time she became the dramatic critic,

Are MOVIE WIVES

What would you think if your husband spent hours making love to such famous beauties as Joan Crawford, Marlene Dietrich and Jean Harlow? Read what Hollywood's movie wives have to say

THE toughest job in Hollywood is that of being a movie star's wife.

Elinor Glyn once authored the theory that all actors should be single men. Producers would doubtless be glad if this could be made a rule, for they are canny enough to realize that the success of a leading man or male star depends to a large extent upon his appeal to women. When a star has that magic something which causes women in the audience to think of him as a potential lover he is sure to be tops at the box office. And while this may be very ducky from the producer's point of view, how about the woman who is the star's wife? How does she feel about it?

Well, how would YOU feel? How would you like to have thousands of women writing ardent love letters to your husband, giving intimate descriptions of their charms, even sending locks of their hair. How would you like to have some girl try night after night to get your husband on the telephone and upon discovering she is talking to his wife, slam the receiver?

And how would you feel when you went to parties or to night clubs to have the eyes of numerous women focused on him; eyes which hold promises to be fulfilled for the asking; eyes which look you—the wife—over curiously and then say as plainly as though the thought were put into words: "Well, I don't know what he sees in you!" And you wives who worry just a little bit about your husband's attractive secretary or the girls he meets in his office, how would you feel if you knew that many of his working hours were spent making torrid love to such glamorous and fascinating women as Jean Harlow or Joan Crawford or Marlene Dietrich? Would YOU be able to keep the green-eyed monster at bay?

THE wives of the men whose pictures you see on these pages can. And what they have to say on the subject, their attitude toward the "competition" business, should be of interest to every woman who reads this story.

"Mutual trust is an essential ingredient for a happy marriage," says Mrs. Warren William. "And the woman who is married to a movie star needs to have just a little more faith and confidence in her man than does the average wife, for there's no denying that a movie star, particularly if he happens to be attractive, encounters more opportunities for amorous detours in a week or a month than would come to the average husband in a life-time.

"Every woman knows that some men are more susceptible to women's charms than others. The wise one, I believe, is the woman who takes the trouble to learn something of her man's character before she marries him. If he's the sort of person she is afraid to trust out of her sight, then her marriage is doomed to disaster from the start.

"I knew Warren for several years before I married him. He had been very successful on the stage and naturally had plenty of opportunities to meet glamorous and fascinating women. The fact that he asked me to be his wife naturally convinced me that he preferred me to the others. And that is the attitude I have taken throughout our marriage. I believe that is the attitude that every woman should take. When a man asks a woman to marry him, it is usually because she is the answer to an ideal that he has in his heart. So long as she continues to measure up to that ideal, so long will she hold his love. Many girls put their best foot forward during the days of courtship and then forget to keep on doing it, once the ceremony is over. One day they wake up to the fact that their husbands have become interested in somebody else. It never occurs to them that perhaps it is their own fault. I believe that wives should be just as clever at being wives as mistresses are at being mistresses."

WOMEN from all over the world write letters to Mrs. Clark Gable, expressing their envy of her. "It must be heaven to be married to a man like Clark," they write. And yet I wonder how many of these women would have her understanding, her poise, her gallant attitude? [Continued on page 65]

The Girl the Movies WANT

An exclusive interview with Adolph Zukor, Chairman of the Board of Directors of Paramount Pictures, Inc.

By Carol Craig

THAT new girl you saw on the screen last night—how much older (or younger) than you was she? Did she have any more to start a career with than you have—if you only knew what to do about your potentialities? How did she get her screen chance? How did she attract a talent scout's attention?

If you have ever been dazzled by the glamor of the dramatic world, if you have ever burned with the slightest spark of acting fever, you have asked yourself questions like these countless times. But what are the answers? Today's answers?

I took your questions, my questions, our questions to one of the most important men in the entire movie industry . . . a man whose answers would not be guesses, but the gleanings of years of star-building . . . a man who has been producing pictures for almost a quarter of a century and who today is a leader of one of filmdom's largest companies, with the whole world for an audience. Namely, Adolph Zukor, founder of Paramount Pictures.

Short, gray-haired, with a quick step and keen, alert eyes, Mr. Zukor is a busy man—too busy, you might think, to answer a hundred and one questions about the movies' sources of talent today. But he took the time to answer every question, to let you in on the secrets of how to go about winning a screen chance.

Too many girls spoil possible screen chances by heading in wrong directions; too many girls who have nothing to offer the screen discover the tragic truth too late; too many girls who have great possibilities are never discovered, because they do not sense those possibilities themselves. To help them all, to clear the air of false illusions about this search for fame, to tell all that any girl needs to know about discovering her own potentialities, Mr. Zukor answered every question.

HOW many candidates for fame are considered in a year by a large studio like Paramount?

"Sometimes we look for a year without finding any who have the stuff of stardom," said Mr. Zukor. "Then, again, picking them is as easy as picking peaches. I'd say that, in a period of a year, we sign about thirty new players, who become members of our studio stock company and are given chances to prove themselves. Thirty altogether—both men and women. They are not always star material, but that does not always make us hang our heads. The person who may not be a sensation, but is a good, dependable player, capable of a variety of rôles, can be a godsend to casting directors.

"Twenty of the thirty are women," he adds significantly. "Why? We are not looking for women more than for men. But men have countless other fields to interest them. Women don't.

WHY Loretta Young is FORCED to RETIRE!

By Sonia Lee

The first true story of strange circumstances that have driven Loretta Young from the screen for a long rest

LORETTA YOUNG has paid the greatest price for Fame of any star in Hollywood!

At twenty-two she is temporarily exiled from the screen because her sensitive body could no longer endure the gruelling strain she imposed on it in her climb to stardom!

Since last June she has sought health in travel and in changing scenes. But her return to Hollywood saw her in nowise improved, and physicians now declare that she must not go before the cameras again for months. At the moment she is wisely heeding their advice to avoid a serious operation which would result in long months of inactivity.

Her scheduled start in Ramona, the 20th Century-Fox production, has been postponed until spring. She is making no future plans, no effort of any sort, until she is completely recovered. She was not even permitted to attend the marriage of her sister, Sally Blane, to Norman Foster.

Loretta has been ill for many months! But she steadfastly refused to admit to herself the imperative need of rest until she had finished The Crusades. And then, sitting on the terrace of her Westwood home—in the brief interlude of leisure before her Wanger picture Shanghai began, she said:

"I have never been so desperately tired in all my life. It's been a difficult year because I felt the time for slow growth was past. In these last months I wanted to achieve something important. I've been in pictures since I was thirteen. I've built slowly. There was no overnight fame for me. I've had nine hard-working years in front of a camera. And now was the time for satisfying achievement—for important achievement—if my dreams for myself were to be fulfilled. So I've worked—constantly.

In 1935, Loretta Young hit a high point in her career. Above photos show her with Clark Gable in Call of the Wild and with Henry Wilcoxon in The Crusades. On the eve of great triumphs in 1936, she has been forced to quit!

"I wish I could put on some weight. I'd feel better I know. But I can't gain an ounce—even though I eat loads—and go promptly to bed the moment I get home from the studio.

"I've never really recovered from my appendicitis operation. I started work too soon—and worked too hard—and I am just now realizing it!"

In the past year Loretta's dominating impulse has been to progress in her career.

After White Parade there was Clive of India, with Ronald Colman. Call of the Wild, with Clark Gable, followed. And this picture taxed her energies to the extreme. She suffered exposure and discomfort: bitter winds and stinging snows veritably flayed her body. By the

GENE RAYMOND —a Baffling Personality

Discovering a host of facts about the star who refuses to talk about himself

By Harry Lang

NOW, let's get Gene Raymond straight. It seems that every time you pick up a newspaper movie gossip column, you read about Gene being out at this late-spot or that night club with some new Hollywood charmer. And so you're naturally likely to get the idea, superficially, that Gene Raymond is but a high stepping Hollywoodsman on the prowl for new femmes. But there's nothing further from the truth than that!

I'm going to prove it to you by telling you, here, a lot of things about Gene that I'll bet most of you never knew before—what he is, what he thinks, what he does, what he likes—and also what he does not do, think, like! I had to do some digging to find these things out—because I could never have obtained them from Gene Raymond himself. You might as well expect the Sphinx to start babbling about the price of eggs as to expect Gene Raymond to talk about Gene Raymond!

AND so, to get a real picture of the man, I went not to Gene himself, but to his friends, his intimates, people who've known him for years. "Tell me," I begged them, "what sort of fellow Gene Raymond really is." They did.

In the first place, let's dispose of this talk about Gene as Hollywood's No. 1 Ladies' Man. The fact is that Gene Raymond goes out with girls less than most other eligible Hollywood bachelors. He goes out only between pictures. While on a production, Gene is almost a recluse. Night clubs don't see him; Hollywood's charmers have to get along without him. He's home—working, studying.

And here's an inside tip as to the sort of man he is when he does go out with a girl. A woman who knows him well (and has a grown daughter) says:

"GENE is one of the very few men in Hollywood with whom I'd like my daughter to go to the theaters, the night clubs, the cafés. He is one of the very few men I know, of his age, who has the rare capacity for sincere friendship with girls."

However, let's get to the man himself. First of all, we discover that he's one of the best all-around athletes in Hollywood. Between pictures, believe it or not, he spends about half his waking time developing his physique.

I'd noticed that Gene always seemed to pep up a party when he appeared. It remained for a friend to explain to me:

"When Gene comes into a group of people he radiates a sense of utter fitness, of mental and physical cleanliness and well-being. He gives a lift to any party merely by the sheer force of his splendid example."

And here's Gene's amazing sports lineup! He rides like a centaur! Yes, yes; I know a centaur is half horse, half man. But that's just about what it's like

Shall We Marry

Young lovers nowadays are faced by this important question. Read how the wealthiest stars in Hollywood today were wed while they were broke, and of the struggles that brought money without the loss of romance

HOW much should a young fellow have, in cold cash, in order to marry the girl he loves?

"Just how little do we dare start on?" is being asked by millions of young couples who stand on the brink of matrimony, mortally afraid to plunge.

"It's when prosperity pulls up an easy chair that you have to worry about love being crowded out into the cold," warn Jimmy Cagney, Eddie Cantor, Warner Baxter, Buck Jones, John Boles, George Burns, Joe E. Brown and a half dozen other film luminaries who have managed to pilot their marital skiffs safely over the great barrier reefs of Hollywood—and who give full credit to the fact that they married without a dime.

Every one of them has started from scratch, and when they mention tightening the old belt instead of eating, sitting up all their wedding eve in a railroad station because they could not afford hotel rooms, maintaining a family in one room and honeymooning in a stable—they're talking from experience.

"Why fear the wolf?" demands Warner Baxter. "It takes a common enemy to strengthen the ties between man and wife, and I don't know of any better threat than the much abused wolf. Because it's remarkable how precious your loved ones become when you hear him sniffing at your door.

"The more a married couple struggle through together, the closer they hold to each other. I think the strongest ties man and wife can have are the memories of the battles they fought side by side, and that a tough start is the best insurance for a happy future."

But can a motion picture star of the earning capacity of Warner Baxter know anything about such matters? Perhaps, for he was living in an attic room, and hadn't eaten for two days, when he first met the girl he married.

DOES Jimmy Cagney know what he is talking about when he suggests doing your marrying first and your worrying afterwards? Well, Jimmy was sharing a breakfast of one doughnut and one cup of coffee with Allen Jenkins when he pointed out the girl he was going to marry.

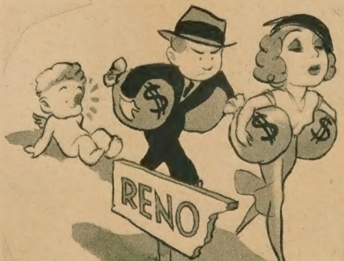
Apparently Jimmy was trying to prove two could eat as lightly as one—and in the lean days that followed his marriage he and his game little wife divided more than one skimpy meal.

And yet, when asked how much money a young fellow should have to risk marriage, Cagney replied: "It isn't money he needs, it's nerve. A real love for the girl, spunk and the determination to go the limit to make her happy—those are the assets he really needs.

"The happiest days I've ever known are those when Bill (that's what he calls his wife) and I were struggling along together in Greenwich Village, trying to scare up a snack for the gang that would drop in on us after the show."

(Cagney and his wife were in the chorus together—and later were "hoofers" in vaudeville.)

Another star who claims starting from scratch is the only sensible start is Eddie Cantor. Eddie says that being up against it and realizing a wonderful woman was absolutely dependent upon him was the thing that made him, and to what he owes his later amazing success.



Cupid usually gets a black eye when actors and actresses marry with the handicap of too much money without MONEY?

By William F. French

But what does Cantor, who's worth a million, know about being really hard up? Suppose he was making a miserable wage, had a wife to support and no friends to help him—could he take it?

It took Eddie six years to scrape up enough money to throw the party which convinced the unenthusiastic "Papa" Tobias that spindle-shanked Izzy Iskowitz (that was Eddie's name then) could support his daughter, Ida.

Eddie told the family he was managing a swanky restaurant, while, instead, he had a job as a singing waiter in the Coney Island cafe where Jimmy Durante banged the piano.

After the marriage, he took his wife to live in a room in his sister-in-law's apartment in the Bronx, where two children were born to them.

During the three years they spent in that single room, while Eddie was struggling to convince someone he was an entertainer, he took it plenty.

"Then came success," explains this great comedian—"a success I wouldn't ever have known if it hadn't been for my marriage—and the responsibilities it brought. And how glad I am I didn't wait for that success before marrying."

The only time Gracie Allen and George Burns seem really serious is when they are talking about their marriage, and urging someone else to go and do likewise.

Like everything else, it was a last minute affair, with no one, not even the principals, having the slightest suspicion it was going to happen a week before the auspicious event.

Coming into Cleveland from a little burgh in the sticks where they were breaking in a new act, they had to sit up all the eve of their wedding day, because they hadn't money enough to get two rooms in a hotel.

"We could afford one room, after we were married, but we couldn't afford two, and as friends were coming in to see us married the next day we had to spend the night in the railroad station waiting room."

That's the way George Burns explains it, between gathering in salary and royalty checks and urging young couples to take the bit in their teeth.

This is another successful marriage that is defying the breakers of Hollywood, because, Gracie explains, it was built on the good old rocky foundation of tough sledding.

MARRIAGES that have started from scratch have out-lived all others in the picture colony.

"That," according to Joe E. Brown, "is because when a man and wife start in life with their immediate financial problem solved, they usually manage to develop individual problems and notions to take its place, and these often have a tendency to split their interests and force them apart.

"Tramping the streets for work and then turning to a game little wife for encouragement and sympathy does something to a man he never forgets. More character is built and greater love is developed in a one room apartment than in a penthouse or movie estate. Because the more you share and struggle together, the closer you hold to each other."

Of course Joe E. Brown was more or less of a plutocrat when he got married, twenty years ago. After sending the girl he was to marry railroad fare to New York, Joe had almost ten dollars left. Enough for the wedding, and a nice subway honeymoon back to the theater where he was working.

Of course Joe lost his job immediately after his marriage, and has vivid recollections of the days when he shared a five-cent dish of applesauce with his wife in a little bakery on Eighth Avenue, while she encouraged him in his hunt for vaudeville bookings.

The MAN Who Tames MAE WEST

Mae West has never had a leading man like Vic McLaglen. He never pulls his punches in a fight scene, and his dramatic moments with Mae are the talk of the town

Amazing lowdown about the mighty Vic McLaglen, the man who does Mae wrong in Klondike Lou

By Lew Garvey

VICTOR McLAGLEN, the towering Titan of the films, is Public Candidate No. 1 for the Motion Picture Academy award for the best performance of 1935.

His astounding portrayal of Gypo Nolan, the pathetic Dublin rogue in The Informer, lifted Vic from the status of good actor to great actor in one dramatic sweep.

You will see him soon opposite Mae West in Klondike Lou. He is the perfect leading man for Mae, for, besides taming her in the picture, he will do his share of dominating the plot. Most of Mae's films have been all West and little of anything else, which hasn't helped. With Vic around, Mae will have just the competition she needs to make her picture a wow.

Now his screen services are eagerly sought at tremendously increased prices. 20th Century-Fox is paying him $100,000 a picture. A few months ago his top price was one-fourth this amount. And as Vic soars to a greater glory that leaves him a bit bewildered, Edmund Lowe, his debonair pal of many a boisterous comedy, remains behind and strictly on his own. The team of McLaglen and Lowe has dissolved. Captain Flagg marches on at the head of the big cinema parade. Sergeant Quirt is much farther back in the ranks.

Vic is modest about his new honors. But he can't resist a playful dig at his smart-alec pal of What Price Glory, Cock-Eyed World and other McLaglen-Lowe classics. "I carried that mug, Lowe, along for years," says Vic, with a sly wink. "I was the real actor. All he had was a lot of crust."

When informed of this crack, the dapper Mr. Lowe retorted: "I'm glad to see Vic get a break. He was good in The Informer because I wasn't there to take the picture away from him."

Deep in his heart, Vic regrets the skyrocketing that has cracked up the old McLaglen-Lowe combination. Despite their natural tendency to rib each other, Vic and Eddie are loyal friends. Nothing would delight Vic more than to see Eddie come through with one of the hit pictures of the year. And he feels that Eddie will if he gets the opportunity.

Few actors have worked harder to achieve success than Vic McLaglen. One of the handicaps he has fought against is the difficulty in remembering lines. He has a vivid memory for faces, dates and events. But memorizing script lines has always been a torture. John Ford, who directed The Informer, capitalized on this weakness in an odd manner. The rôle of Gypo Nolan was that of a huge hulk of an Irishman, a slow thinker, and halting in speech. So Ford refrained from giving Vic his lines until just before the camera and sound picked him up. The result was a stammering, uncertain delivery of speeches which made the characterization a screen triumph in realism.

Hollywood knows comparatively

DICK POWELL SPEAKS FOR HIMSELF

IF EVER your Inquiring Reporter doubted the popularity of Dick Powell, banished is that doubt forever. Your queries have poured in on my desk during this past month like flakes of snow in an Alaskan blizzard.

Dick took one look at the imposing stacks of question blanks and suggested that we adjourn the inquisition to the back yard of his new home. And there, with a glass of ice-cold lemonade (?) to fortify him, he clambored upon our monthly witness stand and pronounced himself ready. And here are his answers:

What are your plans for the future? Are you studying for an operatic career?

No, I am not studying specifically for opera. I study constantly, but merely in the hope of improving my voice.

Do you prefer pictures to radio and stage?

I don't think so. It would be ideal if one could combine all three.

Have you any pet aversion?

Yes—a drunken woman.

What are your favorite songs—popular and classical?

My favorite popular songs are I'll String Along With You and I Only Have Eyes For You. My favorite semi-classical song is Danny Boy, and my favorite classic is The Dream, from Manon.

Are you in love?

I'm thirty years old—and human—you figure it out!

How can I obtain an autographed picture of you?

By addressing your request to me in care of Warner Bros.-First National Studio, Burbank, Calif.

What is your middle name?

Ewing.

What is your birthdate?

I was born November 14, 1905.

Do you plan a personal appearance tour in the near future, and if so do you plan to visit Boston?

At the moment I have no plans for a personal appearance tour. I tried to arrange one about a month ago but the studio would not permit my absence. Whenever I do go on tour, I shall certainly visit Boston.

Dick Powell's favorite pet is a police dog called Ranger. He also owns a greyhound and a cat, oddly named G-String. He says he has to have a lot of company to keep from being lonesome in his new twelve-room house

What is the ring you always wear? Is it a gift—from whom?

It is a small diamond, given to me by an old friend.

Is it true that you have been married and are now divorced? Who was your wife—when were you married?

Yes, I married Mildred Maund in May, 1925, and we were divorced several years ago.

From whom did you receive your musical training?

I took voice lessons from the choir masters in Little Rock, (Ark.) when I was singing there in church choirs.

Are you related to Eleanor Powell—to Bill Powell?

No, although there have been reports that Eleanor is my wife and that Bill is my son!

I have decided on a singing career. How would you suggest I get a start?

The only advice I can give you is to sing—sing at every possible opportunity.

Who is your leading lady in real life?

The girl with whom I happen to have a date.

Have you any picture assignments after Thanks a Million?

Tentative plans indicate that I will be cast opposite Marion Davies in a picture titled, Glorious.

Do you like dancing?

Yes—but Ruby Keeler says I should stick to singing!

Can I get your autograph if I send a page from my album?

Most certainly.

What type of girl do you prefer?

The normal American girl with a fair amount of every feminine quality.

Who are your favorite radio stars? What is your favorite radio program?

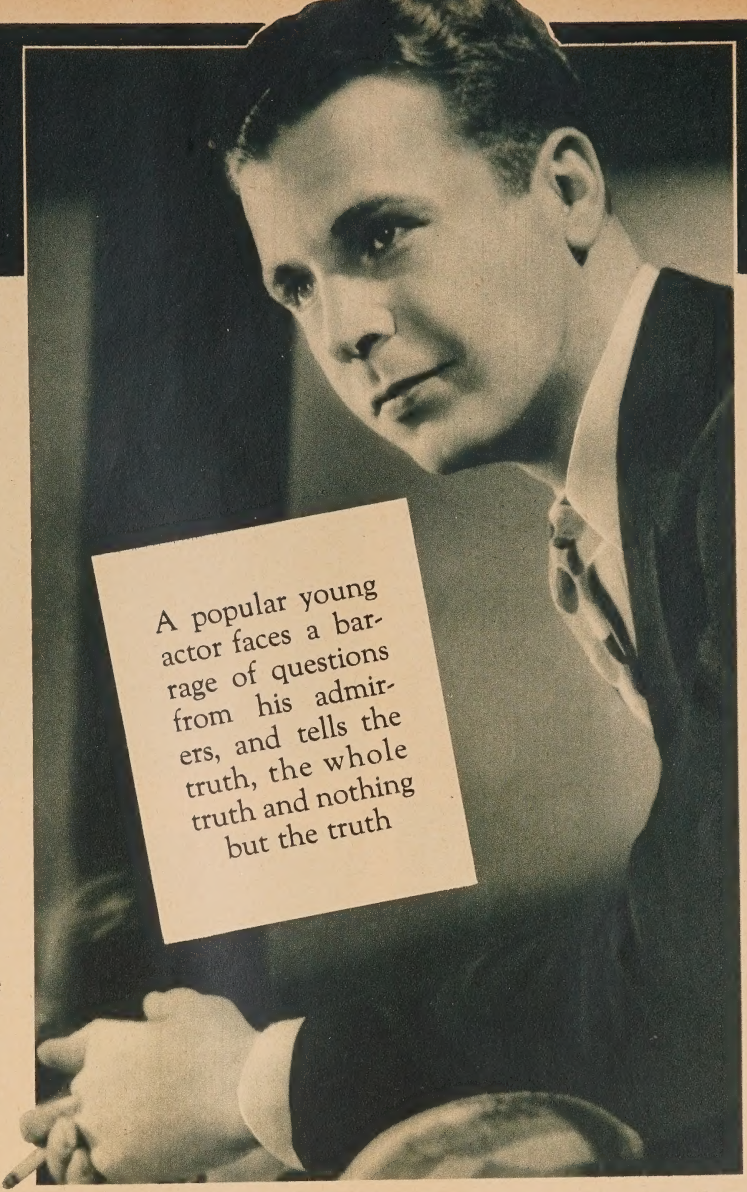
Fred Allen, Bing Crosby and Jack Benny are my favorite radio stars, and my favorite program is "Hollywood Hotel." (I also like three square meals a day!)

What nationalities were your ancestors?

English.

Is it true that you are not to work with Ruby Keeler any more?

By
The Inquiring Reporter



A popular young actor faces a barrage of questions from his admirers, and tells the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth

Not to my knowledge, although, of course, the casting of pictures is decided by the studio's executives.

How did you get your start in the movies and in what year?

I was working in a Warner Brothers theater as master of ceremonies in 1932. The studio offered me a chance in Blessed Event.

What is your height and weight?

I am six feet tall and weigh 172 pounds.

Do you intend to marry?

Certainly, I intend to marry and raise a family like any other normal man.

Have you any sisters and brothers? How old are they?

I have two brothers, one thirty-five and the other, twenty-eight.

What was your mother's maiden name?

Sally Thompson.

Which of the songs you have introduced from the screen do you consider the best?

I'll String Along With You* from 20 Million Sweethearts, and Shadow Waltz from Gold Diggers of 1933.

I think Mary Brian is grand. Don't you?

I certainly do—but are you asking me or telling me?

Do you prefer musical, or dramatic rôles?

A little of each, please. I hope some day to have a chance in a picture in which I will not sing a single song.

What make of car do you drive?

A Packard roadster.

What is your hobby?

Where can I write to you?

In care of Warner Bros.—First National Studio, Burbank, Calif.

Do you really appreciate your fans and fan mail?

You can believe that I do. Fan mail is my only contact with the people who see my pictures and on whose approval or disapproval my whole career rests. Their friendship is of tremendous importance to me, and so are their criticisms.

Where, if possible, can I get a picture of your new home or a photograph of you in a Naval Academy uniform?

You can obtain such photographs from the nearest Warner Bros. film exchange.

Have you made any phonograph records?

Yes, I have made several for Brunswick.

Have your parents ever visited you in California?

Yes.

I have a scrapbook of your pictures and stories. All I need is an autograph. Will you send it to me?

Yes, if you will send me a page from your album, I'll autograph it and return it to you.

In what film do you feel you did your best work?

In Thanks a Million.

Did you ever work in Indianapolis?

Yes, I worked there in 1927, '28 and '29, and played in most of the big theaters, first with the Charlie Davis orchestra and later as master of ceremonies. [Continued on page 71]

Lawrence Tibbett returns to movies at his mightiest, thrilling best

EVERY movie-goer who sees Lawrence Tibbett in Metropolitan will feel that he has been cheated during the great singer's two year absence from the screen. Tibbett is superb and he sings both classical and popular numbers, among them being On the Road to Mandalay, De Glory Road and the Toreador song from Carmen. The plot has Alice Brady as an ambitious operatic misfit who finances her own opera company with Tibbett as the star. At the last minute, she leaves Tibbett to carry on alone, which he does in triumph. Virginia Bruce, as the wealthy girl who has ambitions to become a singer, is particularly outstanding in love scenes with Tibbett, and sings beautifully. Cesar Romero is a happy choice as the rich, unsuccessful suitor. Unlike most musical productions, Metropolitan offers a story that can stand alone. Adding the voice of Tibbett, which has no equal, the sum total is perfect entertainment.—Produced by Twentieth Century-Fox.

John Boles in a love scene with Gladys Swarthout, sensational new star, in Rose of the Rancho

$1,000 A MINUTE

THIS picture is proof that a highly improbable plot may provide perfect entertainment, providing the action is like lightning and the cast filled with comedians who provide laughs on every foot of film. The story concerns Roger Pryor in the rôle of an out-of-work newspaper man who on the night he loses his girl becomes a pawn in a bet on whether or not a man can spend $1,000 a minute for twelve hours. He is accompanied by a body guard (Ed Brophy), who goes along to see that the money is thrown away according to the rules. There isn't an idle moment in the film. Leila Hyams is particularly appealing as the bewildered sweetheart, with the comedy work in the capable hands of Edgar Kennedy, Purnell Pratt, Sterling Holloway, Herman Bing and Arthur Hoyt.—Produced by Republic.

GO TO this picture prepared to see something out of the ordinary, for it is exquisite fantasy. There is a spiritual quality to the performances of Ann Harding and Gary Cooper that never before has been equalled on the screen. The story opens with a prologue picturing the childhood love of Peter and Mimsey, capably played by Virginia Weidler and Dickie Moore. Passing over many years, Ann Harding appears as a duchess and Gary Cooper as a grown man, with his love for Mimsey the one great thing in his life, although she has wed another. John Halliday's performance as Ann Harding's unloved husband is fine, and others in the cast are Ida Lupino, Douglas Dumbrille and Christian Rub.—Produced by Paramount.

THANKS A MILLION

KEEPING pace with such fine pictures as Top Hat and Broadway Melody, Dick Powell, Ann Dvorak and Fred Allen emerge as outstanding performers in the latest Darryl Zanuck picture, Thanks a Million. The plot concerns Fred Allen's idea for using his stranded dance band to entertain at political rallies for a rum-soaked politician. Because the candidate is too tipsy to accept his nomination, Dick Powell delivers his speech and in the confusion becomes candidate for governor. Besides its interesting theme, the film features Paul Whiteman's band, the singing of Ramona, the fiddling of Rubinoff and the rib-tickling comedy of Patsy Kelly. It's a grand picture.—Produced by Twentieth Century-Fox.

FRANK REVIEWS

ROSE OF THE RANCHO

★ ★ ★ ★

UNLIKE most pictures featuring a famous singer, Rose of the Rancho has a fine story to serve as a vehicle for introducing Gladys Swarthout to the screen as John Boles' newest leading lady. The plot concerns a desperate stand made by fine Spanish families when land-grabbers attempt to rob them after California's admission to the Union in 1852. John Boles is the government agent sent to settle land disputes. Fascinating Gladys Swarthout plays the daughter of a wealthy family who disguises herself as a man to head the vigilantes who battle with the villainous Charles Bickford and his desperadoes. A beautifully filmed romantic drama, this picture was a happy choice for so lovely and talented a singer as Swarthout. She will soon be one of Hollywood's great stars.—Paramount.

MUTINY ON THE BOUNTY

MUTINY ON THE BOUNTY is one picture which will never die in the memory of those who see it. The story tells of mutiny on board the Tahitian bound ship The Bounty. Rebelling against the tyrannical discipline of Captain Bligh, played by Charles Laughton, Fletcher Christian, the chief officer, played by Clark Gable, leads a revolt, forcing Bligh and eighteen men into an open boat to die. The mutineers escape to Tahiti, where under the leadership of Christian some of the crew and a few natives go to Pitcairn Island where the Bounty is burned and a colony set up. After desperate adventure, Bligh returns to England, and his report leads to the capture and hanging of all the ringleaders but Christian. A bloody page torn from the annals of naval history, the picture is horrible in its realism and delightful in its romantic sequences. It is one of Hollywood's greatest triumphs.—Produced by Metro.

James Cagney has a new leading lady in dark-eyed Josephine Hutchinson

THE FRISCO KID

JIMMY CAGNEY goes back to his old hardboiled type of rôle with fists flying as a cagey, roughneck sailor with a heart of gold buried deep beneath a calloused epidermis. Cagney becomes the czar of Barbary Coast and has San Francisco's rowdy section under his thumb until he falls in love with the girl who is trying to clean house on the city's shame. Margaret Lindsay is the girl who reforms Cagney. Donald Woods does an excellent job as the newspaper editor who is slain in the conflict, and Ricardo Cortez makes himself hateful as the gambler and murderer. Another bright spot in the picture is the fiery beauty of Lili Damita. For stirring entertainment, this one will be hard to beat.—Produced by Warner.

The Marx boys are at it again, and the celluloid begins to quiver

A NIGHT AT THE OPERA

THE Marx Brothers come back to the screen in a joyous, rollicking comedy that is better than their previous fun-making by virtue of the fact that it has a story. Groucho, out to make himself some easy money, attaches himself to a wealthy angel who is supporting grand opera, becomes a manager and plays cupid for Allan Jones and Kitty Carlisle, who find their professional and romantic future menaced by a temperamental opera star. Despite the insane foolishness of Chico and Harpo, interest in the zippy story never lags, and strangely enough the whole picture is made more appealing by the really beautiful music. The laughs come so fast that almost everybody will want to see the picture twice.—Produced by Metro.

THE MAN WHO BROKE THE BANK AT MONTE CARLO

WHETHER you have had the thrill of seeing the famous gambling casino at Monte Carlo or not, you will enjoy Ronald Colman's new picture immensely, for it is one of his best. The story reveals the inside workings of large scale gambling and reveals Colman "breaking the bank," and then returning when lured by casino operators to make a second big killing. In the end, however, he loses his fortune and is forced to return to his cab-driving job in Paris, where he weds the girl he left behind. The supporting cast includes Joan Bennett, Colin Clive, Nigel Bruce, Montague Love and Ferdinand Gottschalk. You won't be taking a gamble on this picture.—Produced by Twentieth Century-Fox.

WISE GIRLS Who

The startling story of chorus beauties who know what they want—and that does NOT include a career in Hollywood

By Clark Warren

ANYONE who has attended the stage premières of the world's most glamorous cinema palace, New York's Radio City Music Hall, knows that the "Rockettes" are dancers from the tip of their graceful fingers to the ends of their carmen hued toes, but "Run over to the Music Hall backstage and find out do they lead love lives—eat spinach—play chess in bed—and don't forget to get the telephone number of that seventh one from the left end!" commands this magazine's cruel Simon Legree, swinging about face in his editorial chair.

And did I run (not walk) to the nearest stage-door entrance of the Radio City Music Hall located on the sixth avenue fringe of that Gargantuan labyrinth of marble known as Rockefeller Center? I did not! I took a cab because it got me there even faster. For I am essentially a Stage Door Johnny at heart and to receive an assignment to interview the loveliest row of rhythm tappers that ever graced the stage of a motion picture theater—is one of those few things in life people would gladly pay money to do rather than get paid for doing.

Right: Three lovely Hollywood chorines who appear in The Case of the Lucky Legs. They like their jobs, but ladies of the ensemble in the world's largest theater wouldn't change places with them on a bet!

RADIO CITY
FRED ASTAIRE AND GINGER ROGERS
GAY MUSIC HALL REVUE ON STAGE HUGE CAST

Left: Crowds outside the famous Radio City Music Hall. They've come to see Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers in Top Hat, but they have come also to admire the "Rockettes," those famous beauty queens of dance

SNUB the MOVIES

An impressive sight—the entire stage army of "Rockettes" who spend most of their lives backstage and wouldn't trade their $50-a-week for movie fame

Below: A close-up of the Corps de Ballet during rehearsal. Some of them have appeared in pictures, but they prefer their own fascinating work as a steady diet

A flashing sea of white, lovely long legs informed me that I had reached my destination—Oh heavenly destination! Exotically sculptured goddesses of the dance, tightly wiggled into hip high "knee action" abbreviations. Thirty-six—count 'em—thirty-six of the most vivacious "lovely to look ats" with rhythm in their heels, toes, hips and eyes, scurrying this way and that in endless confusion. My eyes begin to assume Eddie Cantor proportions.

A mysteriously concealed loud speaker blares forth with the announcement that there is a full forty-three minutes until the next stage show. This same loud speaker system, I was to learn later, is connected to each one of the countless dressing rooms, cafeterias, rehearsal halls, recreation rooms, inhabited by the Rockettes during the long wait between shows. In this manner, girls backstage are called and assembled instantly, rather than through the antiquated method of personal paging.

WHAT are the intimate thoughts and impressions resting in the minds of this lovely aggregation, this gorgeous group of dancing "incomparables" who intermittently, between the hours of eleven A. M. and eleven P. M. each day, serve as a delicious rhythmatic apertif to the jammed audiences of the world's largest motion picture house? Girls who each week mingle backstage with the reigning celebrities of Hollywood and Broadway, the Fred Astaires, the Clive Brooks, et al, who make personal appearances at the Music Hall.

I was well aware that I was confronted with one of the most intelligently alert group of ladies in show business. Girls who were wise to the ways of life and the big city. No foolish questions or interviews here.

"Where were you born?"

"In a cabbage patch," retorted a pert Rockette to one of those foolish questionnaires tacked on a backstage bulletin board recently. "My greatest fears are men and earthquakes!" answered another, and as an [Continued on page 48] afterthought added, "I really don't mind earthquakes so much!" And of other backstage legends that prove so clearly the mental maturity of this effervescent group of rhythm charmers.

Wise Girls Who Snub the Movies

The most illustrious of the legends carries us back to the period when the Rockettes were holding a bitter anti-pun campaign backstage. Anyone caught extorting the tortuous barbs was apt to find himself set upon by this pulchritudinous bevy, paddled and bodily tossed out the nearest exit way.

Dance director, Russell Markert, had just paced his Rockettes through a brisk workout in the rehearsal hall. He dismissed them—with a pun—and abruptly left the room! "Seems to me," said one of them, "That was a pretty awful pun."

"That," said another, "is a coincidence. It seems the same way to me!"

"So what?" said a third.

And they all exchanged what are known as understanding glances.

MINUTE INTERVIEW

LILY PONS

Can any woman who knows she has a good voice become a great singer?

"Oh no! There are so many things to be considered. First, she must have the best—the right teacher. Then there is study and practice, not for days, but years. She must sacrifice her social life—everything—for her voice. Singing must come from the heart, not just from the throat. And one must always be in perfect health to stand the hard work. We worked so hard on I Dream Too Much, sometimes getting to the set at seven in the morning and working into the evening. Singing for pictures is even more difficult than operatic work—but do I sound like I am complaining? No, I wouldn't be happy in any other work, but a woman who chooses such a career must be willing to devote her whole life to it if she would be a success."

IN THE time that it would take one of them to click her shapely heel above her head, a whole galaxy of pretty ponies descended in a body to Mr. Markert's office. As many hands as are usually allotted thirty-six beautiful girls, hoist the surprised Mr. Markert overhead and carry him out of his office, down three flights of stairs to the street, and bumpity bump, into one of Radio Center's immaculately vacuumed gutters. So when a group of man-eating, man-tossing, lady tigers like this will actually eject their own boss, imagine what they would do to a lowly news beagle like myself, should he ask too many questions, not enough or the wrong kind.

"Do you girls ever watch the feature pictures you dance in front of?" I queried a Rockette as she swished saucily by.

"Yes," she answered. "Not only do we see the pictures that are played here each week, but countless others that are continually being run off in our backstage projection room. In fact I'm on my way to see a picture now—C'mon and and I'll show you!" Walking through door number 77Bz40 or it might have been 28Bz41, we entered a dimly lit miniature motion picture theater.

Here, within the luxurious depths of leather sofas, reclined a goodly majority of the rompered Rockettes, intently absorbed in a film being projected on a miniature screen. Long dancing legs perched languorously on the back and sides of chairs, reminding one for the moment of the innermost sanctum of a harem.

"The girls," said this charming Rockette, "spend most of their time backstage here in the projection room. All of them are rabid movie fans."

"Who is their favorite screen actor?" I wondered out loud.

"Right now," said sweet she, "Fred Astaire seems to be tops with the Rockettes. You can easily see the reason for this—we Rockettes live, sleep, eat and dream dancing. But for a long time Clive Brook was our secret heartache. I'll never forget the time Clive Brook came backstage here at the Music Hall. When Clive left the theater that night he had to shake Rockettes out of his hair—there was a mob scene that was a mob scene!"

"DO ANY of the Rockettes ever get struck with the Hollywood bug?" I asked, wondering whether their close alliance with motion pictures, both on the stage and in back of it, had ever caused any of them to go Hollywood contract seeking.

"On the contrary!" came the answer. "While most of the girls are intense admirers of motion pictures and motion picture people, I doubt if any of them would forego splendid paying jobs to try their luck in Hollywood, regardless of how promising their fate might be. Rockettes as you know, are the West Pointers of all chorus dancers. Nothing on Broadway or in Hollywood can compare with them. Before a girl is even considered for the line of Rockettes, she must be able to do "specialty," or to put this in a musician's vernacular, she must be able to tap out "solos" of the most difficult nature. Any girl skilful and fortunate enough to secure a post in the Rockette lineup usually is too contented and proud to ever want to leave."

"But occasionally," she continued, "Rockettes will take short leaves of absence and do picture work both here in New York and in Hollywood. There was the time Russell Markert, youthful originator of the Rockettes, was called to Hollywood to stage the dance numbers for Twentieth Century's Moulin Rouge. Russell took three of the Rockettes along to set the pace for Hollywood chorines. The rest of us went down to the pier just before their boat left and gave them a tricky send off. We lined up on the dock and kicked out the same dance routine we had used that week at the Music Hall. It went over big with Russell and the ship passengers even if some of us did bust a garter or two in the attempt."

Further conversation revealed "tricks of the dancing trade" that are seldom realized by the audience out in front. I wonder if "Believe it or Not"—Bob Ripley knows there is a tapering difference of four or five inches between the height of the middle Rockette and the two girls at each end of the line. The girls in the middle are usually several inches taller than those at either extremity—yet the illusion the audience receives is a perfectly matched line straight across. If all the girls were exactly the same height the illusion would be a definite sag in the middle of the line.

The average age of a Rockette is nineteen—height five feet four inches, and the legs, besides being beautiful and shapely, must be of the lengthy type. Plumpness would spell immediate suicide to the job of a Rockette, yet you'll find them in the Music Hall cafeterias between shows gorging their tummies with every food that strikes their fancy and appetite—because regardless of how much they eat, the strenuous exercise they go through in their daily dance routine is more than enough to keep their figures slim and trim.

Little wonder is it that the Rockettes are so happy and contented with their jobs. Every backstage convenience and comfort are theirs for the short second it takes to walk to them. A recreation roof on the top of the theater where Rockettes enjoy sun baths, deck tennis, quoits and other sundry loafing sports. Miniature motion picture theaters, cafeterias, air conditioned dressing rooms and rehearsal halls, a hospital and an emergency hotel to house the Rockettes during snow blizzards and bad weather spells.

W. G. VAN SCHMUS, president and managing director of Radio City Music Hall, I learned, is the unofficial godfather of the Rockettes. Much of the Rockettes' perennial sparkling good nature is directly due to the untiring solicitousness of Mr. Van Schmus.

Russell Markert and his associate director, Gene Snyder, deserve a big hand for creating and staging the intricate "precision" dances clicked off smartly each week by the Rockettes. And also, one of Winchell's finest orchids to Emilia Sherman, captain of the Rockettes.

And if you happen to be sitting out in the Radio City Music Hall audience and imagine that one of the Rockette beauties is ogling you squarely in the eye—don't rush out and try to gardenia her at the stage door entrance later on. Because what she was really looking at was not your handsome features but at spacing "sights" located at measured intervals in the back of the audience—on which each Rockette keeps an eagle eye and on which she measures her exact stage bearing.

And if you happen to know one of the Rockettes and call her up at the Music Hall backstage for a date, don't be surprised if one of her prankish mates, probably the one that dresses right next to her, answers the phone and ribs you with: "Yes, she's here—would you like to speak with her?"

You admit that you would and the sooner the better.

"All right," says the Rockette, "Bark like a dog!"

"Bow wow!" you say.

"Croak like a frog!" she continues.

You croak like a frog, bray like a donkey, moo like a cow, hoping she will run out of animals and connect you with your Rockette heart throb. But long before that you'll turn around in the phone booth and wilt away with embarrassment when you see the curious crowd that has gathered around to listen to your farmyard imitations.

responsible for a new dance step for Follow the Fleet.

"Then you really like Fransten," said Astaire who is always as pleased as Punch when Sandrich expresses approval of a new step.

"I think it's swell," Sandrich assured him.

"Of course you understand the idea is still in the rough. It will need a lot of polishing. In fact, I think I'll get Hal Born and start work on it right away."

Hal Born is Astaire's pianist. Let's go with them over to the sound stage.

THE stage is dark and cavernous and musty. Over in one corner is what is left of a set that was once Katharine Hepburn's bedroom. A small, upright piano is rolled alongside Katie's ex-bed. A dark-haired boy is making the piano talk.

Suddenly the Astaire feet go into action. Rat-tat-a-tat-tat-tat-tat-tat . . . on and on . . . hour after hour . . . like the clicking of tireless castanets.

The clock says well past noon. But Astaire has lost all track of time. It is not until he hears heavy thudding sounds on the cat walk above him that he begins to take notice. The carpenters have returned from their lunch.

Klump—Klump—Klump—go their hammers. And the klumps do not synchronize with the rat-a-tat-tats. Astaire stands this sour harmony as long as he can and then he stops dancing and calls up the carpenters.

"I know you boys have to hammer. But can't you figure out some way to do it in time with the music?"

The cacophony of taps and hammers starts again and this time the carpenters try to keep in rhythm. Irving Berlin comes on the set. Freddie rolls his eyes heavenward and begins to sing "Remember the time we said goodbye . . . you promised to remember" in typical Berlin style. And Berlin reciprocates by giving a burlesque imitation of Astaire dancing Cheek to Cheek.

"Would you like to have me do a number on my piccolino?" asks Astaire, picking up a baby picolo which is about the size of a lead pencil. But somebody has stuffed the piccolino with cotton and even though Freddie "huffs and puffs" no sound emerges from the instrument.

For a time they clown about the set in what, in studio vernacular, is called a "blow-off." Then Astaire goes to work again.

TO WATCH Fred Astaire work is an experience not soon to be forgotten. His slender body seems veritably to be on wire springs which instantly obey his slightest mental command. You have the feeling that if he suddenly decided to take off for a nearby airport he could easily do it—and probably think up a couple of new landing steps enroute. And he makes it look so darned easy. But that is because his is art that conceals art. Believe you me, it was not learned in a day. He has been dancing since he was six years old when he carried his sister Adele's slippers to dancing school. Like most small boys he took little interest in the dancing. He just went along as an escort for his sister.

When Fred was eight and Adele nine they went into vaudeville, at a salary of $200 per week. Together they danced their way up the ladder of fame. There were times when the ladder was very slippery and it was difficult to get a toehold.

"Occasionally we'd make a hit in some town," says Fred in speaking of those days, "and we'd get very optimistic and think we were on our way to top billing. But the next week we'd find ourselves following the trained seals or a troupe of acrobats."

Sometimes they played the same bill with Joe E. Brown who was doing a juggling act or with Walter Huston who was then a song-and-dance man.

Eventually, the young Astaires managed to shake the dust of vaudeville off their feet and make their Broadway bow in an Ed Wynne show called Over The Top.

What's this? Claudette Colbert, usually one of the screen's best-dressed women, turns scrub woman in this scene from The Bride Comes Home

Broadway was quick to recognize this dancing pair as a "class" attraction and a show in which they were featured was sure to bring out New York's top hats, white ties and tails. Fred and Adele went from one musical comedy success to another . . . The Passing Show, For Goodness Sake, Lady Be Good, Funny Face, Smiles and finally The Band Wagon, which was their last appearance on the stage together. Several of their shows had long runs in London as well as on Broadway. And it was during a London run that Adele met and fell in love with Lord Cavendish who persuaded her to give up the stage and become Lady Cavendish.

Fred's first solo show was the Gay Divorcée, the play from which his hit picture was made. The Broadway wiseacres, and for that matter picture producers themselves, were skeptical of Fred's picture possibilities. They figured that because he did not follow the Clark Gable pattern that he would have a very limited appeal. Even Fred was decidedly pessimistic.

"I had always taken such funny looking photographs," he once told me, "that I just took it for granted that I didn't have a photographic face."

FOR relaxation he plays tennis and he likes to go on hunting trips. He always drives his own car. I don't suppose that he would confess to being at all absent-minded but one of the most amusing Astaire stories I've heard has to do with an occasion when he took a party of friends to the Beverly Hills Brown Derby for dinner. He parked his car opposite the restaurant and when they had finished dinner he took his friends for a drive and then home.

It was not until he drove into his own garage that there was something rather unfamiliar about the car. And then to his amazement he discovered that it was not his own car at all. Apparently he had merely stepped into another car of similar make instead of getting into his own. He was sure that by this time the owner of the car had doubtless notified the Beverly Hills police station that his car had been stolen and certain that if he attempted to drive back to the Derby he would be arrested for being in the possession of stolen property. Finally, however, he decided that all he could do was to take a chance on going back to the Derby. He drove very cautiously, picking out all the darkest streets, in case the law was lurking about and very stealthily he parked the car at the curb opposite the restaurant. Fortunately there were no witnesses in sight and with a sigh of relief Freddie got into his own car. Just as he was driving away he saw some people leaving the Derby, and to his surprise they crossed the street and got into the car he had just returned, quite unaware that a few minutes prévious it had been vacated by Fred Astaire.

Many people have the mistaken idea that Astaire is English. The truth of the matter is that he was born in Omaha and is as American as ham and eggs. And when you see his next picture, Follow the Fleet, you'll be convinced of that for he's going to say a temporary goodbye to his top hat, white tie and tails, and put on the uniform of a gob.

Next month Grace Mack will take you on the Follow the Fleet set for another Behind the Scenes with Fred Astaire story.

5. Prepared biscuit flour. "top milk" and an egg makes a fluffy crust

6. Into the oven—only thirty minutes to wait for a perfect chicken pie!

NO! WE couldn't all be guests. Hospitable and charming as Binnie Barnes really is. But we can make a perfectly glorious Old Fashioned Chicken Pie of our own.

And there's no dish more tuned to the holiday season. Or easier to prepare. Or less expensive, when one considers the amount of good holiday spirit it can evoke.

Here's how Nina, Binnie Barnes' cook, did it:

OLD FASHIONED CHICKEN PIE

Chicken
One plump five pound hen
1 bay leaf
1 small onion
Few celery leaves
2 teaspoons salt
Boiling water

Gravy
⅜ cups flour
⅜ cups fat or butter
6 cups broth and milk (or cream)
Seasoning to taste

Topping
2 cups prepared biscuit flour
1 cup rich "top" milk
1 beaten egg

Cut up the chicken and stew until tender in salted water, together with the bay leaf, onion and celery leaves. Cut meat from bones in largest sections possible and lay in bottom of flat greased baking dish. (Here in the SCREEN BOOK testing kitchen, we like to use a large oval heat-proof glass baking dish.) Make a rich gravy by mixing flour and fat, and stirring into broth and milk, (Nina likes to have at least one-half cup of this liquid cream, instead of milk). Cook for several minutes; season to taste, and pour three cups of gravy over chicken. (Reserve remaining gravy to serve over pie).

To make crust, blend beaten egg with rich top milk and mix at once with prepared biscuit flour. Spread lightly over chicken and gravy, using a rubber dish scraper. Brush surface with sweet cream. Slip pie into a moderate oven—375 degrees F. and bake until crust is puffy, and a delicate brown in color—about thirty minutes.

Serve topped with good hot chicken gravy!

Another dish which Binnie's "Nina" makes in tantalizing perfection, at every holiday season, is Pumpkin Pie. She uses cream in that too. The recipe is one which has come down in her family through more than one generation. And it's the easiest pumpkin pie which we've ever tried a hand at.

Write for the free recipe for Nina Williams' Favorite Pumpkin Pie. Don't forget to enclose a stamped, addressed envelope. And we'll be ever so glad to rush you a recipe copy, in time for your own Christmas festivities.

THE PERFECT PUMPKIN PIE!

Binnie Barnes may vote for Chicken Pie. But Nina Williams, her capable cook, thinks that Pumpkin Pie is every bit as good.

Of course, you already have pumpkin pie recipes. But you'll want Nina's too. It's easy, but oh-so-good! Nina wrote it out in detail for us. You may have a copy FREE.

Leila Hyams pleads with a policeman not to arrest her sweetheart who spends A Thousand Dollars a Minute

THE most outstanding comedy success among the current offerings from Hollywood studios is A Thousand Dollars a Minute. Co-starring Leila Hyams and Roger Pryor, the picture is reminiscent of Brewster's Millions, but the treatment of the plot which concerns a soft-hearted newspaperman, who because of a bet must spend almost a million dollars in twelve hours, is unique and sparkling. The action of the picture moves like greased lightning, and few pictures have a collection of so many outstanding comedians.

There is Sterling Holloway as the vague, bewildered cab driver; Edward Brophy as Benny, the tough guy; Edgar Kennedy as the hardboiled detective, and several others who have long laugh records.

Roger Pryor, as the man who must spend a thousand dollars a minute buys a yacht, a dog, a $200,000 necklace, an expensive car and numerous other nicknacks with furious speed as the police are hot on his trail, suspecting him of bank robbery. Whether he manages to win the bet or not is something you will find out on seeing the picture. A Thousand Dollars a Minute was produced by Nat Levine for Republic Pictures, and from the moment the camera turned on the first scene the studio knew it had a natural.

Up at Lake Tahoe, Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy have been on location for weeks with the wild mountain and lake scenery furnishing a perfect background for Rose Marie. Advance information on the picture leads to the prediction that it will be every bit as good as Naughty Marietta.

Strangely enough, it was discovered that the only building near Cascade Falls, where the company was filming trial shots, was a ramshackle structure once used as a set for Will Rogers' Lightnin'. The building was converted into a cook shack for feeding the company.

Interesting is the news that Miriam Hopkins and Merle Oberon will be co-starred in The Children's Hour. A lot of things about this play will be changed before it reaches the screen, for the subject is not one considered fit for the movie public, unless handled in a very delicate manner. Among other things, it may emerge under the title of These Three.

Franchot Tone has an interesting comment to make on location trips. Asked if such location jaunts as Mutiny on the Bounty, weren't something of a vacation jaunt for the actors, his answer was explosive. "Good night, no! In the studio, we work a number of set hours each day. On location for such pictures as Mutiny, everybody is as liable as not to work twelve and fourteen hours as these trips are expensive and every effort is made to cut down the cost by shooting as long as there is enough light for the cameras."

The country may be neutral, but Hollywood is going to war in a big way. At Republic studio, The Legion of the Lost is swinging into action. Originally, this film was to concern the French Foreign Legion, but now it has its setting in Abyssinia.

Victor McLaglen, finishing Klondike Lou, with Mae West, dons his uniform for Professional Soldier. The same studio is getting ready to film Under Two Flags and Wooden Crosses. A few other fight pictures under way are The Charge of the Light Brigade, Boots and Saddle, Millions for Defense, and a war burlesque with Joe E. Brown called I'm in the Legion. Between bombs and opera stars, Hollywood is a noisy place these days.

in 1931, he and Toomey, then one of the screen's most popular actors, became fast friends. Now the situation is reversed; Nino is the talk of the town, and Toomey, largely because Hollywood has failed to avail itself to the utmost of his talents, has had a few years of hard sailing.

"But," says Nino, "Regis has a wonderful voice—a musical comedy voice. I have sung with him many times and know that he could become a big favorite almost over night if he could be given a chance to sing."

IT IS typical of Nino that he never forgets a friend. Perhaps that is why he is so amazingly popular with everyone, from prop boys to studio bosses. Among his more intimate friends are Lily Pons and Lawrence Tibbett.

"I know them very well," he exclaimed when their names were mentioned. "I have sung with Tibbett here in America, and in operas with Lily Pons in France. They are glorious!"

Have all his leading ladies been as delightful as Lily Pons and Anita Louise?

"Oh no!" Nino laughed heartily. "Some of those leading ladies I had when I was a young man were so big around, like this, that when I make love I can't get my arms around them. And once I sang love songs to a woman who was a foot taller than myself and weighed two hundred pounds. It is better that opera stars are not so hard to look at now—perhaps the public will enjoy the entertainment when the actors really look like the people they are supposed to be."

At the present moment, Nino is too busy to return to Hollywood immediately for another picture. "I must be in New York to broadcast every Saturday night. Then I catch a train and travel all week, coming back to New York every six days for the broadcast. I would like to do more picture work because travel is so tiresome. For years I have traveled everywhere. Now I would like to settle down for awhile in Hollywood. But with the Metropolitan and the radio, it will not be for some time.

"I liked Here's to Romance very much, but in my next picture I would like an unusual story. In this one, I am just a young man starting on his career, and they make me act like a young boy. Next time I would like a stronger rôle—perhaps as an established singer. Something a little more dramatic, so that I might act as well as sing."

Nino confesses that he is a bit disturbed about the threat of war in Europe. As as Italian subject, he could be drafted in the army. "But I don't worry about it too much, for I am in the third category. You see, my father died twenty years ago, and since then I have supported my family. Otherwise, I might be in the army now." The chances are, however, that even if there is a serious conflict overseas, Mussolini will excuse Nino from service. It happens that Il Duce, an enthusiastic patron of the arts, admires Martini immensely, and it is doubtful that he would call on him to sacrifice a career that brings so much enjoyment to the people.

when Gene Raymond rides. It seems he's part of the horse. When he takes jumps and hurdles, it's a beautiful thing to see. No easy bridle paths for him. He takes the roughest stretch. And Gene likes to ride alone. Why?—his friends don't exactly know. Some of them believe that it's because he rides so dangerously, because he follows trails seldom used even by equally daring riders—often he rides off any beaten trail at all. So, he rides alone.

Then, too, he's an all-around gymnast. You know what a Turnverein is, don't you? It's the German name for those gymnastic clubs where young men and boys are brought, by a daily round of standardized gymnastics, to a peak of physical perfection. Well, since childhood, Gene has done hours of daily work in Turnvereins, where he became adept at the parallel bars, the flying rings, the trapeze, that big leather horse thing, whatever it's called. And then, too, the usual calisthenics. He's kept it up. And today, between pictures, he spends much time daily at the Hollywood Athletic Club, going through long, stiff workouts with all the gym machinery.

YOU saw Zoo in Budapest, didn't you? Remember how he climbed around in that? Many a Hollywood actor would have had to have an expert tumbler and gymnast double for him. Not Gene—he did it all himself, and with an ease and a grace and a surety that told any observer that here was an accomplished athlete.

When he's done with his gym work, it's the swimming pool for Gene. One of his favorite sports is swimming. I learned that when he was a boy, living on Long Island, he used to swim the Sound just about every day. That's no mean trick. It takes an excellent swimmer to do that! Also, Gene is an expert fencer. When I say "expert," I mean it. In fact, he's a champion of sorts, having won quite a few fencing tourneys in the East.

"Fencing," he told one of his friends, "is one of the best all-around body builders I know. It's just about the only exercise that calls into play the full faculties of the body—all its muscles, and the brain as well. It develops perfect co-ordination and timing."

HE'S a good boxer, too. His daily workout at the Club often includes a session with the gloves. Gene can take it as well as give it. You might imagine that he'd be afraid to wade in and swap punches with a worthy adversary—that he'd be afraid of damaging his looks. His intimates say that he doesn't know fear. That's literally true. And he has a wicked right and a mean left to back up anything he feels like backing up with physical action.

Then there are the net sports—tennis, badminton, table tennis. But Gene's no show-off. That's why, probably, most of this sports-expertness of his may be news to you. Gene plays for the sport, not for the show. And so, although you rarely see snapshots of him on the tennis courts, he can wield a racquet like an ace. And that goes for tennis and badminton and table tennis, all strenuous games. Golf? Of course. He's no wizard at it, but he can hold up his end of a foursome adequately.

So there's Gene, the sportsman.

FOR the first time in his life, Gene is about to indulge in some of his favorite sports on his own grounds. He's going to have a home of his own! You see, having entered the theater at the age of five, Gene has never "taken root" anywhere. He's lived in hotels and apartments and trunks virtually all his life. True, his family has a Long Island home, but even when in New York, Gene had to live in the city to be near his theater. So he took his sports at clubs mostly.

Now, in Beverly Hills, he's just bought a thirteen-room house for his mother, Mrs. Mary Kipling. But it's to be Gene's home—his first real home. He's as excited about it as a kid on Christmas morning. Although it belongs to his mother, Gene's ideas of fittings and furnishings and so on will prevail because Gene will live in it the year 'round. His mother spends a few months a year with him and the rest of the time is in the East.

HAVING told you what he does I'll now add a picture of what he is—a picture compiled from a hint by one friend, a statement by another, a story from another, and so on.

In his private life, Gene is very quiet. His social system is odd. For a few months, he'll carry on in the city. That's the time he's gossiped about and photographed. And then suddenly he vanishes . . . becomes a hermit. He lives an utterly quiet life for months, then. He's sincerely earnest about his work—so earnest, for instance, that during a picture he even quits smoking!

He has no valet. His sole personal servant is a driver, who attends to errands and such matters. Gene Raymond has no valet who lays out his clothes and draws his "bawth" and all that sort of thing. He will have none of that; he's self-sufficient. Mentioning clothes, his wardrobe is hardly what would be expected by a person who didn't know him. He wears quiet, plain-cut, unobtrusive clothes. Dark blues, browns, greys. Black shoes. You'll never see Gene with these blue-shirt-and-red-tie combinations that make Hollywood Boulevard so noisy. Playing, he dresses for the sport in which he's engaging. But he dresses to work at that sport, and not pose at it.

His character is one of reserve. Gene doesn't gossip. He never repeats Hollywood tales about this man or that girl. Hollywood rumors just slip in one ear and out the other with Gene,—if they get in at all, that is!

And so, there you are. You've a new idea of Gene? I certainly have! I've been amazed at the legion of friends this quiet fellow has in Hollywod. And when I add that he really likes to be asked for his autograph, and to meet his fans, and to talk with them on the street or in cafés, I know his already big fan mail will take another jump—and he'll be the happier for it!

GINGER ROGERS' ADVICE TO GIRLS
BY A HOLLYWOOD STAR – WIN OUR SCREEN TEST!

Joan Crawford, Marlene Dietrich, Carole Lombard and Ginger Rogers, the four famous stars whose photos were used in making the composite photo on page 33. Study their features carefully. Have you some of the qualities which make them outstanding?

They can become clerks, office workers, teachers, nurses—but their choice of careers is still limited. And none of these careers is as glamorous as acting. Another thing—a man has a tendency to play the sure thing, to pick the career in which he knows he can earn enough to support himself and put something aside. Acting is a gamble. But a woman is willing to take a chance on that gamble, ninety-nine times out of a hundred, if she thinks she has the remotest chance of winning. She will starve and scrimp and struggle for years, staking everything on her dream of becoming famous."

I ASKED Mr. Zukor what general type of girl the movies are seeking today.

"Regardless of looks," he replied, "she must have abilities—or possibilities that can be developed into abilities. It doesn't matter if she weighs 102 or 132. Any set standard of physical measurements is ridiculous. Dramatic ability is the all-important thing. Though I don't want to minimize the importance of an attractive appearance. That always has been important, and always will be important—particularly with a female candidate.

"But the girl with personality and no looks stands a much better chance of success than the beauty without ability—who doesn't appeal to anybody. It's far easier to make a girl a beauty than an actress—if her chances are equal to begin with."

"What is the first requisite a girl must have to capture a talent scout's attention?" I asked him.

"Physical attractiveness," was his instant reply. "And I don't mean, necessarily, good looks. Maybe personal magnetism would be a better name for what I mean. A girl may have great beauty, but if she doesn't have this personal magnetism, she is a washout. She may have acting ability; she may be technically perfect in every gesture, every scene—but if she doesn't have this one subtle quality, she will never make the grade. She will never draw sympathy out of an audience, or make an audience share the emotions she is portraying.

"Acting ability is so important today that no girl can hope to get a screen chance if she doesn't know the rudiments of acting, at least. Unless she's a child—a very small child, and a very talented one. Then, perhaps, she can start from scratch. But no studio can take the time to train novices, no matter how personable they may be."

Is Hollywood the place for screen aspirants to seek their Big Chance?

"I urge girls to stay away from Hollywood," said Mr. Zukor earnestly. "Practically the only way a girl can break in there as an unknown is through the 'extra' gates—and that's a way of heartbreak. She is competing with thousands of other girls, some of them genuine beauties. She can't live on the money she earns; she barely exists. If only she could get rid of that magnetic thought that, once she gets inside a studio (even as an 'extra'), she may be discovered!

"Accidental discoveries—in Hollywood or anywhere else—are a legend. Not one in a million girls could hope to interest producers, directors or talent scouts just by being seen in places they frequent. I'll tell you why. These men aren't searching for beauty; Hollywood is overcrowded with beauty. They're searching for talent. The place to have them see you is on the stage—where you can show them your talent. And the story that a girl has to know a friend of a friend of Someone Important, to get to first base, is also a legend. To get a job on that basis would be a handicap, if anything.

"A GIRL impatient for a career may think she hasn't time to get a college education. If so, she's mistaken. Most of the newcomers we sign are over twenty—nearer twenty-four. The Ida Lupinos—actresses in their teens—are rare exceptions. And don't forget that Ida comes from a family that has been acting for six hundred years. Acting is in her blood.

"Remember this: the day of the baby-doll type is over, and a girl's face is her fortune only when it has something to express—and can express it. And remember this, also: Acting ability implies sensitiveness, imagination, and shrewd observation and understanding of human nature. An adolescent doesn't have that understanding."

"Glamor is important, too. But no girl should make the mistake of thinking that costly clothes are a part of glamor. They aren't, necessarily. I have seen girls in gingham who were more glamorous than girls in satin evening gowns. The whole thing is to dress becomingly. No girl needs an extensive wardrobe to get a screen chance, despite all legends to the contrary. The girls who make the grade, almost without exception, are those who have been driven by necessity, as well as ambition, to become outstanding.

"NO GIRL with acting ambition can afford to be self-satisfied, to think that she knows all that there is to know about swaying audiences. She must be willing to learn constantly. And that applies to stars as much as to beginners. Carole Lombard is one example of a star who is smart enough to become constantly more interesting. But when a player gets bigger than a part, when she can't forget herself and fit her personality into a characterization, she is on her way out."

But what are the practical steps that a girl with acting ambition should take, to become an actress?

"First of all," Mr. Zukor explained, "she should look into dramatic schools—schools recognized as superior in the profession. Naturally, I can't list them for you, but there are a number of them. She should enroll at one. A good school won't take her, or her money, if it doesn't think she has a chance. If she gets in, she will be past the first milestone on the road. And when she gets out, she will have the makings of success. After five minutes of hearing a girl talk, I can tell whether or not she has been to dramatic school.

"As a second step, after her dramatic course, she should make every effort to land a job with a stock company. She may have to be persistent, and resourceful, to get interviews. But once she connects with a stock company, she is due to 'find herself.' She will be playing one rôle this week, while rehearsing another rôle for next week's play. This week she may be playing Merely Mary Ann; next week, she may be doing Way Down East. All of this is the best training in the world for her, the best help toward self-confidence. She finds out what she can do best, she learns the tricks of the trade, she discovers what gets across with audiences—and what doesn't.

"Then, after she has had stock experience, she is ready for Broadway. And when she goes to a manager, and is able to tell him, 'I have played two seasons in stock,' he is going to listen. He knows that she is capable of playing a variety of rôles; he knows that she is thoroughly schooled; he knows that she has a capacity for hard work. He finds her a place in a new play. She is on Broadway at last. And once she is on Broadway, Hollywood isn't far away. Talent scouts from every studio will see her in that play."

There are eighty-three players under contract to Paramount—the studio that has just made such big pictures as The Crusades, The Big Broadcast of 1936, Peter Ibbetson and So Red the Rose. Of the eighty-three, only nineteen came from anywhere but the stage. Five are young children, four are from radio, two from opera, two from dance orchestras, two from night-clubs, two were contest winners, one was an Olympic athlete, and one stepped directly into the movies from a dramatic school.

In other words, four out of five have stage experience before they ever land a movie contract!

Lovely Women Everywhere Know This

AMAZING BEAUTY SECRET

A DULL, blemished, unsightly skin can't be made attractive and youthful by artificial means. Powder and rouge merely cover up. The daily use of a good soap helps. But the real trouble often lies internally—in order to relieve it you must attack the cause.

Many complexion troubles are due to faulty elimination. The system becomes clogged with poisonous wastes which empty into the blood stream, causing broken out and sickly-looking skin, loss of energy, run down condition.

Stuart's Calcium Wafers help the system eliminate these wastes. The skin often becomes clear and firm, with the freshness of youth. Eyes usually regain their sparkle. You should feel better, become more vivacious and attractive to others!

Stuart's Calcium Wafers have done wonders for thousands of women who were discouraged about their complexions. If your complexion faults are due to the common fault of poor elimination, there should be no reason why you can't have the fine-textured skin, the lovely natural rose-blown complexion that everyone admires so much! These marvelous little wafers are gentle, pleasant, harmless. 10c and 60c at all drug stores. For FREE sample package write (penny post-card will do) to F. A. Stuart Co., Dept. Short Cuts To Charm names of an oil shampoo, a quick wave-set lotion or the perforated end curlers, just drop me a line.

EVEN your manicure may be made swift but efficient if you will use a fresh emery board to file your nails and a cream cuticle remover that whisks away dead cuticle in a flash. This business of personal daintiness, too, can be hurried. There are several instant deodorants that require only a few seconds to apply. There are grand atomizers that enable you to spray your entire body with eau de cologne in less time than it takes to think about it. And there are perfume atomizers, too, that you can use at the same time you are grabbing your gloves and dashing out the door! A scissors-like tweezer makes eye-brow plucking the work of a minute.

Below are five items in Elizabeth Arden's new Screen and Stage Make-up, fresh from Hollywood

It's facial make-up though, that presents most problems for the busy woman. And that's why you see so many girls with lipstick smeared on carelessly, powder and rouge dabbed on in unbecoming streaks.

There's no excuse for this, no matter how busy you are! I'd rather see a woman without make-up (And heaven knows, most women look atrocious in that state) than with cosmetics applied blotchily!

The first aid to a quick but competent make-up, Bette Davis thinks, is to have everything you need within easy reach. It's this business of having to get up to run to the bathroom shelves for a missing lotion or to rummage in your dresser drawers for cotton that slows you up when applying cosmetics. You can see by looking at Bette's dressing table that she practices what she preaches. Cotton, tissues, eye beautifiers and all sorts of cream, lotions and cosmetics are spread in front of her. So there's no fumbling, no delay, when Bette sits down to prettify that lovely face of hers, five minutes before dinner is announced!

The first step in the quick make-up (Illustrated on page 16) is to cleanse the face thoroughly with liquefying cleansing cream, one that melts as soon as it touches the skin, seeps into the pores readily and can be removed, all within a minute. The cold cream type of cleanser, is perfectly effective in its way, and many people prefer it, but there's no denying that its action is slower. Apply your cream with quick upward and outward movements and be sure to cover every inch of the throat and face.

Then snatch up some cleansing tissues and remove this cream, just as Bette is doing in photo two. You will find tissues more suitable and more absorbent than towels, of course. And a thousand times more sanitary.

Now take a piece of clean cotton and saturate it with a skin tonic (if your skin is dry) or an astringent (if it's oily) and apply this briskly. It removes all traces of oil not removed by the tissues, and closes the pores.

In addition to being quicker, it's more economical to use cotton in applying lotions of any kind. Cotton prevents spilling and waste, and also distributes the liquid more evenly all over the skin surface. Not to mention the fact that it's more hygienic than using your fingers!

You can hasten the lotion's drying time by lightly patting and smoothing it over the skin, and after a minute or two, blotting off the surplus with a fresh tissue.

NOW comes the point at which many women decide to take a short cut that is never justified. As soon as their skin is cleansed they apply powder—omitting a foundation—with the excuse that it requires too much time to apply. It does save about a minute and a half but with the result that might be expected—a shiny face before the main course is served!

I can tell you the names of several powder bases—both liquid and cream types—that can be applied smoothly and efficiently in a negligible amount of time. Bette prefers a liquid powder base when she is rushed, and she applies it, too, with a bit of cotton because it's quicker. (See photo four on page 16.)

Sometimes when I am very rushed, I combine the skin tonic and liquid powder base by saturating cotton, first with tonic and then with liquid powder. The tonic dilutes the liquid powder slightly but this dilution only aids in the task of smoothing the base on evenly without streaking.

The fifth make-up step is to apply powder with a generous hunk of cotton (So much more sanitary, my pets, so much easier on your pores!), starting at the throat and working upward, just as Bette is doing in photo five. Don't try to smooth it as you go—that will only make it streaked. After you have covered the face and neck lavishly, take a face powder brush and quickly brush off the surplus. This may seem like an extra motion, but it's really a time-saver.

When you're in a hurry, it's safer to apply cake rouge than cream, for the latter requires more time and skill. Apply cheek rouge sparingly, blending it at the edges with a rouge brush (Yes, there are rouge as well as powder brushes. Want the name?) Lipstick should be of the creamy, "spready" variety, for quick application, and when you have outlined your lips and filled them in, press them together on a bit of tissue to blot off the surplus and to make the surface satiny-smooth. (Bette illustrates this in photo six on page 16.)

Right, three Ballarde perfumes from Grasse and, below, Nu-Nail, a splendid nail conditioner

In making up your eyes hurriedly, use a creamy mascara that goes on in a jiffy, and restrict eye shadow. Instead of trying to cover a lot of territory, you'll find that a single faint line at the base of the upper lashes does it!

NOW for a review of interesting toiletries—some of which would make very suitable last-minute additions to your list of Xmas gifts. First there's the jar of Ingram's Milkweed Cream. The name has been a familiar one to beauty-conscious women for a long time but this particular cream has new and improved qualities, as well as a modernized dress. If you're a one-cream woman, you'll find that Milkweed Cream does a very fine job as a cleanser, lubricator and powder base. If you're a budget girl, you'll find the moderate price appealing.

Those three bars of Lux Toilet Soap in military formation are to remind you once more of my favorite admonition—to use bland soap and water as well as creams on your skin. If you're dry skinned, use soap first, then cream. If you're oily skinned reverse the procedure. Lux Toilet Soap with its rich, active lather (evident even in hard water like they have in Texas) is a valuable aid to skin beauty. The fact that many movie stars use it should convince you of this, of course! Two of Lux Toilet Soap's minor claims for fame are, it seems to me, its delicate bouquet fragrance and these quaint wrappers that look like grandmother's samplers!

And now Elizabeth Arden has a complete line of Screen and Stage Make-up for you and me. It contains probably a dozen or more items, but the most important is the Foundation, which conceals freckles and minor skin discolorations and which is impervious to perspiration, water or heat. It comes in tubes, like professional movie make-up, and it can be applied very evenly after a trial or two. Naturally, you'll need a tube of this for evening or for any occasion when you want your make-up to look smooth and to remain intact for long periods.

The long object, beside the tube, that looks like a paint brush is one. It's for painting your lips, after you have outlined them with an indelible red pencil! (A trick used most successfully by most Hollywood make-up artists!) The large round box contains face powder and a generous puff, and the smaller contains "liner"—a very creamy eye shadow. It comes in fascinating shades and Miss Arden suggests that you apply brown liner 'way up to the brow and a second

WHY WIVES NAG!

Don't blame wives and mothers who get cross and irritable, worn out and exhausted trying to do everyday housework, look after children and manage the home when they don't feel right. Often a woman neglects her health, ruins her nerves and becomes impatient with everyone and everybody—and doesn't realize it. Science, however, now claims that it is GLANDS STARVING FOR IODINE that is the real cause of these rundown, nervous, irritable conditions—glands which control assimilation and metabolism and which, when they fail to work prevent normal everyday food from building rich, red, nourishing blood, calm, strong nerves and the strength and energy women usually so badly need.

In Kelpamalt, the new mineral concentrate from the sea, however, a way has been found to provide the regular ration of NATURAL PLANT IODINE needed to keep glands in perfect health. Kelpamalt contains 1300 times more iodine than oysters, hitherto considered the best source, as well as 12 other precious body minerals which aid appetite, digestion and help to prevent the ordinary disorders which prove so annoying and often dangerous.

Try this amazing new mineral concentrate for one week. Notice how much better you feel, how well you sleep, how your appetite improves. Notice how worn out, exhausted nerves quickly calm and grow strong. How you gain flattering new pounds of good, solid flesh. Over 4,000,000 people annually use Kelpamalt. Costs but little to use. Be sure to get the original Seedol Kelpamalt Tablets. Sold at all good drug stores. If your dealer has not as yet received his supply send $1.00 for special introductory size bottle of 65 tablets to the address below.

Shall We Marry Without Money?

homes in San Fernando valley—but, when he decided to marry the little red-haired, sixteen-year-old Odille Osborne, who was the trick rider in the circus he had worked for the year before, he had to borrow the money to buy the wedding ring.

Then, hurdling the details of wedding expenses by marrying the girl as an added attraction to the afternoon circus performance, Buck joined the circus as rough rider and started life as a married man.

When the circus closed they started on their honeymoon—a horseback ride from Larned, Kansas, to Miller's 101 Ranch at Bliss, Oklahoma (now known as Moreland). They wanted to reach the 101 Ranch in time to get out with that circus in the spring, and they had spent every dollar they had to buy a horse for Odille.

So they decided to work their way across the country. They stopped en route at fairs and carnivals and did trick riding—and made offers in the various towns they passed through to break horses or ride outlaws, passing the hat after each exhibition.

"Most of the nights of that honeymoon were spent in stables at race tracks and fair grounds—or in the open," reminisced Buck, "but we shared everything, fifty-fifty, work, fun and love. We were desperately hard up but those tough times, when we didn't know where we were going to sleep or when we were going to eat, brought us so close together nothing could ever separate us."

Such are the memories that keep love alive, and make marriages endure.

The happiest marriage in Hollywood, and the happiest marriages anywhere are those in which man and wife can recall early struggles, when each proved their worth.

Marry poor is the advice of those who have made good in matrimony!

Short Cuts to Charm

shade of liner (to match your eyes) on the edge of the lid. The fifth item in the picture is an Elizabeth Arden Tissue Stick (a lipstick, to use when you are far from your dressing table with its red pencil and camel's hair brush). The packages in this new line are smart, simple and useful, the color scheme, warm yellow and white. And the price is extremely moderate. You'll find these cosmetics wherever you find Miss Arden's other preparations, at the better stores.

If you are waging a battle against brittle nails or ragged cuticle (usually the cause of nail biting, by the way!) you'll find NuNail illustrated on page 63, an able ally. This ruby-colored oil penetrates the nail and skin surface, carrying lubricating ingredients where they are most needed and, when used regularly, quite normalizes nails that are ridged, broken and greyish in color. Nu-Nail can be used effectively over your liquid polish and it should be applied at least twice a day. The trick is to massage it into the nails and cuticle until it is completely absorbed, stroking the fingers downward to persuade them to tapering slenderness.

Those entrancing satin boxes with tassels (on page 63) contain lovely Ballarde perfumes. Spring in Arcady is encased in forest green, Summer in Arcady in russet and Autumn in Arcady in taupe. The trio would make a delightful Christmas gift and the price is so low—$1.50 each—that they aren't in the luxury class. Each scent is pleasantly reminiscent of the season it represents and solves the problem of what type of perfume to wear at different seasons of the year.

Packaged in the black and silver box in the top photo are two aids to personal daintiness that are definite time-savers. The curved Debette Razor is quick and efficient for under arm use and the Debette Cream has a dual personality. It serves both as a shaving cream and a deodorant! Non-greasy, it won't stain clothing, yet its emollient qualities make it very kind to a tender skin. It's a good idea to use it both before and after the razor—to facilitate removal of superfluous hair and to soothe the skin afterward.

Are Movie Wives Jealous?

Not one in a thousand, I imagine. Ask anyone who knows her what sort of person Mrs. Gable is and invariably the reply will be: "She is one of the most charming women in Hollywood. And part of that charm is due to the fact that Mrs. Gable has remembered what many wives forget: To keep a sense of humor and a sense of values. That fifty million women would like to be in her shoes doesn't bother her.

"I am flattered that other women find my husband attractive," she says. "The only time I will worry about Clark will be when they cease to find him so. I realize that his success on the screen is, to a large extent, the result of his appeal to women. Consequently it would be absurd for me to resent that."

Mrs. Gable is one of those wise wives who believes that an occasional vacation from the routine of marriage is good for any husband. When Clark finishes a picture she insists on his going on a hunting trip—alone. And while he is gone she does not sit at home, as many wives would do, wondering and worrying.

"I think that one of the greatest mistakes any woman can make," she says, "is to allow herself to be suspicious of her man; to fall into the habit of thinking 'Maybe he's doing this' or 'Maybe there's more to this than meets the eye.' No man likes to be doubted. And the woman who is continually suspecting her husband without cause usually succeeds in driving him to do something that will justify her suspicions."

Mrs. Gable never goes to the studio to check up on just how much heat Clark is putting into those love scenes with Harlow or Crawford. In fact she has never been to the studio but three times in her life and then she went only because she had house guests who were curious to see how pictures were made.

"Jealousy," says Mrs. Gable, "is a confession of weakness. In most cases it is ninety per cent wounded pride and vanity caused by what a woman considers her humiliation in the eyes of others. My personal feeling is that the most important thing in marriage is the relation of the man and woman to each other. So long as harmony exists between them and they are united by understanding, what the world may say or think is unimportant.

"Should Clark ever find someone who is more attractive to him than I am, so far as I am concerned, the gate will be open. I really mean that. For I do not believe that love can ever be held by putting a chain around it.

"Many women have the mistaken idea that a wedding ring carries a guarantee of everlasting love and devotion. In other words, having married a man, that they are legally entitled to his love. But there is no law which can force one person to love another and human emotions are subject to change. And the person who depends too completely upon any other individual for happiness is building a house on a shaky foundation. True happiness must come from within. And I believe that the wise woman is the one who refuses to allow any one person to be so essential to her happiness that a separation from that person would wreck her life."

ONE of the cleverest young wives I have met in Hollywood is Josephine Woods, wife of Donald Woods. Theirs was a college romance that ended in wedding bells. Shortly after their marriage, Donald secured a job with a stock company and sent for Josephine to join him. When she appeared upon the scene the management was quite upset.

"Nobody must know that you two are married," Josephine was informed. "Our audiences are made up of women. If they find out that our romantic looking young leading man is married they won't take nearly as much interest in him."

Did Josephine rant and rave and consider this unfair? She did not. She reasoned that if her husband's success depended upon his popularity with the women in the audience, she could help him most by staying in the background.

"I want women to think my husband attractive," she says quite frankly. "And I want him to notice attractive girls. I think that any man has a better idea of what he wants when he can make comparisons. If Donald should find some girl who appeals to him more than I do, I wouldn't go into a tailspin and start looking up time-tables on the trains to Reno. Instead, I'd do a little checking up on myself to see where I had slipped in my job of being a wife."

ELOISE O'BRIEN laughs at the idea of being jealous of her Pat, even though Pat, as a result of his excellent performance in Stars Over Broadway, is now getting a flock of letters from romantically inclined young women.

"You can't be jealous of the whole world," laughs Eloise. "And Pat is one of those men who loves everybody. He calls all the girls 'honey' and 'sweetheart' but it doesn't mean a thing. He's always been like that. I went with him for five years before we were married and I know all about that Irishman's blarney.

"Sometimes I go out to the studio and just as likely as not I'll find some girl, maybe two, sitting on Pat's knee. If he showed signs of guilt or embarrassment when I appeared on the scene I might be suspicious but he never does. Instead, he always takes great pride in introducing me and various girls have told me that Pat bores them to death, talking about me. Well, no girl can get very romantic about a man who insists on talking about his wife all the time.

"Pat is not one of those movie husbands who thinks it's good business to keep his wife in the background. Whenever we go to opening nights or to cafes or nightclubs and get caught in a net of autograph hounds, Pat always says: 'You'd better get Mrs. O'Brien's autograph too. She's really the important member of our family.' And when pictures are taken, he always insists on my being in the picture.

"We have gone to Hollywood parties where the most beautiful stars were present and invariably when we get home Pat will say: 'You know, honey, I looked all those girls over and there wasn't a one that could hold a candle to you. You were the most beautiful girl there.'

"Wouldn't I be a sap to be jealous of a husband like that?"

LAST CALL FOR CONTESTANTS!

You may still have time to win a valuable prize in The Three Musketeers and The Last Days of Pompeii contests which close on December 10th, 1935. See one or both of these delightful pictures, then write a letter of not more than one hundred words telling which actor or actress you think gave the best performance in the picture.

Many beautiful and valuable prizes as announced in the previous issues of SCREEN BOOK will be given away. Among the awards is a grand prize of $500, two other cash prizes of $150 and $100; an expensive Crosley Merrimac radio; free course in Commercial Design or Illustrating from the famous Federal schools; many valuable cosmetics from such famous manufacturers as Max Factor, Harriet Hubbard Ayer, and Tattoo; and three beautiful Toastmaster Hospitality Trays, valued at $21.50 each.

Remember the deadline for contest entries—December 10th, 1935. Mail your letters to The Last Days of Pompeii Contest and The Three Musketeers Contest, SCREEN BOOK, 1501 Broadway, New York City.

NOW come the first group of winners in SCREEN BOOK's picture contest series. If your name is not on the list, remember that you still may win one of the many grand prizes!

First prize winner is Leola Borchard of St. Louis, who nominates Fred Astaire as the star who gives the best performance in Top Hat. Her letter reads:

"Although I thoroughly enjoyed the clever comedy work of Helen Broderick, Edward Everett Horton and Erik Rhodes, and was extremely pleased with the rhythmic dancing and singing of the lovely Ginger Rogers, to me Fred Astaire gave the best performance in Top Hat.

Not only were his singing and dancing in the Isn't It a Lovely Day, Cheek to Cheek and No Strings numbers delightful, his comedy work excellent, but his Sand Man number and his machine gun tapping in the Top Hat sequence were superb.

"Again may I say that Fred Astaire was tops in Top Hat."

Leola Borchard's simple, sincere letter is an example of the type of contribution which may bring you a prize. Read the list of winners, and remember, if you haven't yet entered, you may still have an opportunity to compete in The Three Musketeers and The Last Days of Pompeii Contests.

The following names comprise a complete list of Top Hat winners:

First—Ginger Rogers' lovely dressing table set—Leola Borchard, 5400 Goethe Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

Second—Helena Rubinstein cruise beauty bag—Leah Galehouse, 8624 Wade Park Ave., Cleveland, Ohio.

Third—Ginger Rogers party frock—Florence Rogers Froland, 9 Irvington St. (Apt. 4), Boston, Mass.

Fourth—Ginger Rogers afternoon frock—Connie Mier, 2319 North Weil St., Milwaukee, Wis.

Fifth—Ginger Rogers hostess pajamas—Margaret Jayne Burns, 1101 W. Tijeras St., Albuquerque, N. M.

Seventh—Ginger Rogers frock—Gladys Alford, 1435 North Veitch St., Clarendon, Va.

Eighth to fifteenth—Helena Rubinstein magic make-up vanity cases—Mrs. Paul Kossack, McGregor, Iowa; Mrs. A. M. Weil, 4625 N. Mervine St., Philadelphia, Pa.; Sara Machlis, 28 Remsen St., Brooklyn, N. Will Marriage Help Joan Crawford?

SUCH a crisis faced her shortly before she met and fell in love with Young Doug. Fortunately, for reasons I shall make clear, love and marriage saved her. Not the institutions in themselves, mind you, but rather the connection they offered with a particular man and what he symbolized to her.

A few months ago, infallible signs showed that Joan had reached a similar crisis. Well-meaning friends helped to bring it about. They flattered and joked and argued Joan away from the very concept of life that has always sustained her, made her a true artist, made her the Joan they, as well as the rest of us, love. Robbed her of her priceless aspiration, her passion for self-improvement.

This was partly the fault of Joan's own sensitive nature, as well as her tendency to concentrate her friendships in too small a circle, and trust those few friends too blindly. Like many self-critical persons, she is over-sensitive to criticism from others. Hence her friends, wishing to remain her friends—and can you blame them?—yielded to the temptation to flatter her. She had "arrived." No more need for self-improvement. No more goals ahead. Ah, how deadly!

Minute Interview

JEAN MUIR

"Why do so many young actresses in Hollywood fail? I don't feel overly qualified to offer an answer to such a critical question, but I might hazard an opinion that it is because too many girls come to Hollywood without the proper training. It is conceded that the surest route to success on the screen is by way of the stage, where one learns really important lessons. An actress must have a background—a foundation for her work. The only sure way to attain this is through behind-the-footlight experience."

Even the press has lately failed her by dealing out praise and pap instead of stimulating criticism. We flattered her. A colleague of mine, in describing nothing more important than Joan's arrival at a film première, wrote a blurb about her that would have made the most hardened press agent blush. Another remarked that he had "watched Joan develop from a jazz baby" into the ultimate in career, culture, charm and sophistication. Others have made thin excuses for bragging about Joan's charities, some even naming specific recipients of her bounty.

IN SHORT, if these friends have understood Joan's need, none of them has offered to sacrifice himself for the future of this brilliant, lovable, moody girl, this potentially great artist. Perhaps the only reason I dare do so, is that I am not of her close little circle. Whether she takes my frankness to heart or not, as a fan I can go on adoring her; as a veteran of the theater and confidant of some other great artists who lived on aspiration, I can still applaud her for what she has done, and may yet achieve.

So for her sake, and that of a few million fans who mean more to the real Joan than anything else in the world, except perhaps that fortunate young man, Franchot Tone, I say "Wake up, Joan! You have not reached the end. There are peaks beyond these. Regain your old humility, and carry on."

Understand that, while the crisis is purely emotional, more solid, tangible things are involved. Joan's career, health, happiness, her very life perhaps! The temporary change in her which such a crisis always brings has already wrung some boos and hisses from the fans. Joan's following is vast and loyal, but to retain it she must remain the alive, gracious, magnetic Joan. Neither her art nor her popularity can survive too prolonged an absence of this Joan. The grand dame rôle which some Hollywooders urge her to play would, of course, be fatal.

And she has jealous rivals who hope she will take that course; who propagandize toward that end through some of Joan's more gullible court jesters. How they must have chortled when they read Joan's published statement about changing from a certain much-criticized make-up to one more pleasing to her critics! She was quoted as saying, as though to make sure no one would think she was yielding to friendly advice, that she changed, "Not because I was criticized, not because each day I received stacks of letters asking me what I was doing to myself." What ammunition for her enemies!

NATURALLY, the valiant Joan who struggled and won against disheartening odds would not have said such a thing. Joan the aspiring but always humble seeker of artistic heights, could not have said it. It was a Joan, soul-wrung by a halt in her progress and growth, and assured by unwitting or uncourageous friends that being perfect, she had no more heights to conquer. The beautiful humility of your real artist, who knows that perfection will always remain just beyond his reach, but that his survival and happiness depend on courting it, was Joan's and will be hers again. I have seen her come through that previous, almost equally severe crisis, and know she will emerge triumphantly from this one.

That earlier crisis resulted from Joan's sudden realization of many accumulated dreams. As a child, watching from the wings of her father's little vaudeville house in Oklahoma, she had dreamed of being an actress. Now she was an actress! As the little kitchen slavey, she had dreamed of fine clothes. Now she had an ermine cloak, and all the other fine clothes she could desire! As a hoofer in the chorus she had visioned a showy, expensive car. Now it was hers! As a movie novice, she had prayed for a real long-term contract, featured billing, lots of dramatic acting to do. Now she had these things.

What next? Why, nothing! The goals she had set were reached. She matched the rudderless chaos of her life with the

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

Without Calomel—And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Your whole system is poisoned and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

Laxatives are only makeshifts. A mere bowel movement doesn't get at the cause. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." Harmless, gentle, yet amazing in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name. Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c at all drug stores. © 1935, C.M.Co.

chaos of Hollywood night-club life, but that helped very little. Her career lost flying speed, neared the fatal stalling point.

THEN she met an odd fellow who liked to smoke an old pipe, wear an old battered hat, scuffed shoes, baggy trousers; who spelled his art with a capital A and not only acted but wrote for pseudo-intellectual magazines, and made sketches which reminded one of John Barrymore's. He had lived abroad, spoke a fluent French, and talked mysteriously of a world of arty standards, values and intangibles new to Joan.

That she fell deeply in love with him was one thing. A far more important thing was that she abruptly glimpsed expansive new vistas of life to conquer. They stimulated her hungry mind. Culture! Art! Literature! Music! Travel! And a new goal in the very field of her own supremacy, acting. She'd not only be just a movie star, but one of the greatest!

Measured by the passionate human and artistic demands of Joan's idealism, many things in Doug's world were found wanting. She soon saw through the sham culture, the superficial poses of highbrowism, the disguises and trappings of the pretenders in art's court, for all their glib theatrical patter. But that made no difference now. Joan had her on a new flight of aspiration. Full sighted goals far enough ahead to launch of vitality and spirit, she charmed everyone she met, and poured herself without stint into all the obligations of a screen star's life. The spirit and energy and eagerness of her glowed from the screen. So the gods of true art smiled, and rewarded her with the love of literally millions of movie fans. Joan found herself one of the screen's great First Ten!

That Joan's marriage with Young Doug proved unsuccessful has little or nothing to do with the current crisis in her career. Long before their romance failed, Joan was beyond any further vital help or hinderance from it. The current difficulty is that she has again caught up with her aspirations; reached the farthest goal she set for herself. And has been deterred from seeing the necessity of setting new goals by a smoke-screen of blandishments.

How will Joan's marriage to Franchot Tone help? Much as her previous marriage did. It will give her a change of view. With Tone, she already glimpses some hitherto unguessed heights ahead. For example, her new ambition to do a stage play represents the realization that she could very well work toward a better histrionic technique, devoid of tricks, and artificialities. And toward a truer, broader understanding of life.

The Man Who Tames Mae West

little of McLaglen's private life. He doesn't ride on the social merry-go-round. He's a family man and his happiest hours are those spent with his young son, Andrew, who is a prep school boxer and tennis player of considerable skill, and his attractive daughter, Sheila, who is one of the smartest young horsewomen in Southern California.

He flushes every time he recalls his first talking picture. It was the Black Watch. The première was held at the exclusive Carthay Circle theater in Los Angeles. The lovely Myrna Loy played opposite Vic in one of those siren rôles identified with her earlier career. Her screen name was Yasmini. Sound was then in its crude stage. Everything went well until Vic was shown playing a tender love scene with Myrna. Then his voice suddenly blared from the screen in a high falsetto "Yeees-Minnie." It was an Andy Gump touch and the audience roared. Vic slipped out a side door of the theater and didn't stop walking until he reached his Beverly Hills home. His car remained in a parking lot beside the theater for days.

HE HAS six other brothers—all big fellows. Usually two or three of them can be found working around his Flintridge estate, or his beach place at La Jolla. One brother, Arthur, is a landscape artist. Another one, Cyril, is prominent on the British stage and screen.

Although he has participated in seven wars, Vic has never been caught recounting his battle experiences. One day an interviewer slipped into his bungalow on the Fox lot and saw six scrolls on the wall citing Vic for valour. Next time the interviewer gained access to the bungalow the scrolls had disappeared. Vic wouldn't discuss them.

He is tremendously proud of his American citizenship. He was a British subject until he took out the papers about two years ago. He comes of a military family and believes there will always be wars. In fact, he can hardly wait for the next one.

Really began his theatrical career as a strong man in a vaudeville act. He juggled battle axes, lifted weights, and offered to box or wrestle anybody in the audience.

Lady Diana Manners is responsible for his screen début. She selected him to portray a brute rôle in a British picture titled Call of the Road.

While he was Provost Marshal of Bagdad during the British occupation in wartime he adopted a native boy. The boy's name is Abdul. He is a grown man now and still with Vic. Acts as valet and trainer. Several years ago Vic had an idea that Abdul could box. He got him a bout with a tough Irishman from San Francisco Abdul didn't last long.

Vic doesn't like radios, but will listen to phonograph records for hours.

He is proud of his cooking skill. Likes to take a crowd of friends camping in the mountains and prepare all of the meals for them.

All digs to the contrary, his favorite actor is Eddie Lowe. He's going to miss working with Eddie. But he's getting a big price for his new glory.

Did you know that Adolphe Menjou and his wife, Verree Teasdale, while ill recently, occupied adjoining rooms in the same hospital. Both are well on the road to recovery.

HOLLYWOOD HOME HINTS

by JANE CARROLL

MADGE, little Cora Sue Collins' "big" sister, is bound and determined that Cora Sue grow up to be as good a housekeeper as she is an actress.

"Cora Sue is a great little help about the house on maid's day off," says Madge, "and both mother and I believe in starting her off with the right kind of training."

At present, Madge is giving Cora Sue a lesson on how to keep the stove in top shape. She says that Brillo is a particularly fine cleansing agent for all types of kitchenware. Along with the steel wool polish pads, there is a cake of soap on which you rub the pads before using. It is the soap that does the trick after the steel wool has gently loosened the dirt from the surface. Brillo is as safe as it is inexpensive.

"Big Sister Madge" shows Cora Sue Collins the tricks she can do with Brillo polish

THE rage of filling one's house with antiques has resulted in the appearance of a gadget that will repair broken furniture and chairs. Onslow Stevens, who is a great collector of antiques, says that Holdems end all worries as far as broken furniture is concerned. The best use to which Holdems can be put is in the repair of loose or broken chair rungs. They are especially good because they not only hold the rung in place forever after, but they completely disappear. All you do is to drive the rung back in its socket with a Holdems along side of the rung. The perforations in the little metal Holdem keep the rung in place for keeps.

MARY BRIAN thinks that there is nothing so unbecoming as the smell of onions on the hands after preparing a dish that requires their presence. And right she is with Zonite on the market, for Zonite will dispel the odor if the hands are rinsed in a mild solution of it. Another use for Zonite that very few people know about, is the fact that Zonite will remove ink stains. However care should be taken when removing ink stains from dyed material unless the material is dyed with fast colors.

ROSEMARY AMES has discovered the secret to "the perfect pie-crust."

"My recipe for a good baked pie shell is this: Take two Pyrex pie plates of the same size. Press the dough lightly into one to fit the pie plate and trim and flute the edges," says Miss Ames, "then set the second pie plate into the dough lined pie plate and bake. The weight of the top plate keeps the crust in place and prevents it from having a rough surface. You will be surprised at the result."

This is just one of the many advantages in using Pyrex heat resisting glassware in the preparation of tasty dishes.

HOLLYWOOD housekeepers all agree that every woman who cooks will be interested in the Roast Meat Thermometer, because of its efficient service in action. Another one is the Taylor Bath Thermometer. It is even more valuable in determining the temperature of laundry water, for silk hose and delicate lingerie than it is for taking bath temperatures. This idea of testing laundry wash water is not only very new but very important.

These thermometers are manufactured by the Taylor Instrument Companies.

IN SNOOPING around Hollywood kitchens, we have run into one thing that all well kept kitchens seem to have. What we saw were large supplies of A. P. W. Red Cross Towels used for the sole purpose of cleaning the grease off dishes before they are washed. These towels have proved to be one of the greatest soap savers on the market. They save soap because so much soap is not required in the dish water to cut grease. Then too, the dish water need not be changed so many times with each washing.

"AIR-CONDITIONED" FOR RAPID DRYING AND BETTER CURLS

that's why HOLLYWOOD STARS favor this CURLER

1. Patented end lock is a beveled disc . . . not a ball. Locks curler without stopping air-circulation. 2. Ends of curler never close. Ample air flow is assured. No other curler has these features. 3. Perforations increase ventilation. This complete "air-conditioning" insures rapid drying. Curls set swiftly. Hair dress takes less time . . . and curls are softer, lovelier, last longer.

CURRENT FILMS

THE MURDER OF DOCTOR HARRIGAN—★★★—A doctor is murdered and the search for the murderer leads through the hospital, the operating room, the morgue and other cheery spots, with Ricardo Cortez as the sleuthing interne. Excellent mystery film fare, with Mary Astor.—Warner.

TO BEAT THE BAND—★★½—Worn out plot about a foolish elderly man who is left a fortune provided he marries a widow within three days. Eric Blore does the best work. Hugh Herbert and Roger Pryor also in the cast.—Radio.

SHIP CAFE—★★★½—Carl Brisson at his best in the part of a ship stoker who becomes a famous singer. Excellent supporting cast includes Arline Judge, Mady Christians, William Frawley and Eddie Davis —Paramount.

I FOUND STELLA PARISH—★★—Plot concerns an actress who is involved in a murder and the ex-husband who threatens to expose her. Somewhat unbelievable, but dramatic in spots. Cast includes Kay Francis, Paul Lukas and Sybil Jason.—Warner.

THREE KIDS AND A QUEEN—★★★—Grand family entertainment with May Robson as the rich old lady who trades her affection for dogs in for the love of three orphans. In the cast are Frankie Darro, William Burrud and Henry Armetta.—Universal.

ANNIE OAKLEY—★★★—Barbara Stanwyck scores a hit as the dead shot show woman in this story built around the life of Buffalo Bill. There are many good laughs in this picture, and the cast, including Preston Foster and Melvyn Douglas, does a good job.—Radio.

IT'S IN THE AIR—★★★—The team of Jack Benny and Una Merkel click solidly in the story of a racketeer attempting to evade income taxes. Nat Pendleton and Ted Healy also in the cast. —Metro.

SHE COULDN'T TAKE IT—★★—Nice little picture concerning the silly stunts of a rich family, with Joan Bennett, George Raft, Billie Burke and Walter Connolly in satisfactory rôles.—Columbia.

LITTLE AMERICA—★★★—Whether you believe a Byrd in the theater is worth one in the Arctic circle, you should sit up in your chair over a few scenes in the filming of Admiral Byrd's latest expedition.—Paramount Release.

CHARLIE CHAN IN SHANGHAI—★★★—Another in the popular Warner Oland series, this time concerning Chan's battle against a powerful dope ring and the solving of a murder mystery.—20th Century-Fox.

HI GAUCHO—★★—Rod La Rocque is colorful as an Argentine bandit in this story of a romance between son and daughter of rival ranchers, but the picture can hardly be rated more than a "time-passer."—Radio.

IN PERSON—★★★★—Ginger Rogers does one of the best acting jobs of her career as the movie star who wants to get away from it all and then finds herself knee-deep in romance with a man she meets in a secluded mountain resort. George Brent takes a bow as a fine leading man.—Radio.

ONE WAY TICKET—★★—In which the daughter of a prison guard falls in love with an inmate. Walter Connolly and Peggy Conklin in leading rôles.—Columbia.

THE MELODY LINGERS ON—★★★—A sentimental story about a mother who gives all for her son, with Josephine Hutchinson, George Houston and John Halliday.—Reliance.

STARS OVER BROADWAY—★★★—Watch this young man, James Melton, who has a leading rôle in this picture. He is big and handsome, and as the hotel porter who is groomed for opera singing by a typical Broadway agent he displays one of the finest voices ever heard on the screen. Pat O'Brien does a grand job, and for a change wins the girl in the case—Jean Muir.—Warner.

PADDY O'DAY—★★½—A pleasing enough little film about an orphan girl and what she does for the lives of others, with Jane Withers, Pinky Tomlin and George Givot. — 20th Century-Fox.

DR. SOCRATES—★★½—Not quite up to the usual Paul Muni standard, but entertaining enough. Story concerns a country doctor who runs afoul of gangsters and falls in love in spite of himself. In the cast are Ann Dvorak, Barton McLane and Robert Barrat.—Warner.

MAN OF IRON—★★—The story of an iron worker who becomes company manager and in dramatic circumstances returns at last to his old job. Barton McLane, in his first big rôle, does well.—Warner.

TRANSATLANTIC TUNNEL—★★★★—Excellent story about the building of a tunnel to America from England, with a great cast including Richard Dix, Madge Evans, George Arliss and Walter Huston.—GB.

What method is used in sending yours and Frances Langford's taps over the air each Friday night?

The drummer is a friend of mine.

Do you prefer blondes or brunettes?

Both—also redheads.

Do you know a girl named Iness Forbes who was in your class at school?

Yes—and why doesn't she drop an old friend a letter?

Do you really broadcast from a Hollywood hotel or is it done from the studio?

From the radio studio.

What is your favorite flower?

The gardenia.

Who are your best friends in the picture colony?

I have several valued friends. Perhaps Joe E. Brown and Regis Toomey are my closest friends.

What breeds of dogs have you? What are the dogs' names?

I have a police dog named, Ranger, and a greyhound called, Nancy. Then there is a cat named, G-String.

What musical instruments do you play?

I play all wind instruments, all reed instruments, the banjo, the guitar and I can two-finger a piano to death!

For what person in Hollywood have you the most admiration?

Among others, I have great admiration for Marion Davies. I know of no one who does more for the happiness of other people.

Do you mind kissing on the screen?

Why should I mind kissing?

What, in your opinion, constitutes beauty in a girl?

I have seen homely girls look beautiful. If her eyes reveal character, charm and intelligence, her other physical features need not be perfect to give her beauty.

How does it feel to be so famous?

I detest false modesty and please don't accuse me of it when I say that I very seldom give a thought to the fact that my name is widely publicized. When it does occur to me, the thought both frightens and gratifies.

Why Loretta Young is Forced to Retire

time she returned to Hollywood from that Northern location trip, she was completely exhausted. But she gathered her forces, and even before she completed the studio scenes for this picture, she was already preparing for The Crusades.

And so while she was still before the cameras for the Jack London epic, she was fitting costumes and learning lines for The Crusades.

At noon, instead of resting, she stood motionless while Travis Banton, the Paramount designer, fitted her wardrobe. From early morning until late, she gave no thought to herself—pushed away that tide of weariness which was engulfing her.

BUT Loretta has never possessed the physical resources of other stars. She is naturally fragile, and so sensitively attuned to her rôles that each picture imposed its burden of tenseness on her.

Before her nervous mechanism was stabilized, before she was fully developed physically, directors were shrieking at her—demanding a seasoned performance, forgetting that she was a child. She was frightened, hurt, bewildered—incapable by the very virtue of her youth to realize that any achievement exacts its toll. Unquestionably this early experience contributed to her fragility.

In one of her very first pictures, Laugh Clown Laugh, she was playing opposite Lon Chaney. "You're a terrible actress!" the director screamed at her one day before hundreds of extras.

Chaney found her behind the set, hanging on to a guy rope, sobbing hysterically. He let her cry—and when she was quiet he put a tender arm around her shoulders—and said:

"You've got something. The director knows it. That's why he expects so much from you. Don't forget you're in the hardest game in the world. Never let anybody see you cry. If you're shoved around, don't show your bruises. If your heart is kicked around, pick it up, brush it off, and then go on your way as though nothing had happened."

She was an actress—and so she could never be too tired! Could never give anything less than her best before the inexorable camera!

UNTIL the last few months, no one suspected how utterly exhausted she was—how very ill she was! For Loretta, with her Chaney-given philosophy, could not syndicate her troubles.

She has never spared herself—nor thought of herself. Whatever came to her she considered as so much capital. She once said to me:

"No experience is a waste. I know personally that everything which has happened to me has given me something, even love which ended. The mind is a reservoir. From it you can draw memories which will illuminate difficult situations as they arise."

And even though the price Loretta Young is today paying for stardom seems high, yet I believe that out of the imposed rest, out of the physician-imposed exile, a greater Loretta Young will come. With a poignancy fortified by strength; with an insight which long hours of inactivity are bound to bring her.

and took her growing daughter with her to see plays whenever possible.

GINGER became interested in the dancers who came, now and then, to the leading vaudeville theater in the city. When alone, she would practice the steps she had seen. And her mother encouraged her.

A neighbor, an old-time vaudeville dancer, became interested in the child. With other neighbor children, she would go to his place after school hours and on Saturdays and Sundays. The old fellow would teach them all patiently. Suddenly Ginger became more proficient than the other children. He gave her especial attention. Mrs. Rogers would often watch her daughter go through many difficult steps.

Her shrewd mother took her on a national vaudeville tour, and Ginger became the sensation of New York while still in her teens, just as she is now the sensation of the films with the incomparable Fred Astaire as her dancing partner. Ginger's mother is still with her, guiding her carefully through her magnificent career.

JANET GAYNOR'S work in The Farmer Takes a Wife proves that she is still an actress of outstanding ability. She is demure, sincere, and a girl of natural charm.

She came to Hollywood when she was about eighteen with her mother and step-father, the immortal "Jonesey." Harry Jones was an electrician who had faith in his lovely step-daughter.

She worked four months as an extra player at Universal, and was then given a "bit." Jonesey prophesied great things for her. Long after the film was released, and Jonesey was about to admit that he was a poor prophet, the telephone rang. It was Universal Studios calling. Janet excitedly hurried from the telephone. Between laughter and tears she kissed her mother and Jonesey, and then jubilantly told them she had been given the leading rôle in a two-reel comedy.

She played in five more comedies. When they were completed, Jonesey said— "The screen is losing the best part of your ability. It does not bring out your personality sufficiently. We'll keep our eyes open for a drama, and run an ad about you."

After a family conference, twenty-five dollars was invested in a quarter page advertisement in a local magazine. It told an indifferent public that Janet Gaynor was now available for dramatic rôles. Her photograph was inserted. A casting director turned the pages of the magazine idly while waiting for the completion of his telephone call. He stopped at Janet's picture. Her eyes had arrested his attention. She might be the leading lady he wanted for The Johnstown Flood.

After the casting director had studied the little ex-bundle wrapper's photograph, Jonesey heard that the Fox Film Company wanted a winsome, appealing type of girl to play the lead in The Johnstown Flood. She would need to be able to ride. And Janet had never ridden a horse except on a merry-go-round. Such a small detail made no difference in the faith of Jonesey. He appeared at the casting office with his demure step-daughter.

"I've seen your picture," said the casting director to Janet, "You may be the girl I want," and then, "Can you ride a horse?"

Jonesey took no chance on Janet's answer being in the negative. He said with emphasis—"Ride a horse! This girl was practically born on a horse's back!"

The Recording Angel undoubtedly smiled, and forgot to write the white lie down against Jonesey. And the casting director was convinced. She was given a comedy screen test. When this was approved, she was asked to enact a dramatic rôle. And she got the part.

When the film was released, Janet was given a long term contract—at a hundred dollars a week. Later she received many thousands for the same period, and has never been with another film company.

ZASU PITTS is considered by many competent critics as one of the two or three greatest film comediennes. We will leave such opinions with the critics. I have known ZaSu for years. To me, she is one of the most interesting women alive. W. C. Fields (when I told him that I was writing this article for SCREEN BOOK) told me this: "Say, for me, she's a great actress also."

ZaSu had two aunts named Eliza and Susan. The last two letters of one name and the first two of the other were put together and given her at birth. She came to Hollywood from a town in Northern California, after taking part in high school plays.

Frances Marion, the great scenario writer, happened to see her in a casting office. Women like men, can be big at times. Frances secured her a small comedy rôle. She was fired as "not being funny enough." The splendid Frances still had faith. She got her a better part in The Little Princess. Many have since claimed the honor of discovering ZaSu. But to Frances Marion goes all the credit.

ZaSu was next given work with Charlie Chaplin, at one of his usual salaries of fifty dollars a week. She remained for six months, and appeared on the set with him once—for ten minutes!

TOO shy to mingle with other members of the cinema troupe, ZaSu brought her lunch in a paper bag. And ate alone. Chaplin did not renew her contract. She became an extra, and later played a small rôle with Douglas Fairbanks. Heartbreaking months followed. Always the letters of encouragement came from her mother.

Eric von Stroheim, in search of a girl to play the part of Trina in Frank Norris' Greed, heard of ZaSu. A test was made. And the Austrian director was satisfied. The powers that be thought for a while that ZaSu did not have enough "sex appeal" for the rôle. But von Stroheim won. In those far-off days, a rôle in a Stroheim film attracted attention. ZaSu worked a year, and became famous as an excellent tragic actress.

The company gave her a contract for a year. It was not renewed at the end of that period. In despair she went from one insignificant rôle to another. A year of idleness followed. When it seemed as though she would be forced to give up the struggle, her mother moved to Hollywood. And then—the talkies came. Many players who did not have "speaking voices" faded from the films. ZaSu, like many others, was troubled about the future. At last, she was given a rôle in The Dummy with Ruth Chatterton.

Dreading the ordeal of "the mike," which might wreck her screen career, she hesitated to go before it. Ruth Chatterton, whose deeds of kindness should be written in letters of gold, sensed ZaSu's fear. She encouraged her and held ZaSu's hand while ZaSu "talked into the mike." During the next year, she worked in nearly forty talkies. The rest of her story is an ornament to the screen.

Perhaps if I were asked why these three women are so interesting, I would answer, "Because they are so human".

ZaSu's mother is still with her. Like Ginger and Janet, she is fortunate in this respect.

This is just an advance tip for you. So watch the war news and be prepared for a radical change in feminine styles if it continues indefinitely.

Do you remember the old automobile veils? Don't be surprised if they come back into their own. You'll see Dietrich wearing a modern version of this old-fashioned fad in her new picture. The veil is a voluminous affair of chiffon, attached to a visor. It drapes about the hair and the ends are crossed under the chin and tossed nonchalantly over the shoulder. You know how Dietrich has a flair for starting things in a clothes way, so maybe she'll be responsible for bringing the good old automobile veil back.

I MUST tell you about the unusual looking material I saw in Travis Banton's studio the other day. It was of a rather heavy black wool with monkey fur woven into it in such a way that wisps of the fur stick out all over it. Dietrich took one look at it and said: "I must have some of that." So it's going to turn into a tailored coat dress for la Dietrich and she'll carry a squashy little monkey fur muff with it. Perhaps I should add that at this writing there's no other material like it in captivity so there's no chance of your copying it.

Ethel Merman's wearing some nice evening things in Anything Goes. One is a solid beaded gown with fringe woven in with the beads. It's the color of moonstones and the way the fringe is woven into the material gives grace and movement to the frock. She also wears a very gorgeous dance dress of yellow chiffon with epaulets of orange paradise.

In The Bride Comes Home Claudette Colbert plays a girl who had money before the picture started but loses it in the opening reel which limits the Colbert wardrobe no end. She does have a chance to wear a lovely draped negligee of sombre blue velvet which will intrigue you.

In Riff-Raff Jean Harlow is portraying a girl who works in a tuna cannery with the result that her clothes are just as un-glamorous as you'd expect them to be. For her personal wardrobe Jean has joined the tailored suit caravan. And I guess she must have been reading those ads about the advantages of two pants suits because she has three skirts to wear with each jacket so that she can switch them around and make additional costumes. Her suits are mostly in fog-blue and gray and there's one black broadcloth which is very chic. With these suits Jean slings a fox fur over her shoulder and wears the very maddest hats possible.

Madge Evans is back in Hollywood and she was telling me about attending the Paris openings. One house was featuring fox tails . . . on hats, dangling from wrists and handbags, and even on skirts. "The models looked like they were doubling for Daniel Boone," says Madge. She took one look, decided she didn't like the fox tail effect, and went out and bought herself a new Scotty instead.

This reminds me that Betty Furness insists that a dog is a smart accessory this season. She suggests a Scotty to go with a plaid skirt, a police dog to go with tweeds, a Russian wolf hound to go with a velvet suit. Of course that's just a suggestion. You don't have to take it too seriously.

However, I think you might like to follow Betty's new buckle idea. She's wearing wooden buckles bearing her carved initials on sport pumps. They look very chic and different.

Maureen O'Sullivan is wearing white cellophane hair ribbons for evening. She folds the cellophane so that it looks like a narrow silver strand in her dark hair. Since cellophane is difficult to tie she makes a separate bow and pins it on where the ends of the cellophane join. You can try various colors.

And that's all for this time. I'll be telling you more next month. Meantime, let me know how you like this month's shopping tips.

Taking a peek behind the scenes at pictures and personalities in the movie parade

Ned Sparks

Bette Davis

Franchot Tone

Anna Sten

WITH apologies to such genial gentlemen as W. C. Fields, Hugh Herbert and Edward Everett Horton, we throw Ned Sparks' hat in the ring as we nominate him as the funniest man in Hollywood. One flash at Ned's vacant glare suspended somewhere between the chin and forehead of his dour contenance is laughing gas to any picture audience. In Collegiate, he steals the show from Joe Penner and Jack Oakie, and there's a reason! Everyone has at least one friend who specializes in cryptic and cynical views. That makes Ned twice as funny as any other comedian—when his public watches his act, it always laughs subconsciously at a couple of other fellows.

● There is a rare treat in store for ambitious young people, thanks to the courtesy of our always generous Bette Davis. Bette consented to pose for a series of remarkable pictures in which, with the aid of studio coaches, she reveals a good many tricks that must be mastered by a capable actress. The first of these pictures will appear in the next issue.

● We had a long talk with Franchot Tone the other day and asked him a lot of impertinent questions. Among them —"Do you think as a good many of your admirers, that you aren't getting enough important rôles?" Strangely enough, Franchot replied that he was well satisfied. "What about Lives of a Bengal Lancer and Mutiny on the Bounty?" he asked. "I couldn't ask for anything better. People seem to suffer the delusion that there are only two important rôles in any picture—the male and female leads. I'd rather have a solid, meaty supporting rôle than to star in a series of indifferent films."

Mr. Tone's logic doesn't need overhauling, and his comment should be a dose of good medicine for those players who are inclined to fret about their assignments.

● Another person who impresses us mightily is Jean Muir. When she attended the world première of A Midsummer Night's Dream, her car was mobbed by admirers who poked their autograph books through the windows, and even climbed on top the car to get a peek at her. Asked if this demonstration didn't tickle her vanity, Jean retorted. "Of course I like to be popular. Any actress does. But it was all a result of tremendous interest in the picture. If I were to walk down the street in the midst of a St. Patrick's day parade, nobody would even notice me."

● There has been a good deal of speculation as to just why Anna Sten failed to hit her stride in American pictures. Our hunch is that Hollywood, with its yen to make people over, did too good a job with Sten. The picture of her on this page gives a hint of how she really looked before the studio applied the veneer that made her less the vital, dynamic woman and more the pretty doll. Sometimes Hollywood does wonders with its magic, but in Anna Sten's case the prescription was an overdose of the wrong thing.

● You may not know it, but screen entertainment is undergoing a great change. First came Fred Astaire, and after him the explosive rhythm of hundreds of tap dancers. Now the big parade has changed and into the spotlight come Lawrence Tibbett, Lily Pons, Gladys Swarthout, Nino Martini and a host of other great singers. Hollywood sings a song of suspense these days, wondering that new public taste will demand an entirely different set-up of stars and pictures. It isn't generally realized, but a good many stars are biting their crimson nails these days, becoming desperate for jobs. In days of affluence, they lived to the hilt. Now, with dwindling incomes, they are in a spot. It is but one tragic note in the endless Hollywood symphony.

● What, we wonder, are the blue-nosed critics of the movies doing these days? Still green in memory is the last onslaught in which the movies took a worse beating than Maxie Baer the night he gave up trying to dodge the hundred fists of Joe Louis. Even the most rabid performer will have to admit that with such pictures as A Midsummer Night's Dream, A Tale of Two Cities, Metropolitan and countless other great films, Hollywood takes itself out of purgatory. The movies today are not only a perfect entertainment medium for the masses, but a potent educational factor too important to be affected by the Lilliputian jabs of critical busybodies.

● Like any other ardent movie-goer, we have our pet peeves and particular passions. At the moment, we are wondering—

Why Dick Powell doesn't demand that people stop using the name "Dickie" in interviews and over the air. Also why he permitted such a line as "Dickie Bird" which occurred in Shipmates Forever. . . . Why a certain few stars insist on making public appearances with their ex-husbands. It isn't good publicity, and it serves to spread a false idea—namely, that there isn't such a thing as happy marriage in Hollywood. . . . Why some studio doesn't give the talented Regis Toomey a really good break. . . . Why Jan Kiepura, after being so agreeable in New York, kicked up so much temperament in Hollywood, without realizing that his antics would be featured in newspapers everywhere. He should realize that it pays a newcomer to have everyone on his side.

The SECRET of CLAUDETTE COLBERT'S CHARM

No need to . .
HIBERNATE *
this winter -

WEBSTER SAYS —
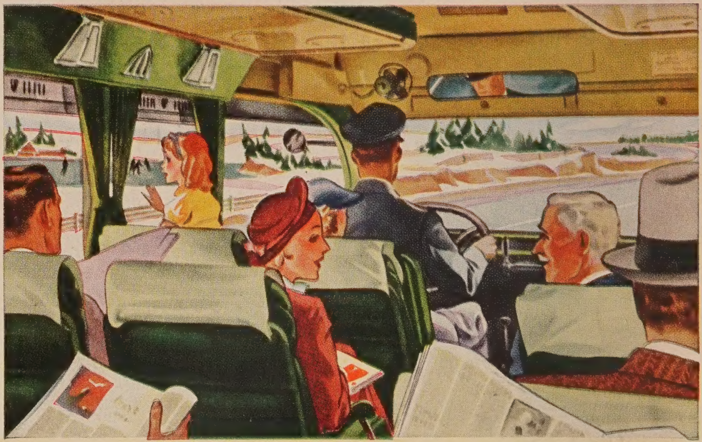
* HIBERNATE: to spend the winter in close quarters-in a state of inactivity



—when Greyhound offers warm and pleasant trips at such low cost

"Hibernate" is a word applied chiefly to bears—who retreat into caves or hollow trees when the first snow flies, and stay there until the spring thaw, when they come blinking out, in very bad humor. Many people used to be like that. Winter kept them cooped up at home—their cars locked in garages, or confined to city streets.

Greyhound has changed the whole picture. For who wants to be a prisoner of winter, when trips to any part of America can be warm, relaxed, pleasant—and cost very, very little? Floods of Tropic-Aire heat keep the temperature right—cushioned chairs recline to the most restful angle—expert drivers competently guide each big, safe Greyhound coach.

Millions of Americans are finding winter a more friendly season, when it is broken by interesting trips . . . to visit friends, or to soak up the vital sunshine of Florida, Gulf Coast, and California. We invite you to prove the comfort of Greyhound winter trips for yourself.

"DUART WAVES have the Natural Beauty that Hollywood Stars Demand"

says PERC WESTMORE famed hairstylist and cosmetician of Warner Bros. Studios

"No one," says Mr. Westmore, "is in a better position to judge the results of various permanent waving methods than a motion picture hairstylist.

"Of all permanents, we have found that Duart gives the hair the most lustrous—the most natural wave. It is wonderful to see how hair that has been Duart waved time after time, keeps all its soft silk-like texture and sparkling sheen.

"Here in Hollywood we have every beauty aid known to the profession. All except the finest are cast aside. For a motion picture star doesn't dare take chances with her beauty. And she wants to be doubly sure that we carefully guard her hair. A make-up can be corrected easily—a gown replaced quickly. But if the beauty of a star's hair is once marred by a poor permanent it causes months of grief. We feel a star's most important beauty feature is her hair.

"No doubt this is why the Duart method of permanent waving has for so long been the choice of the Hollywood stars."

DUART WAVES ARE THE CHOICE OF THE HOLLYWOOD STARS

HUMANITY'S GREATEST LOVE STORY!

"A life for a life you love." So vowed this handsome idler! In that terror-haunted cell he asked himself what is the greatest sacrifice he could make for the woman he loved . . .

The producers of "Mutiny On The Bounty", "China Seas" and other big hits of this season are happy to bring you another million dollar thrill-drama! Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has re-created for the screen, in breath-taking realism, one of the great romantic dramas of all time, penned by Charles Dickens whose "David Copperfield" was the most treasured picture of 1935. We now confidently predict that "A Tale of Two Cities" will be the best-loved romance of 1936!

TODAY'S GOSSIP

Left: A remarkable close-up of Katharine Hepburn on the set of Sylvia Scarlett. During scenes which show her masquerading as a boy in this film, Katy used no make-up

By the Star Reporter

SHIRLEY TEMPLE, despite fabulous offers to broadcast for the biggest radio networks, has spoken but five words over the air. The occasion was the dedication of the Will Rogers Memorial Stage at Twentieth Century-Fox. She said: "I loved Mr. Rogers, too."

BILL POWELL is on the war path about taxes. Pointing out the fact that an actor's career is short-lived and his maximum earning capacity even shorter, he states that it is the height of something or other when an actor has to give up in federal and state income taxes a full seventy-five per cent of his gross income. He has announced the possibility that he may live in England six months out of every year, establishing a home there and returning to this country for only two pictures a season.

Jean Harlow is said to be planning a trip to Europe about the same time Bill jaunts over there on a vacation soon. Despite the denials constantly uttered by both, gossip along the Hollywood curb is to the effect that Bill and Jean are about to create a news item that hints more of June than of January.

CLAUDETTE COLBERT had a new "electric eye" installed at the entrance to her home so that her car might pass through without the necessity of anyone alighting to open gates. The apparatus opens the gates whenever an approaching car's lights flash on a photo cell. The device was installed to prevent possible hold-ups when Claudette returns home late at night.

FRANCHOT TONE has had the unique experience of talking to a man three thousand miles away, without the aid of telephone or radio. "After Mutiny on the Bounty was finished," he relates, "Charles Laughton went to England. I was called back to re-take a scene in which I talked with Laughton. I talked to him, all right, as you see on the screen, but actually I didn't talk to him at all, if you get what I mean." It's simple enough when you know that Franchot re-made only his portion of the conversation.

PAT O'BRIEN was honored with a unique birthday party the other day in his dressing room. Jimmy Cagney brought a huge cake and a big tray of chicken sandwiches from his home. Phil Regan showed up with two cases of bottled beer. Howard Hawks, the director of Ceiling Zero, brought pickles and olives, and Hugh Herbert brought Frank McHugh. Pat has been getting plenty of mail from fans applauding the fact that for the first time in many pictures the fade-out showed him winning the girl. It happened in Stars Over Broadway.

CURIOUS FACTS

Mickey Mouse, in Japan is known as Miki Kouchi. In Sweden he is Musse Pig, and in Germany Michael Maus. . . . Shirley Temple will sing in five languages in her next picture, Captain January. . . . Fred Allen, popular comedian of Thanks a Million, sports powder marks on his right hand, the result of being accidentally shot by a property man. . . . Nino Martini, who scored a hit in Here's to Romance, has a brother who looks very much like him. The brother sings, too, almost as well as Martini himself . . . experimentation with a new "make-up mask" may develop into an invention that will keep stars from growing old, as far as wrinkles are concerned. At forty, they'll look like twenty.

"ANYTHING GOES"

It's the top! It's a Crosby honey!
It's the top! It's a Ruggles funny!
It's the grandest show the screen could ever boast!
It had Broadway cheering — Its tunes we're hearing from coast to coast! —
It's the top! It's got Merman singing!
It's the top! What applause it's bringing!
It's a perfect smash, a hit, a crash — don't stop —
You'll be shoutin' when you see it —
IT'S THE TOP.

They're the Tops . . . Bing Crosby and Ethel Merman, star of the Broadway stage hit "Anything Goes," sing the famous Cole Porter tunes, "You're the Tops," "I Get a Kick Out of You," and a bunch of other new ones.

Clever People, These Chinese . . . they know this laddy is America's Public Enemy No. 13 (Charlie Ruggles, to you!) ...ace laugh-getter in "Anything Goes".

Only a Sample . . . of the kind of chorines Dance Director Leroy Prinz has collected and trained for the chorus in "Anything Goes".

This Is Not a Cigarette Ad . . . but a shot of Bing Crosby and Charlie Ruggles, thinking over their misdeeds in the ship's jail.

THE 3 MINUTE WAY

"My system cleared of accumulated poisons the easy way"

Why put up with jolting, harsh, "all-at-once" cathartics that may upset and shock your whole system! Take your laxative the 3-minute way—the modern, pleasant, easy way to clear your system of accumulated poisons. Just chew FEEN-A-MINT for three minutes before going to bed. It's those three minutes of chewing that make the difference between FEEN-A-MINT and other laxatives. You have no cramping pains—no nausea—no unpleasant after-effects. Its utterly tasteless medicinal content goes to work gradually. You wake up fresh as the dawn. In fact FEEN-A-MINT—the three-minute way—is the ideal family laxative—and it costs only 15* cents and 25* cents for a big family-size box.

RUDY VALLEE, who when he does another picture will face the cameras in the East because he doesn't care to go to Hollywood, is partially responsible for the success of James Melton, discovered in Stars Over Broadway. Vallée told Melton he ought to be in pictures, so after thinking it over, Jimmy accepted a bid. Melton lives in an apartment just above Lawrence Tibbett, and admits that if he and Tibbett both practiced their songs at the same time they'd be the two greatest lease-breakers on record.

MARLENE DIETRICH recently received a present of a smart new moderately priced automobile. She promptly gave it to her hair-dresser, who didn't have a car but wanted one.

WILL ROGERS, JR., son of the late beloved Will, has long been a friend of Fred Stone's children. The children were brought up together, but that doesn't mean that when Will and Paula Stone go places together that there is a romance. Young Bill is in the newspaper business as part owner and managing editor of the Beverly Hills Citizen.

BING CROSBY recently bought another horse. This one he christened Friend Andy, after his pal, Andy Devine. But the nag probably will never race at the famous Santa Anita track because he has proved so vicious and temperamental that stable workers hardly dare enter his stall. The horse probably objects to being named after so mild a chap as Andy Devine.

NELSON EDDY has an odd habit of moving his body curiously when he sings a high note. He calls it "shaking it out," and has spent hours trying to cure himself of the habit. Watch him in Rose Marie, and see if he slips up. Eddy isn't the only one, however. In Mutiny on the Bounty you can see by watching closely that Clark Gable takes an almost imperceptible breath before speaking. Garbo will drum on a table softly with her fingers if she stands near one in a picture. Claudette Colbert "holds hands" with herself.

JOHN DOE isn't his real name, but he's a very popular leading man—and half of Hollywood is laughing with him and at him just now.

It seems that he was signed to play a romantic lover opposite a certain screen siren . . . and so-o-o-o . . . when the time came for the love scenes, he put his whole heart into his work and did a very satisfactory job of osculation. Feeling a proper pride in his craftsmanship, he walked over to the producer after the scene was finished and said, "How am I doin'?"

No Wonder Franchot Tone calls BETTE DAVIS

"DANGEROUS"

LOOK WHAT SHE SAYS, IN HER LATEST PICTURE, ABOUT LIFE, LOVE, MEN!

"I'm not lady enough to lie! Loving me is like shaking hands with the devil—the worst kind of luck. But you'll find I'm the woman you'll always come back to!"

"I've never had any pity for men like you. You with your fat little soul and smug face! Why I've lived more in a day than you'll ever dare live."

"It's going to be your life or mine! If you're killed, I'll be free . . . If I'm killed, it won't matter any longer... and if we both die—good riddance."

In their first film together!
THE PICTURE OF THE MONTH

YESSIR, "Dangerous" is the label Franchot tags on the screen's famous blonde temptress. And that's the title Warner Bros. have selected for their first picture together!

If you thought Bette gave men a piece of her mind in "Of Human Bondage", "Bordertown", and "Front Page Woman", wait 'til you hear her cut loose as "the woman men always come back to", in "Dangerous".

The way she talks about them—particularly about Mr. Tone—is going to be the talk of movie-fan gatherings. Maybe you'll say she's right when you see what men did to her life. But you'll certainly agree that this story of a woman whose love was a jinx to men, is the surprise package of the New Year.

Besides Bette and Franchot, Margaret Lindsay, Alison Skipworth, John Eldredge, and Dick Foran are smartly spotted in a big cast directed by Alfred E. Green. There's no use telling you you must see "Dangerous" Because you may not be able to get through the crowds to the box-office when the news of this daring drama gets around town!

BRIGHT EYE DEAS
by Jane Heath

Is THERE some one for whose benefit you'd like to look especially lovely, evenings, in your lamp-lit living-room? Then this simple experiment may give you a brand-new idea on how to do it:

Just arrange your lamplight—make up your face as usual (omitting all eye make-up to start with). Then take your KURLASH and curl the lashes of one eye. Touch them with LASHTINT. And shade the same eyelid with a little SHADETTE. Now—inspect your face closely in a hand mirror, as the light falls across it. One side will seem softer, clearer, more subtly colored. Because the eye you have beautified looks larger, brighter, with longer, darker lashes. That's eye beauty! You'll never neglect it—or KURLASH—the little gadget that curls lashes without heat, cosmetics, or practice. ($1 at good stores.)

Lashtint by Kurlash
Kurlene for eyelashes by Kurlash

LASHTINT, the liquid mascara, may be applied while the lashes are being curled. Touch the little glass rod to them as they are held in the rubber bows of KURLASH. LASHTINT will darken the tips delicately and it doesn't crack, stiffen, wash or weep off—in black, brown, or blue, $1.

Another clever trick is to rub KURLENE on the lashes before you curl them, so they'll be silken and full of dancing rainbows. KURLENE is a scientific formula for eyelash luxuriance. 50c and $1.

Today's Gossip

"Not so well," retorted the producer with considerable heat, "you're fired!"

Which all goes to prove that leading men should always be told beforehand which producers are in love with which stars.

JANET GAYNOR will have a new and extremely popular leading man in the person of Robert Taylor, who has been hitting the high road to fame ever since his appearance in Broadway Melody of 1936. The new picture will be Small Town Girl, from the novel by Ben Ames Williams. This marks the return of Janet to the screen after a considerable absence, her last film being The Farmer Takes a Wife, in which she appeared opposite Henry Fonda. Studio officials predict great popularity for this new romantic team.

ROBERT TAYLOR and Irene Hervey vehemently deny that their romance is destined for the altar. But those wiseacres who fix the odds for Hollywood's marital handicap are willing to give you two to one, that studio objections to the contrary, Irene will be Mrs. Taylor before another year is spent.

"Else, why," they demand, "is Robert currently haunting architects' offices, shopping for land and planning to build a rather elaborate house?"

GINGER ROGERS—here's a chance to tell one on "ye editor"—wears the darndest disguise in her new picture, In Person, that's ever been seen on the screen. You see her put it on, black wig, false teeth and all, you know it's Ginger and yet you'd bet your right eye that it isn't.

Well, she donned the black wig one day before the picture was underway, and had herself announced to Bill Seiter, the director, as a Parisienne pal of one of the big producers. Admitted to the office, she applied for a rôle and poor Seiter bit hook, line and sinker. He hummed and hawed and finally said—to the lady with the cute accent. . . .

"Well, I can't do much . . . but there's one little rôle . . . it's not much . . . and I'm sorry. . . ."

"What do you mean offering me a small rôle!" shouted Ginger in her own voice—and Bill hasn't forgiven her yet.

MARLENE DIETRICH and the Paramount publicity department are at war again and the shapely Marlene has declared that she will give no more interviews. Or has she? The other rumor that's making the rounds is that the publicity department don't want her to be interviewed because she talks TOO MUCH.

JEANETTE MacDONALD, being superstitious, won't talk about her plans for the future, but it's quite generally known that she has received some very, very attractive offers for an appearance in grand opera and that she will probably make her début within the next few months. Following her operatic engagement, she plans to pursue her ambitions for a concert career.

For more than two years she has been studying Italian and German and acquiring an operatic repertoire. It's also significant that in her forthcoming picture, Rose Marie, she sings several arias from Romeo and Juliet.

SHIRLEY TEMPLE, according to authentic figures recently revealed, now receives more money than any child actress ever earned previously in the history of the stage or screen. Her total earnings, from advertising royalties and screen salary, are roughly computed at $5,000 a week. Jackie

The Male of the Month

ROBERT TAYLOR

With Irene Dunne in The Magnificent Obsession, Robert Taylor becomes a sensation

By Clark Warren

ROBERT TAYLOR, whose real name is S. Arlington Brugh, would be the first to deny that he has suddenly become the screen's most outstanding young male actor in the ranks of newcomers. But, with his appearance in The Magnificent Obsession, it becomes apparent that there are few veteran actors in Hollywood who stand higher in public esteem.

Contrary to the imaginings of writers who have a habit of distorting the truth in an effort to make a better story, Robert Taylor did not arrive at his present status merely through a lucky break. Behind him stand years of ambitious planning and hard work.

From his prep school days, Bob has concentrated on the business of becoming an actor. At Doane College in Nebraska, he really set out on his career. He became manager of the Doane players, which he later organized as a stock company and took on tour all over the state. Three years later, still without a thought of becoming a screen actor, Bob entered Pomona College in California, bent on hard study and further dramatic work. As the star of school plays here, he soon caught the eye of talent scouts. Only his sound training in the fundamentals of acting saved him from being cast aside as are so many other young actors who sign for screen work but whose faces never reach the screen.

Broadway Melody of 1936 brought a blizzard of approving letters from all over the country. Now, appearing with Irene Dunne in The Magnificent Obsession, he becomes the most important discovery among leading men since Clark Gable stormed over the horizon.

A CLOSE-UP of Bob Taylor in private life reveals him as a bachelor who wants to stay that way. He is an excellent dancer. Plays near-perfect tennis and a bit of golf. In college he specialized in running the quarter mile. One of his best friends is Henry Fonda. He has a home in California for his mother, and his greatest sorrow was the death of his father two years ago.

The feminine world suspects rightly that he is a marvelous dancer. Outstanding among his traits of character is a staunch loyalty for friends, past and present, and he makes it a point to keep in touch with his pals back in the old home town—Beatrice, Nebraska.

What 1936 Will Bring SHIRLEY

By Clark Warren

A famous Hollywood seer makes startling predictions for the screen's darling

"WHAT lies in store for Shirley Temple in 1936 . . . .?" That's the question I placed before Dareos, that famous fortune teller to the cinema stars, who for years past has been consulted by the most famous men and women in pictures, and whose record of accurate predictions is amazing.

In the little sanctum near Hollywood, where great ones of the cinema have heard his words of forecast and advice, Dareos heard the question and cast Shirley's horoscope for our readers.

In this story is told the result of that effort. Dareos makes no claim that it is infallible. "The stars incline, but do not force," he points out. But it must, in justice to the seer, be pointed out that in the past five years he has a public record of forecasts for movie people that shows better than eighty per cent accuracy!

So here is what his forecast holds for Shirley Temple—

The oldest stars that mankind knows—millions of years old, they are!—have just handed down to Dareos a message of good fortune for the youngest star of all.

Venus, Uranus, Jupiter, Mars, Saturn—their positions today, tomorrow, and their positions on that late April night seven years ago, when Shirley came into this world at Santa Monica, not far from Hollywood—these planets and others give the signs that say that 1936 will be for Shirley Temple, a good year. . . .

But it will be a good year not unadulterated by evil shadows. Dangers will menace Shirley. Grave dangers, they are. Dangers from within and without. But with care, Shirley will ride through these dangers, and at the end of the year, will emerge triumphant and just as popular and successful as she is today, with at least another year of further success before her, before her bright star fades. . . .

The dangers that lurk in 1936 for Shirley are these:

1—An attempt to kidnap her!

2—Two threats of illness—one that may affect her [Continued on page 64]

Hollywood's Unique CHARM SCHOOL

By
Harmony Haynes

Lela Rogers has another great interest beside her movie actress daughter. This story tells of her unique school which has become an institution in Hollywood

LELA ROGERS (Ginger's mother), who conducts a "Charm School" on the Radio Pictures' lot, tells us that charm is rare and precious, but the poorest peasant, as well as the richest king, can possess it.

Mrs. Rogers' first lessons in charm were given to school children in Fort Worth, Texas, when she was a member of the Parent-Teachers Association. It all began because her little daughter, Ginger, and her schoolmates were having trouble with their history lessons. Mrs. Rogers read the history of Texas, and found it colorful, beautiful and very romantic. If only the children could appreciate it as she did! If it were glamorized, they could. She set herself the task of turning one of the lessons into a little one act play.

When the children found themselves the living characters of Texas history, they could understand and appreciate it. Not only did they "love" history but wanted everyone else to love it too. Like all children, they spoke their lines with dramatic fervor, but too often the desired effect was not there—little tongues couldn't handle the unfamiliar words.

Then began the long series of lessons in perfect diction. Mrs. Rogers insists that every word in the English language is beautiful and can be spoken beautifully. Children who made the same mistakes repeatedly were her greatest study.

In that little group of youngsters were Ginger Rogers, Florine McKinney and Allison Parker, all screen successes now.

Ever since that time, Mrs. Rogers has been aiding young people in their efforts to climb to the top of the ladder.

A year ago, when Radio Pictures decided that the best way to assure themselves of future stars was to train them on their own lot, they asked Mrs. Rogers to take on that task.

Today she has twenty-two boys and girls and she is very proud of them.

MRS. ROGERS begins her teaching with a long, friendly heart to heart talk with her new pupil. The pupil must understand that the work will be tedious—at times it will seem utterly ridiculous and a waste of time. If the pupil has associates who will tear down the work she is building up, then the associates must be dispensed with. The same is true of bad habits and wrong thinking. Only the finest in everything is good enough for the Rogers pupils.

Just as she did with her little ones away back in Texas, she does with her more mature pupils in Hollywood. She studies their faults, then tries to correct them. First, sounds are taken, from the soft, round vowels to the hard, sharp consonants. They are put into the mouth and tripped back and forth until they come out like notes of music.

After that, actual words are given the same treatment. Then sentences, then paragraphs, then whole books. Never is

Strange Journey

YESTERDAY, on a grey and dismal morning, I left my housewifely tasks undone and took a far journey. I set sail from Portsmouth on His Majesty's ship, The Bounty, for ports in the Southern seas; set sail in a lashing, stormy ocean under a cruel, bullying, self-righteous captain who gave his crew bad food and unjust whippings. I joined the desperate band of mutineers under their brave leader, Fletcher Christian. I saw Tahiti, with its mountains and its maidens. I saw barren Pitcairn Island and the crowded English courtroom. And finally I came out of the dark to a noonday world with the bright sun shining, into the endless symphony of automobile horns. Into a world of practical, scurrying people—not picturesque people, to be sure, but clean, and for the most part well fed. I was deeply glad that this is 1936 in which I live. That this is a world of great personal safety, of quiet, rather than spectacular courage—a world in which flourish the miracles of motion pictures.—Mary Berger, 40 Park St., Brockton, Mass.

Pass the Beefsteak

HOW about more realism on the screen? The usual "so they lived happily ever after" ending leaves an audience cold. An ending such as was witnessed in I Am a Fugitive From a Chain Gang was so dramatic, so filled with stark realism that it lived in the memory for months. Speaking of realism, why is it that in movies the heroine wakes up every morning with freshly marcelled hair; an office girl dresses like a debutante on $15 a week; a cashier is always blonde, gum chewing and wisecracking; a truck driver is always tough; a waiter is always a silly comedian; and maids are never anything but French. HOLLYWOOD SHOP TALK

By Grace Mack

Under the direction of Ginger Rogers, editor pro tem, we offer fashion hints

WHEN Norma Shearer adopts a new hairdress, it is fashion news. Norma's latest coiffure which is called the "Juliet" and will of course be worn in her new picture, Romeo and Juliet. Oddly enough, the hairdress was inspired by the fresco of The Annunciation painted by Fra Angelico, the original of which is in the San Marco museum in Florence, Italy.

The hair is parted in the center and brought softly down at either side with a portion of the hair made into small sculptured curls at the ears. The remainder of the hair falls loosely about the shoulders in a straight, triangular bob, the ends of which are slightly curled up. It is most flattering to Norma's beautifully chiseled features, and when she tops this hairdress with a little Juliet cap of seed pearls she looks like some lovely old world painting come to life.

Incidentally, accessories for the hair are becoming more and more important for evening wear. A clever conceit which Hollywood is taking to in a big way is the fresh flower bandeau. I suspect that a small florist really started this vogue but any girl who is clever with her hands can copy it. All you need is some fine picture wire and a few garden flowers — something like tiny hedge roses or sweet peas, or even small geraniums. The stems of the flowers are wound about the wire, the flowers themselves being closely set together in wreath fashion or in a coronet effect. They can also be wired to resemble a Spanish comb and perched right on top of the head or simply made into a cluster to tuck back of the ear.

One day recently, I had lunch with Anita Louise. She's playing the rôle of Maria in Anthony Adverse, you know, and most of the luncheon hour was spent in talking about the picture which is to be one of the most important productions of the year. Afterward, I went with her on a little shopping tour. She was looking for one of those "mix-your-own" cocktail costumes—a black crêpe skirt that can be worn with either a short or long lame tunic. The one she finally purchased had a plain black skirt in the new "little evening" length (about nine inches from the floor) and a tailored platinum topper with high neck and short sleeves. The topper had a hip length peplum and the belt and the tailored bow at the throat was of deep blue velvet ribbon. To go with this outfit she purchased black antelope gloves and a little fat velvet bag. Oh yes, I meant to add that she plans to wear other tops or tunics with this skirt, so that she will really have

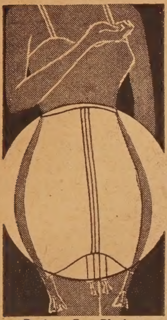
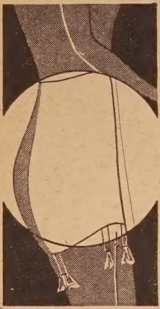
QUICKLY CORRECT THESE 4 FIGURE FAULTS

Perfolastic not only CONFINES . . it REMOVES ugly bulges!



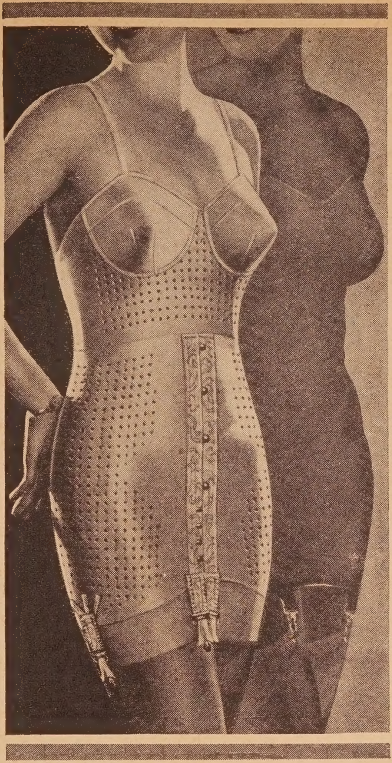
Reduce Too Fleshy Hips and Thighs

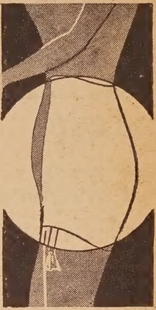
■ Nothing ruins the graceful lines of an expensive gown more than billowing hips . . . they are quickly brought back to beauty with the gentle massage-like action of the Perfolastic Girdle.



The Bulge "Derriere" Reduces Quickly

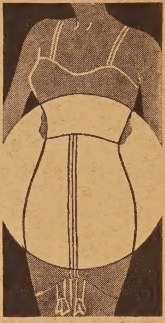
■ It is so easy to overcome the after effects of too healthy appetites . . . simply don a Perfolastic Girdle and watch the curves smooth out at the spots where Fashion says reduce.





Abdominal Fat Is Most Common of All

■ Prominent "tummies" are almost universally due to relaxed muscles and resulting fat. Perfolastic will correct the appearance at once and then surely and safely reduce it, without dieting.



Diaphragm Rolls Quickly Disappear

■ Until the development of the new Perfolastic Brassiere the woman whose figure was marred by unsightly "rib-rolls" had to reduce by expensive massage. Now the massage-like action does it.

Reduce your waist and hips 3 inches in 10 days . . . or no cost!

Thousands of women today owe their slim, youthful figures to the sure, safe way of reduction—Perfolastic! Past results prove that we are justified in guaranteeing you a reduction of 3 inches in 10 days or there will be no cost. We do not want you to risk one penny — simply try it for 10 days at our expense. You will be thrilled . . as are all Perfolastic wearers.

APPEAR SMALLER AT ONCE!

■ Look at yourself before you put on your Perfolastic Girdle and Brassiere—and afterwards! The difference is amazing. Bulges are smoothed out and you appear inches smaller at once. You are so comfortable you cannot realize that every minute you wear these Perfolastic garments you are actually reducing . . and at just the spots where surplus fat has accumulated—nowhere else!

NO DIET . . . DRUGS . . . OR EXERCISES!

■ You do not have to risk your health or change your comfortable mode of living. No strenuous exercises to wear you out . . . no dangerous drugs to take . . . and no diet to reduce face and neck to wrinkled flabbiness. You do nothing whatever except watch the inches disappear!

■ No longer will surplus fat sap your energy and steal your pep and ambition! You will not only be gracefully slender, but you will feel more like doing things and going places!

MASSAGE-LIKE ACTION ACTUALLY REMOVES SUPERFLUOUS FAT!

And how is it done? Simply by the massage-like action of this wonderful "live" material. Every move you make puts your Perfolastic to work taking off unwanted inches. The perforations and soft, silky lining make these Perfolastic garments delightful to wear.

FINE FEATURES—beautiful clothes—an appealing personality—and still a poor complexion destroys a woman's charm.

That's why thousands of women today are successfully turning to a famous medicated skin cream as an aid to healing and refining the skin. First prescribed by doctors for the relief of burns, eczema and similar skin troubles, now over 12,000,000 jars of Noxzema Medicated Skin Cream are used yearly.

How to use

If your skin is marred by Large Pores or Blackheads—by Pimples* or any other Skin Irritation from external causes, then by all means make this simple test and see if your skin doesn't show a big improvement in ten days.

Apply Noxzema at night after removing make-up. Wash off in the morning with warm water. Then apply cold water or ice. Follow this with a light application of Noxzema as a protective foundation for powder.

Do this for ten days, note the difference—feel how much softer, finer your skin is—how much clearer. Noxzema is astringent, helps reduce pores to exquisite fineness. Its gentle medication soothes most skin irritations and helps Nature heal these disfiguring skin flaws.

SPECIAL TRIAL OFFER—Get a jar of Noxzema at any drug or department store. If your dealer can't supply you, send 15¢ for a generous 25¢ jar to the Noxzema Chemical Company, Dept. 62, Baltimore, Md.

Wonderful for CHAPPED HANDS

There is nothing like Noxzema for red, rough, badly irritated Chapped Hands. Noxzema is not a lotion or a perfumed cream—it's a medicated cream that brings quicker relief, that softens and whitens hands overnight. Test it yourself. Apply Noxzema on one hand tonight. Note the difference between the hands in the morning.

BEAUTY AT YOUR FINGERTIPS

By Janet Lynn

THE beginning of a new year with its alluring promise, the turning over of a bright, clean new leaf, is as excellent a time to "overhaul" your appearance as it is to improve your mind and soul.

One of the commonest errors, we ostrich-like women make is, thinking that our hands won't be noticed! They are noticed, on practically every occasion when we can't deliberately keep our gloves on. When you have luncheon with a friend, she notices your hands as she sits across the table munching her sandwich. When you hand your boss a sheaf of letters to sign, he glances quickly but penetratingly at your fingers. When you serve dinner, your husband's gaze is frequently focussed on your hands.

Now for some helpful hints that make for lovelier hands:

Cuticle has a tendency (very pronounced in some cases) of growing over the nail surface, of obscuring half-moons, developing into [Continued on page 66]

Editor Ginger Rogers sends a demon reporter to cover the month's outstanding pictures

"Then Jean Harlow's wallop caught Vince Barnett square on the eye—and Mr. Barnett lost all interest in the picture."—Scene from Riffraff

By Bill Ulman

RIFFRAFF

Jean Harlow With The Tough Muggs

PROBABLY one of the most outstanding items about Riffraff is Jean Harlow's new hair. The rôle of Hattie, belle of the waterfront in a tuna fishing-cannery town, is not a light sophisticated rôle full of glitter and danger to men's souls. On the contrary, it is one of the most human, down to earth, squawling, brawling parts a so-called sophisticate has been called on to play in many a moon. So director Ruben and cameraman June felt that something should be done to tone down Harlow's crowning glory and give her features a chance to emote—and the result is both startling and swell. In Jean's case the result of the new "brownette" is all to the good. Riffraff, as indicated by the title, is a rough, tough, roistering show with Jean as rough, tough and roistering as anybody, but beneath it all she is fundamentally a sound investment. Spencer Tracy is the big boy of the tuna fleet and takes the adulation of the local belles as a matter of course; Jean doesn't give him a tumble on account of her pride and the same thing keeps him away from her until, in the heat of a labor strike, she is able to save him from the cops. Subsequently he saves Jean from the toils of the cannery operator, a nasty guy expertly portrayed by the new find of the year in heavies, Joe Calleia. Things get worse and worse, Spence and Jean bust up immediately after a hasty marriage. There are mob fights and jail breaks and then ultimately the baby is born and the two of them begin to get the breaks.

Vince Barnett picked up a lulu of a "shiner" when Jean Harlow sent him down for the count of five. They'd been rehearsing the scene for some time, taking stage punches at each other that look so genuine but don't hurt anybody. Vince was an old hand at the technique from way back in the vaudeville days and was trying to teach the intricacies to Jean. All went well until the actual "take," when Vince got so busy hopping around after comedy values that he forgot to "take" the punch. Then Jean's wallop, straight up from the floor and with an awful snap behind it, caught Vince square on the eye and cheek-bone. Mr. Barnett lost all interest in the picture for the time being. But he told me later that as far as he was concerned he'd rather not play with Harlow any more until they let her go back to the natural platinum. This new brownette business, he claims, puts too much punch in her work.

CEILING ZERO

Up In The Air With A Grand Cast

"CALLING Newark . . . 321 Calling Newark!"

"Go ahead 321 on Flight 5."

"321 on Flight 5, Texas Clarke, pilot, reporting to Newark. Flying ten thousand somewhere over Allentown; outside temperature 31; rain and snow with turbulent air; no ceiling at eleven thousand; couldn't climb through due to icing conditions. Please give me the weather at Newark."

"Newark to 321—Ceiling zero, visibility zero, light ground winds; Atlantic seacoast closed in. Can you get back?"

"321 calling Newark. Aw, nuts, Buzz! Listen kid, I've been flying on auxiliary gas and a belief in Santa Claus for two hours and I'm off the beam. Now get this, kid; tell Jake I'm sure sorry if I crack the ship, but there shouldn't be any fire this kind of weather. It ain't weather, it's beef stew! And listen, Buzz, tell Lou the insurance papers are in the bank box and . . ."

"Hey, Tex! Don't be a fool and talk that way! You'll come through okay, fellah!"

"Yeah. Sure, Buzz, I'll come through okay, but just in case, see? Give my best to Dizzy and Jake and the rest of the mob. So long, kid!"

"So long, Tex!"

"321 signing off from Newark, Flight 5, Clarke, pilot."

In the dispatcher's office at Newark Buzz turned to Flight Control Officer Jake Lee as Tex's voice cut off the air abruptly. A grim, significant look passed between them and Jake turned once again to his vigil across the fog swept field.

Director Howard Hawks sighed and called, "CUT!"

It was a strange sensation, that jerk back to reality. I've flown the commercial air lines myself and to me the short scene they'd just been shooting had much more life and reality than the big sound stage on which we were standing.

FEBRUARY, 1936

My Real Pal—JANET GAYNOR

By Ginger Rogers

> "Her friendships are few, but all the stronger for it. I confess I'm mighty proud to be included among those friends"

"I met her the day we started rehearsals for Change of Hearts . . . swift charming moods all touched with brilliant color—that's my friend Janet Gaynor"

Below: "When I think of Janet, the picture that instantly stands out is the one in her yellow bridesmaid's dress at my wedding"

UNTIL I met Janet Gaynor, I never really had a close girl friend. I mean someone you could share confidences with and your Big Moments. Maybe a youngster misses a lot by not having a "bosom friend" to grow up with—anyway, I didn't have one. Chiefly because I was a bit shy with girls.

But with Janet. . . .

I met her the day we started rehearsals for Change of Hearts. Oh, I had seen her around at parties and I was a dyed-in-the-wool movie fan of hers but I didn't know the real Janet Gaynor. I thought she'd be reserved and demure and a little diffident. And she was—for the first day or two. Janet doesn't go in for the hail-fellow-well-met sort of thing the first time she meets you. She doesn't toss around gushing adjectives as so many people do. Instead, it takes her a little while to get acquainted. Her friendships are few, but all the stronger for it. And I confess I'm mighty proud to be included among those friends.

Here's what made me like her right at the start: Shy as Janet herself seemed to be, she tried to make everybody else feel at home. There's always a tension when a cast begins a new picture and she broke it completely. You know how it is when a party suddenly "clicks" and everybody commences to enjoy themselves? That's what happened then. Right in the middle of rehearsing one of her hardest speeches, carpenters began hammering on a neighboring set. Janet simply shrugged and laughed. "That," she said, "is what I call some thundering competition!" and she went on with her lines.

Everything is a joke to her. All the petty disturbances and waits and mix-ups that have other people fuming, she turns into gags. By the end of the second day the ice was broken entirely and I'd begun to know Janet.

Wistful? She's like a glass of champagne! Bubbling with life and ideas and fun. She reminds me of the girl in the story book who had all her dreams come true. The story leaves her there but Janet picks up where [Continued on page 72]

The Secret of CLAUDETTE COLBERT'S Charm

WHAT is charm? This is charm: There comes a moment in every woman's life when she suggests going to the pictures and all she gets from behind the evening newspaper is a grunt. But if she suggests going to see Claudette Colbert, the paper is tossed aside and friend-husband begins slicking back his hair as if Colbert were going to see him, as well.

There is no doubt about it, Claudette exercises a peculiar charm over both men and women. Ask a hundred individuals what this charm consists of and you will get almost as many answers. Her eyes, her figure, her voice, her smile, her acting. But the most frequent reply will be "Well, I don't know, it's just something about her!"

As one of her most devoted friends, I think I can tell you a little about what goes to make up this charm which has cast such a spell upon the public. I have seen Claudette at close quarters, in close quarters and even in some tight spots. I have watched her grow from a pretty, rather crude but talented young actress into a smooth, finished product; and I know that the radiant personality she now possesses is an accumulation of many lessons which she had the courage to learn. The courage to face life builds character: To face it with a smile, builds charm.

To begin with, you must remember that Claudette is French and that a Frenchwoman's first duty is to be charming. And although Claudette has lived most of her life in America, she has lived it surrounded by her large and very typically French family, and still speaks French more readily than she does English. When we are alone together, we invariably talk in French and Claudette corrects my mistakes—always gently and never making fun of me. French girls are taught from babyhood to be polite, tactful and considerate of others and Claudette is no exception.

What's more, she is the product of another strict rule which is rigidly enforced in any French household where there is a pretty little daughter. She is born with the word "chic" ringing in her ears. Chic, in the French sense, has a far wider meaning than the description of a well-turned out woman. When a little French girl does something

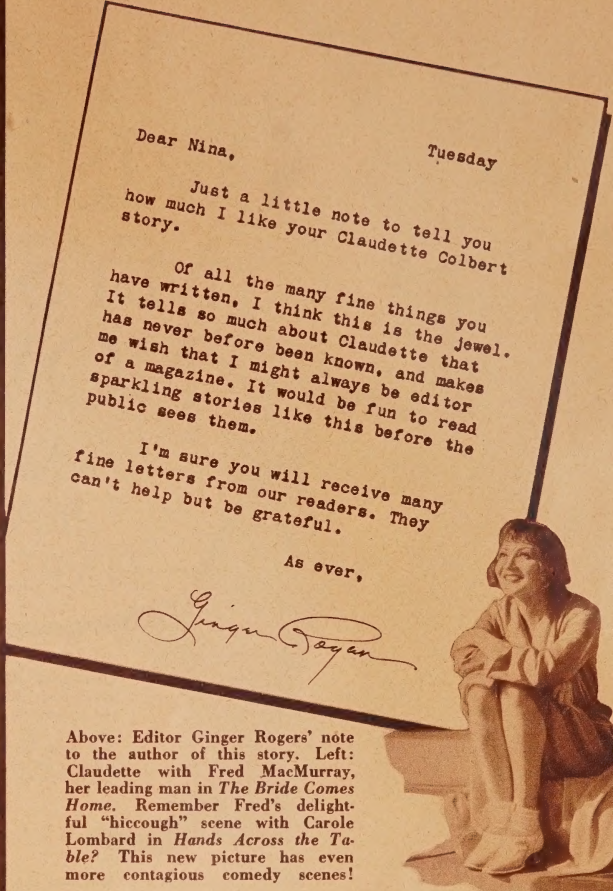
Claudette Colbert's romance with Dr. Joel J. Pressman developed despite the unusual devotion to family, which led Hollywood to believe that she probably never again would consider marriage. Notice, in the photo at the left, Dr. Pressman's resemblance to Charles Boyer



Dear Nina, Tuesday

Just a little note to tell you how much I like your Claudette Colbert story.

Of all the many fine things you have written, I think this is the jewel. It tells so much about Claudette that has never before been known, and makes me wish that I might always be editor of a magazine. It would be fun to read sparkling stories like this before the public sees them.

I'm sure you will receive many fine letters from our readers. They can't help but be grateful.

As ever,

Ginger Rogers

naughty she is told it was not a "chic" thing to do. Not charming, in other words. If she uses an ugly word, raises her voice unduly or fails to wait on her elders with graceful willingness—she is not chic. There is no more dreaded reproof in such a household than this accusation of loss of caste. A French girl is chic in every complicated sense of the word. She must be! The idea is pounded into her unceasingly: Charm, charm, charm! It must become a part of her, her second nature, and Claudette heard plenty of this repetition. She still gets it. Once at a very informal picnic, Claudette reached over and grabbed a cake before passing them to me and instantly Mamman had snapped, "Non, Non! N'est pas chic, Ca! Cherie!" And Claudette blushed!

PLEASE don't think this family lives in a dreary round of formal etiquette, because that is far from the truth. The compulsion to be charming doesn't stop their having a lot of fun—it merely makes them find each other unusually delightful companions. Claudette accepts her mother's constant presence as an agreeable inevitability. One hardly ever sees Claudette alone. Her approach is usually heralded by a brigade of relatives—and Claudette likes it. Indeed it is an open secret that when it came to choosing between her husband, Norman Foster, and her family, Claudette tried to hold onto both by that peculiar plan of two separate households. Norman, who is very American, had ideas about the husband being the head of a house. Claudette was devoted to him, but steeped in the French tradition which makes the Mamman or often even the grandmother the household's ruling power. It will be interesting to see how Doctor Pressman, who saved Claudette's golden voice for her and is said to have captured her heart at the same time will take to this family arrangement, if the current rumors materialize into a marriage. Next to Elsie Janis, Claudette has probably been more heavily mothered than any girl in the show business. But mothered in this case with the typical Gallic understanding of the needs and notions inseparable from the art of the stage and screen.

HERE are some quite different incidents which have helped to develop Claudette's charm. No doubt there have been hundreds of others, but I can only tell you those about which I know.

Once, outside a restaurant where she was lunching, an enormous crowd had gathered to see her as she came out. In the front row of enthusiasts was a rather awful looking woman, far from clean, holding a most unappetizing child of about two, in her arms. As Claudette passed, the woman held the child out to the famous actress. Without a sign of repulsion, Claudette took the wretched little creature in her arms and held it for a moment, saying sweet things about it. Then she gave it back, smiling.

"I AM WISE TO MYSELF NOW!"

—Says JEAN HARLOW

Director J. Walter Ruben gives Jean Harlow a final tip on how to play a scene on the set of Riffraff. See page 24 for unusual facts about this film

Right: In addition to changing the color of her hair, Jean has a new leading man, Spencer Tracy

By Mark Dowling

JEAN HARLOW—without her platinum hair!

The world's most famous blonde—as a "brownette"!

This was just one of the startling changes we had to accept when we visited Jean the other afternoon—an afternoon in which she discussed herself, past and present, with a frankness that was utterly unusual for a motion picture star.

"I hope I've passed the spectacular stage in my development," Jean told me. "This hair of mine is just an outer symbol of an inner change. I'm wise to myself, now! There are, you know, two types of goods on the market. One is like a flashy new lighter that catches everyone's attention for a week. Another is a good steady commodity which sells year after year. I'm through being like the lighter. I want to stay on the screen because I have more than flashiness—more than a head of platinum hair to offer!"

Jean had just recovered from a severe bruising and an attack of the 'flu she contracted while making the water scenes for Riffraff—the picture in which she appears for the first time with ash-brown locks for which they have coined the name "brownette."

"And I'm going to keep it this way, both in private life and on the screen," Jean told me. "They don't know, yet, at the studio, how determined I am. Perhaps they won't like it. Perhaps they'll insist that platinum hair is more suitable for certain types of parts. But I'm not going platinum again for anyone!

"I've changed, you see," she added. "I've grown. Once I had a sense of life rushing on—of events coming so fast that I could hardly keep up with them. I used to be under a terrific tension, always. Now I'm more content to sit back and think things out, in my own way. I'm more relaxed.

"I tried, up until recently, to do everything at once. There didn't seem to be time for half the things I wanted from life. I wanted to write. I wanted to go on the stage. I wanted to star on the screen. I'm ashamed to remember some of the all-inclusive statements I made—about the books I'd write and the parts I'd play.

"Now I realize that I can only do one thing at a time, and hope to do it well. I wasn't satisfied with my book, when I saw the proofs, and I'm rewriting it. I still hope to write, to put down some of the things I've dreamed. But I know that my principal aim in life is to be a screen star, and that's enough of a career for any one woman to accomplish.

"A lot came to me too easily," she said soberly. "I never had to fight or struggle for my place on the screen. Perhaps it would have been better for me if I had! I went into pictures for a lark, not because I needed the money.

"NOW I've come to realize that success is a question of serious work and application. I realize that stardom is just a beginning. I feel more responsible to my fans.

"I know, now, what I want from life. I've never felt so sure of myself before. I used to demand entertainment of my friends. I went with a crowd that was always amusing, always gay. Now I want solidity and

Ginger and Fred look over their contest rivals in the dance hall scene

FOLLOW the FLEET Behind the Scenes with

Continuing the fascinating story of the new Rogers-Astaire musical comedy

IF YOU were designing a nice modern 1936 miracle, the formula might easily be something like this: You're out dancing with your current heart-throb. The soft lights, the haunting music, the satin smoothness of the floor have made you forget that you've been out of a job for a long, long time. You love to dance and for a few hours at least you can play at being in heaven. First, you do a little truckin'. Then the music changes rhythm and you're gliding across the floor, cheek to cheek. Suddenly a strange man taps you on the shoulder and asks you how you would like to dance in a picture with Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers.

Miracle? My eye! That's exactly what happened to a couple at the Zenda Dance Hall in Los Angeles. The boy was a young grocery clerk; the girl a stenographer who had been out of work for many months.

When Hermes Pan, dance director, tapped them on the shoulder, they naturally thought that it was a gag. Some fresh guy trying to be funny.

"Say, listen—who are you trying to kid?" said the boy.

"But I'm not kidding," Pan assured him. "This is on the level."

He had to show his credentials, however, before the boy would believe him. When he was finally convinced that it wasn't a joke, he said a little dazedly:

"Gosh—do you think we're good enough to dance with Astaire?"

"Well, suppose you come over to the RKO studio tomorrow morning at nine o'clock and we'll find out," Pan told him.

Up to this moment the girl had been speechless. Finally she managed to say with an ecstatic sigh: "I think I'd simply die if I found myself on the same dance floor with Fred Astaire."

The following morning, however, on the Paradise Dance Hall set where Astaire and Mark Sandrich, the director, are giving the dozen or more hand-picked dancing couples the once-over, she seems very much alive. The miracle has really happened. She's behind the scenes with Fred Astaire! She listens, goggle-eyed, while Director Sandrich explains that the set is supposed to be a popular San Francisco dance hall; that the fleet is in port and the dance hall is swamped under a tidal wave of gobs and their girls.

"It's contest night," says Sandrich, "with a prize for the best couple. Now I want you kids to really strut your stuff."

THE music starts and the dancers go into hot-cha action. And what hot-cha! No bored, blasé extras these. They are elevator boys, taxi drivers, grocery clerks, cobblers and their girl-friends, all picked from local dance halls. It is their first sip of movie glamour and they dance with their hearts and souls as well as their feet.

Into this dancing bedlam comes a gob and his buddy, Fred Astaire and Randolph Scott. Fred is supposed to be a song and dance man who joined the navy when his girl turned him down. Now that he's back in port his one thought is to find the ex-girl friend, who of course is Ginger Rogers, and see whether she has relented. When he fails to discover her on the dance floor he makes a dive for the telephone. While he is trying to get her number, however, he hears Ginger's voice out on the dance floor. After Freddie joined the navy she got herself a job as entertainer at the Paradise. He waits until she has finished her number and then goes over and asks her for a dance. They become so engrossed with each other that they are quite unaware that the dance contest is on. Suddenly Ginger notices that only a few couples are left on the floor.

"Say, I shouldn't be out here dancing. This is a contest. It's for the guests."

"Well, I'm a guest," grins Freddie.

"But I'm a paid entertainer. It wouldn't be fair for me to compete."

"Okay," he says with feigned indifference. "You probably wouldn't be good enough to keep up with me anyhow."

"That's what you think," snaps Ginger. "Well, I'll show you whether I can keep up with you or not."

And with that Fred and Ginger really start swinging it. Suddenly Ginger holds up her hand and the director calls "Cut."

"What's the matter?" asks Sandrich.

"I've danced the buttons right off my blouse," laughs Ginger. Time is called while the damage is repaired.

THERE is a certain heady intoxication about being behind the scenes with Fred Astaire. The juicer who handles the lights, the prop boy, the doorman, the extra sitting on the sidelines—all seem to catch his gay, lilting spirit and, unconsciously, sway to the rhythm of the music. When the music stops, however, they relax. But not Astaire. He is like a wire spring.

I spent an entire day on the Follow the Fleet set and never once did I see him sit down for a rest. Between scenes the extras go out for a smoke or crowd around Rudy, the colored boy who has the apple and candy concession. But Astaire stays right on the set, rehearsing steps for the next scene or conferring with the director.

I chanced to get into conversation with a boy who had something of a record as a marathon dancer. "Say, I thought I had plenty of endurance," he told me, "but I can't keep up with this Astaire guy. When it comes to dancing, he's dynamite."

DURING the making of a picture Astaire usually loses weight but he has no phobias whatever about diet. He eats whatever happens to appeal to him. His lunch usually consists of a chocolate malted milk and a sandwich, or perhaps a hamburger and a bottle of beer.

The rôle of Bat Baker, a plain, ordinary gob, appeals to Astaire because, as he puts it:

"It's different from anything I have ever done. I feel that too many top hat rôles would type me and I think that is something every actor should guard against."

Like the comedian who yearns to play Hamlet, Astaire has a suppressed desire to put on a ten-gallon hat and play the rôle of a hard-riding cowboy. He's really serious about this. But something tells me that he isn't likely to have an opportunity to satisfy this desire.

Perhaps you have wondered, as I have, why you never see any actual love scenes in the Astaire pictures. Just once, in Top Hat, Ginger kissed Fred. I asked Director Sandrich why they never go into a clinch.

"The Astaire-Rogers pictures are really glorified fairy tales rather than true-to-life stories," said Sandrich. "We try to create an illusion of gay, light-hearted romance. If we allowed the characters to go in for hot love scenes it would give an off-key note.

"Another reason is that Freddie does not consider himself a Romeo type. Not only would he be embarrassed if he were asked to do a heavy love scene but he would feel that he was entirely out of character."

There is probably no one in Hollywood who works harder than Fred Astaire. Even when he is between pictures he spends hours rehearsing or working on new routines for his next picture.

Between Top Hat and Follow The Fleet he had about three months off. But that time was mostly spent working on his book "How To Dance."

BILGE
Hey . . . you been holdin' out on me . . . I didn't know you had a girl in your act.
(Bat looks up. Immensely amused)
So that's why you joined the Navy? You thought a torpedo would be easier to dodge than a shot-gun.

BAT
No . . . this girl was an orphan. Besides I asked her to marry me and she refused.

BILGE
What? Imagine a guy asking a dame to marry.
(Philosophically) The Navy's a safe place for guys like you.

BAT
Yes . . . so I've found out.

BILGE
What's become of her?

BAT
Well, I heard from her when we were in Manila . . . she's working here in Frisco.

BILGE
Swell . . . maybe she's got a friend . . . let's go see her.

BAT
No . . . we're all washed up.
(reaches for photograph)
Gimme that picture.

BILGE
What do you want it for . . . I thought you said you were all washed up?

BAT
Oh . . . I just kept it because I came out so good.

GEORGE BRENT

—the Daring Young Man

By Harry Lang

IT WAS in Spain, of all places, that I first began to learn that George Brent wasn't just another stuffed shirt . . . !

It was my vacation, and I was visiting, in Madrid, an old newspaper pal stationed there. One afternoon, we drove some thirty kilometers to the ganaderia of the Duke of Tovar. A ganaderia is a ranch where they raise fighting bulls, and Tovar's are Spain's toughest.

The Duke himself, aristocrat, has seen many men ripped open as they faced "death in the afternoon" in the bull ring. To him, bravery is daily fare; he is a keen judge of a man's courage. Naturally, I wanted to talk bullfighting with him. But he wanted to talk Hollywood with me, fresh from there.

"You know Señor Brent — George Brent?" he asked. "Señor Brent ees wan of the braves', fines', mos' exciteeng men I have ever met. He weel go places, like you say in America. He has w'at you call the gots . . .!" And then they told me the story—

Only a few weeks before, Brent had visited Tovar's ranch. Ronnie Colman was along. They were vacationing. For them, the Duke staged a private bullfight in his own ring. He trotted out his prize young bull—the fiercest he'd ever raised, he told them. The bull, a snorting bomb of hate, ripped a toreador's costume, sent another fleeing to the barriers. Thrilled, Ronnie and George watched.

Scene from In Person

I played opposite George Brent and know just what a charming person he is. Read this and you will be charmed, too!

Ginger

Suddenly George stood up. "Give me one of those capes," he said. A picador handed him the red-and-purple cape of the toreador. Brent vaulted over the barrier, into the ring. The bull, pawing, snorting, sighted him and came like lightning. Colman gasped; a woman in the party screamed. Brent grinned again, flicked the cape neatly, gently, sidestepped the bull with the grace of an expert—and barely an inch of light showed between the bull's lethal horn and Brent's thigh. Twice, thrice more, Brent executed neat passes, and then, still grinning, he tossed the cape to an attendant, and stepped back to his seat. (I might tell you here, that a few weeks later, that same bull gored one of Spain's best toreadors, before the sword found his heart.)

My newspaper friend, who was with Brent that day, asked him: "Why did you do that?" Brent, puffing a bit from the maneuvers in the ring, said simply:

"I thought it'd be fun!"

Naturally, back in Hollywood, I hurried to learn more about this Brent fellow, who'd risk his life and limb against a mad beast, just for fun.

You all know the background story of his youth—how he was a despatch rider for the Irish republican leaders during the throes of Ireland's civil strife. His leader killed, Brent had to flee for his life, and a freight boat brought him to America. Sounds like press-agent blubber, but it's true. And it's a tip-off to the man's real character. For he could have gone safely, quietly, through school and college and taken up any vocation he wished; the family had the money.

But that's all old stuff. Come and meet the Brent of today, and you'll find that he hasn't changed a bit from the "dangerous-living" young revolutionary of those days. That Spanish bull ring incident I told you of is one current example.

DURING the polo craze, George took up the game in Hollywood. He rode like a lunatic, got into every brush, and the hotter the better. He came out of one, at last, with his neck dislocated. They've never fixed it. Today, George's neck is one of those things that is liable to go wrong

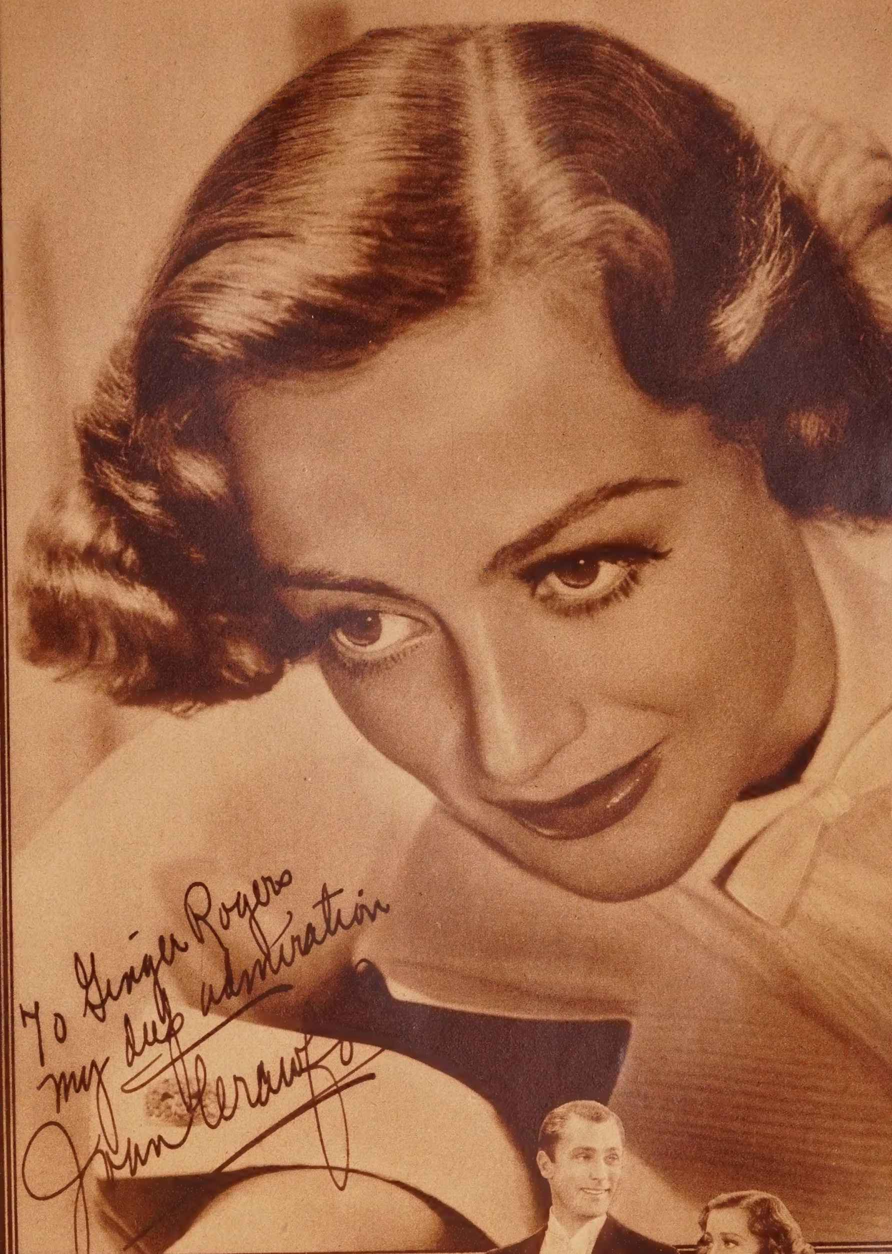
MY PORTRAIT ALBUM

Presenting a few Hollywood Friends who have given me something to remember them by. You see, I'm something of an autograph enthusiast myself

Ginger Rogers



To Ginger Rogers my deep admiration Joan Crawford

- Joan Crawford . . . if you have her autographed portrait in your own collection, you know how I feel about this one. Somehow, Joan is typical of everything that is fine in the American girl. She has reached the heights of her profession purely on merit alone, pursuing her career with boundless energy. Yet, at the pinnacle, she remains kindly, generous and humble. I think Joan's latest picture, I Live My Life, in which she appears opposite Brian Aherne, is one of her finest acting jobs to date. And wasn't she grand in the scene showing her in tantrums, tearing her wedding gown to shreds?

BARBARA STANWYCK

To Ginger Rogers —

Barbara Stanwyck

- A prize possession is this autographed portrait from the girl who used to be called Ruby Stevens before she came to Hollywood. Like myself, she started her career as a dancer, which perhaps is why I've always been so interested in pictures that bear the Stanwyck label. I like the sly, humorous touches Barbara adds to comedy scenes, and the tug at the heart in her dramatic work. Annie Oakley is a fine picture, and not one of us should miss her next, which will be A Message to Garcia

JAMES CAGNEY

To Ginger warmest personal regards to a very gifted gal —
Jim C.

- His full name should be James Dynamic Cagney, for I don't know an actor whose characterizations pack a more terrific punch. I like to see Jimmy use his fists, and wouldn't even mind being biffed on the jaw a few times myself if we appear in a picture together. It would be fun dancing with him, too, because Jimmy is a slick tap artist. I don't know a scene that has given me more shivers than his fight with Fred Kohler in The Frisco Kid. When Fred hit Jimmy with that hook he wore on his arm, I screamed

To Ginger Rogers -
Marlene Dietrich

MARLENE DIETRICH

—Her most recent portrait, and a few words from Editor Ginger Rogers

- I'm proud to have an autographed portrait from Marlene Dietrich, particularly since I am one of her most ardent admirers. I haven't missed one of her pictures since her first, The Blue Angel, with Emil Jannings, and I am terribly anxious to see her in Desire. Like many another famous star, Miss Dietrich's career began quite by accident. An injury to her hand prevented further pursuit of her work as a concert violinist. She entered Max Reinhardt's school of the theater—and you know the rest. At the right, Marlene is helping Gary Cooper apply his make-up. I like this informal snapshot, don't you?

GABLE—the Big Brute

By Don Ryan

EVERYONE has seen Clark Gable give eye to some frail, designing daughter of Eve who happens to be matched with him in that endless battle of the sexes from which the best motion picture material is manufactured.

Gable towers above her with an air of brutal mockery. His black head with the large outstanding ears will nod slightly. There comes a cynical smile.

"You can't fool me," his look says. "I know you for a sly kitten, soft-voiced, pretty-mouthed and sharp-clawed. Made to have your tresses disarranged and your provoking dresses mussed and your pretty little face punched at proper intervals."

Only acting? Well, Gable is a swell actor. That primitive approach has brought both men and women flocking to Gable's pictures. He is probably the only star adored by women for whom men in the audience have a warm feeling of sympathy. His superior attitude toward women—an attitude that borders on the sadistic in many of his screen characterizations—is an outgrowth of the way he really feels about the sex.

But please don't misunderstand this statement. Gable's approach to sex is far from the domineering attitude assumed by men of weak character for purposes of exploiting the sillier sort of female. Gable's mental attitude grew out of what was at first a defensive attitude. It is a result of extreme "maleness," itself a quality determined by his earliest environment.

The other day I put this question of his real feelings toward the women who worship him fairly up to Gable. We were on dangerous ground for a movie star who has to guard his every utterance and then is usually misquoted. But Clark responded with the utmost frankness.

"You're right, Don. These characterizations seem to come naturally. It's a funny thing, too, how they ever got to casting me in such parts. You know what a tough time I'd been having. I'd been on the stage twelve years—mostly getting nowhere—and never played any such characters.

"Then I got into pictures and the first important part I had was the gang leader with Joan Crawford in Dance, Fools, Dance. You recall the character—he was really a take-off on Al Capone—a subtle but domineering heavy. And you know what his attitude toward women was. He emphasized it with a sock on the nose."

He grinned. There is an impish quality to a Gable grin, the full lips outlined by a sparse hedge of mustache. But the eyes above, large and gray, were frank and very kind.

"I never socked a woman literally—I'd cut my hand off first. But that part brought me the first taste of success in pictures. The studio was quick to notice the effect and that's why, I suppose, that I've played so many other characters of that kind—men with a similar mental attitude. I admit there's something that enables me to give such fellows a lot of realism."

We had been chatting in his dressing room. Clark had hoisted one gray flannel leg over the red morocco arm of a big lounging chair and lighted the inevitable Gable pipe. To me it looked like the same pipe he smoked ten years ago and it seemed I had found the same poor and unassuming young actor who lived ten years ago in the same house with me—an old dilapidated house set back among the hills of Hollywood.

For explanation of this unusual photo, see end of this interview

Now you know why
Clark rates 100% as a heart throbber!
Ginger Rogers

It was the first time I'd talked to my friend of those lean and hungry days and I found the same Clark Gable I'd left ten years ago—tinkering with an old rattletrap car on the hillside above that leaky old house. He is too honest to permit a trace of swelling to appear inside that well-poised head of his.

Gable is away above the normal man in masculinity. Mentally, nobody is altogether man or woman, but Gable is really overbalanced on the male side and it has hampered him and caused him loneliness and suffering. On the other hand it has enabled him to fight with bulldog determination for what he believed his abilities entitled him to—until he got it.

Overwhelmingly masculine as he is, why hasn't Clark Gable been attracted to some young and feminine creature with big violet eyes, a lisping baby voice—the clinging vine for which he-men are supposed to fall? Both his unfortunate matrimonial ventures involved women considerably older than he, women who are not the accepted type for him.

TO ANSWER this question we must go back to Clark Gable's earliest childhood.

"I never knew a mother," Clark told me of his infancy. "She died when I was seven months old. My father, an oil contractor, placed me in the family of my maternal grandparents. They were Pennsylvania farming people—both sides of my house—the so-called Pennsylvania Dutch, descendants of German settlers in this region."

Clark had no playmates. A small and lonely figure in a world of grown-ups, wandering in the woods through the verdant summers, working when he was old enough to go to the field; brooding by the fireside on long winter evenings when snow blanketed the windows and the north wind howled.

Inferiority feelings are present in every young child. He can overcome them by surpassing others, younger brothers and sisters. But it's a hard spot in which a child finds himself, surrounded by adults whom he cannot hope to equal.

"I remember that crisp autumn day on the farm," he related. "We were putting down sauerkraut for the winter. Aunt Josie was shredding cabbages on a board with a knife-blade fastened in it.

"I was always eager to do things with my hands and I begged my aunt to let me try. I began on a big cabbage. Suddenly I felt a sharp pain and my hand was covered with blood. I'd sliced a big gash in it.

"I'd never seen blood flow. I thought I was going to die and opened my mouth to scream.

Sonnie Hale, famous English comedian, with his wife, Jessie Matthews

A WOMAN Who Fought For LOVE!

The dramatic story of Jessie Matthews, vividly told by a veteran writer

IF THERE is any girl who has taken more hard knocks than Jessie Matthews, the scintillating English star of First a Girl and many other Gaumont-British pictures, I wish this unknown would raise her right hand.

Jessie's terrific battle for success; the loss of her child at birth; her struggle against a delicate body, undernourished in childhood. The list of obstacles which have blocked this girl's path would fill a long novel. And yet, because she is a woman with a heart tuned first for love, the hurt which scarred the most deeply was when Cupid used what looked liked a poison arrow to bring to her the one man she could truly love.

Jessie's first marriage was an obvious mistake of youth. She was seventeen when she came to America in a stock company. She left England as an understudy; she returned with experience as a leading lady and proof that she was a success out of the chorus.

But the home to which she returned! A tiny flat over a vegetable market; a hole in the slums of London. No bathroom. If she suggested a bath—that huge family, huddled into tiny space, could not understand. It wasn't their fault. It wasn't hers. We know only what we have seen. But Jessie had been in America where even a wandering stock company has bathrooms and electric lights, unknown then to the slums of any foreign country.

Lord Alna Lytton, son of Sir Henry Lytton, was nineteen. Jessie was turning eighteen. He was the Prince Charming who swept by on the white steed and gathered the little Cinderella into his arms.

I sometimes think jealousy comes from an instinctive inner suspicion that we are not loved as much as we love. Even though a mate may seem to love with everything in him or her; even though every devotion is shown outwardly—something makes us think, "She or he doesn't love as much as we love," and we are torn by the worst disease known. And if a wife has a career! Before her eighteenth year was over, Jessie was leading lady in a Cochran revue. She was already becoming the pet of that fashionable stage life in the West End of London. She was using that indomitable will, that little-girl wistfulness for success and happiness—trying to be two things at once: a great actress and a good wife. She has proven since she can do both but then—at eighteen!

She left him. She threw herself into her work with that determination which must be rewarded because of the very intensity of it. She thought to bury her heart; forget it forever. Other women have tried that. Many. I doubt if any normal ones have succeeded. Dan Cupid, hovering always overhead with his mysterious little arrow, sees all, knows all and refuses to let woman

A CLOSE-UP of LEW AYRES

By Ginger Rogers

HE'S my husband and writing about him is difficult. About the most difficult thing I ever tried to do.

I'd be a magician if I could get him down on paper because Lew is such a many-sided person. He's a maze of interesting contradictions. For instance, he loves slapstick comedies with the custard pie throwing and all—and he loves symphonies and concerts. The more high-brow they are, the more he enjoys them.

He looks like a boy—yet he has one of the most sophisticated minds in Hollywood.

Right now he's doing something that has him in Seventh Heaven and in despair by turns. He is preparing to direct his first picture. For years he's been mad to do this, so Republic Pictures is giving him his first opportunity. The picture has the tentative title of Glory Parade and it has something to do with the famous historical battle of the Monitor and the Merrimac during the Civil War. When I get home at night it looks as if Lew had staged his own particular battle! Papers scattered in whirlwind fashion all over the room, cigarette stubs cluttering up everything.

He drinks quantities of coffee when he's working on an idea and smokes like a cowboy on his last cigarette. You can always tell when he's tired because he starts rubbing his forehead vigorously. Then he's liable to look up and grin and say, "How about some oyster stew, Gingy?" If there isn't any in the house we drive to a restaurant he likes and he eats great bowls of it. It's his favorite dish—personally, I take some apple pie.

Elaborate dishes never appeal to Lew. Crêpes suzette will never tempt him like good old ice cream. He's the most natural person I've ever met. No fuss, no formality of any kind.

Here's a case in point to prove it. . . . The day we were married I was on my way to the church with my cousin, Phyllis Fraser, in a fine state of jitters. I hadn't been able to eat any breakfast or luncheon with all the excitement, and I was sitting there in the back of the car hardly daring to breathe for fear of putting a wrinkle in a ruffle—you know how it is when you're about to say the "I do's." Well, as we passed the Tam-o'-Shanter inn on Los Feliz Drive something made me turn to look out the window. . . . And there, sitting in his Ford roadster dressed in full regalia with top hat, white tie and all, was Mr. Ayres calmly munching a hamburger. With him was his best man, Ben Alexander, and even as I looked they were in the act of spreading more mustard on their sandwiches. . . .

Lew, with one foot practically on the altar had discovered he was hungry. . . . It would be a hamburger!

LEW at his best is Lew looking at the stars—and hitching his wagon to one which he does quite often. He believes in inspiration but gets his finest work done by sheer plugging.

Quite often in the middle of the night he wakes up with what he believes to be a blazing inspiration for a story or musical composition. He gets up and sometimes works on it for hours, shivering and excited. Comes the [Continued on page 73]

BILL POWELL
Debunks Himself

By Harry Lang

WOULD you like to hear how Bill Powell neatly squelched one of those self-appointed know-it-alls who like to bellyache about What's-Wrong-With-Movies. . . .?

Well, it was on the set where they're shooting The Great Ziegfeld. Bill is playing the rôle of Ziegfeld, you know. This day, there was a visitor on the set—one of those fellows who, once upon a time, had briefly been introduced to Florenz Ziegfeld himself and exchanged perhaps a few formal words with the Great Glorifier. I saw him stroll over to where Bill Powell was waiting between takes.

"I say," he drawled, "you don't look a bit like Ziegfeld, y'know."

Bill smiled Powellishly and replied, softly:

"I know it."

Undeterred, the buttinsky went on:

"And you don't even talk like Ziegfeld!"

"Probably not," conceded Bill. "I've never heard Mr. Ziegfeld."

"Then," crowed the pest, assuming a prosecuting-attorney stance and shooting a forefinger at Powell, "how can you be Ziegfeld in this picture?"

"I can't," replied Bill, simply. "I'm not even trying to be Ziegfeld."

And while the visitor goggled fatuously, Bill shot home the explanation.

"You see, my friend, acting doesn't mean being the character you're portraying. I, for instance, could never be anybody but Bill Powell, don't you see?

"But, in playing this Ziegfeld rôle, while I may not look or talk like Ziegfeld, nevertheless I have studied the man deeply—and I am trying with every art I can command to present a feeling of the man Ziegfeld as hundreds of thousands of people who know about him believe him to be. And that, my friend, is acting as I see it."

And therein, Bill Powell presented his philosophy of the job of work he has to do. That's what his picture work is to him—a job to be done well, effectively, entertainingly. Stardom, as such, is nothing to stop being a regular fellow about. He even kids it—

There was, as a perfect example, the time his make-up man on the Ziegfeld set was talking about things he'd done. . . .

"When I was younger," the maker-upper told Bill, "I wasn't only a make-up man, see? I was chief hairdresser on the Universal lot, too. I was also electrician. I even directed a couple of pictures in my time. Besides, I used to play featured rôles."

"Uh, huh," drawled Bill, laconically, "I see. You've been everything from a star up, eh?"

Bill loves to debunk bunk. Most of all, he loves to debunk Bill Powell. He can laugh at himself more gladly than he can laugh at a friend.

In this process of debunking himself, Bill particularly derides the two adjectives most often applied to him—"suave" and "best-dressed." His two pet aversions are to be called either.

"As a matter of fact," he explodes, "I hate clothes!"

When his day's work at the studio is done, Bill Powell rushes home and no sooner gets into his house than he begins ripping off the tailored clothes he's been forced to wear.

I appeared with Bill in Star of Midnight, and know that this story is typical of his attitude toward acting—and himself

Ginger

Bill Powell bestows a lengthy caress on Luise Rainer. He has two other leading ladies in The Great Ziegfeld—Myrna Loy and Virginia Bruce

He rips 'em off one by one, and before you can say "the-best-dressed-man-on-the-screen," Bill is as naked as a fan dancer with butterfingers! And unless he's stopped, Bill prefers to run around his house just like that.

However, there is in Bill's bachelor paradise one guardian of his epidermic morality. That's an all-over-the-place individual who always wears an alpaca coat that doesn't fit, and whom Bill dignifies with the title of "butler." Bill's butler, aware of his master's aversion to clothes, and also aware of the fact that at any moment an unexpected caller may arrive, hounds and digs at Bill until Bill, in sheer annoyance, finally dons some clothes.

That butler, incidentally, is one of a trio that constitutes the goldarnedest domestic staff of any star's home in Hollywood. Besides the butler, Bill employs a cook, and a man named Donald who is chauffeur, gardener and swimming-pool-emptier-and-cleaner-outer.

However, all three "double in brass." That means that at any given moment, any of the three can double for any other—that is, the cook can chauff, the chauffeur can cook, the butler can do either.

HAVING debunked the clothes-hoss legend, Bill goes on to deny, vehemently, that he's an icy-cold super-sophisticate, super-suave. His friends can tell you why he dislikes being touted as either. It's because he's too much the regular guy to be guilty of the artificiality and pose which super-suavity entails. Bill's friends run the gamut from stars and millionaire-executives to the whole crew that works with him.

There isn't a day on the Ziegfeld set when Bill doesn't "treat the house. . . ."

I saw it happen. At four o'clock in the afternoon, they called time out. From the studio commissary, a caterer was on the set with a supply of ice-cream cones, coca-colas and peanuts.

"It happens every day at four," a grip told me, licking a vanilla cone, "and Mr. Powell pays for it every time. Sometimes it's hot dogs. It used to be candy bars, too, but he had to cut that out, because he's supposed to be playing Ziegfeld an' glorifyin' all them beautiful dames—"

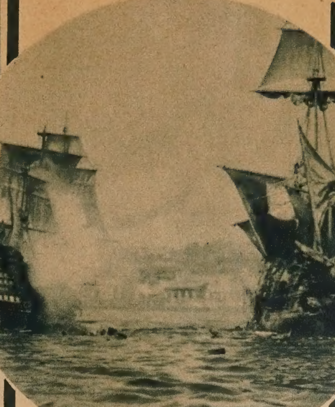
On the screen this is Port Royal's auction mart for slaves—a fascinating setting from the old world. Actually, it was filmed on the studio back lot. Note the modern houses in the background at top of photo



A part of the battle scene, as shown above, was filmed in miniature, but most of it was done with two genuine, carefully constructed ships which sailed the high seas on the studio sound stages where much of the shooting for Captain Blood took place. No matter how it was done, it looks authentic!

The TRUTH

By Bill Ulman

Olivia de Havilland takes a fencing lesson from Basil Rathbone. Expert fencers were employed to teach the cast

A NERVE shattering detonation rocked Port Royal.

In what seemed to the awed townspeople thronging the banks to be a suicide move, Captain Peter Blood of the notorious Arabella had driven his ship straight between the two Frenchmen. It seemed his seamanship was better than his judgment for his first broadside was sure to heel him over and thus destroy the aim of his second against his other adversary.

Thus it was a tense moment when Peter ignored the frantic expostulations of his officers and ordered a double, simultaneous broadside. A brilliant move of incredible daring—if the Arabella stood the terrific impact of the dual recoil; a foolhardy move of incredible stupidity — if the Arabella foundered.

But Peter Blood, scourge of the Southern Seas, did not often err in matters of warfare. The smaller brigantine, Le Piquette, took the Arabella's withering blast at the water line, careened on her side and sagged stupidly into the sea, smoke and fire vomiting from her exposed entrails. But the Frenchies' flag-ship, the Cinco Llagas, was a better bottomed hull fashioned of the stoutest Andalusian Oak. She reeled under the sheer weight of iron that Blood put aboard her, but grimly joined the issue. The answering salvos from the Frenchmen took a savage toll among Blood's brave men. The Arabella was still sea-worthy but sadly wounded as the heavier Cinco Llagas closed in to bring her lighter musketry into play, unwilling to stand off and cannonade with such an expert enemy.

As the two boats ground heavily together and the grappling hooks fell athwart the rails, the air was as thick with flying men as it was of missiles. From every mast and yard-arm Blood's half naked crew, well-versed in the intricacies of boarding an enemy, hurtled above the smoke on their swinging ropes to drop like vengeful condors on the panicked marines thronging the Cinco's decks. From staggering mast heads to copper armored keels the battle raged with horrible savagery, fire and gunpowder, shivering steel and red-hot searing iron, skull mashing clubs and gouging thumbs—it was all one to that half-crazed crew.

FOR years they had been the hunted, the hated pariahs of the sea; men from whom decent ships fled, wisely, yet men who had to keep anxious eyes upon every horizon for the sails of a more powerful man-o'-war. Pirates, men from a score of nations, a dozen races and a thousand vices—and suddenly came this unbelievable amnesty from a new and kind King in the very person of their recent prisoner, Lord Willoughby! William, King of England, was at war with France and needed every man and ship on the seas; the French were hammering at every colonial town—even Port Royal, so recently the hateful prison of half of Blood's convict crew. And now the very place they had sworn to ravage and sack as soon as they were strong enough was the very place for which they were preparing to shed their blood against a new enemy, England's enemy, the strutting, cocky Frenchmen!

These pirates, turned patriots, fought under the Union Jack as they had never themselves believed possible under the ill-fated Jolly Roger. They fought with an abandon and reckless daring that brooked no opposition. The Cinco Llagas put up a brilliant fight, but under Peter Blood and the Union Jack, freemen once again, the devil himself couldn't have given the crew of the Arabella pause.

At long last, as the Arabella cut loose her grappling irons and, torn and battered herself, let the gallant Frenchman sink to a well-earned and permanent rest, the assembled spectators along the shore roared a mighty welcome that sounded puny when contrasted to the appalling din of battle. But it was a joyous sound to the men aboard the Arabella. It meant that their battles were over!

And there was a certain spontaneous quality to that cheering that couldn't be purchased for love or money.

George Arliss, the happy tramp, is a new rôle for an illustrious actor

MISTER HOBO

GEORGE ARLISS gives The House of Rothschild another whirl—this time with none of the pomp and ceremony, but only as a happy tramp who, because he happens to bear the famous name, finds himself an imposter. As the simple-minded but at times shrewd bank president in Paris, to which position he rises quite by accident, Arliss teaches a great financier the error of his crooked ways and manages to manipulate the affairs of young love to a happy ending. The English cast appearing with Arliss is satisfactorily restrained and inconspicuous, giving Arliss a fine springboard for his arch ways. It is a relief to see America's favorite English gentleman out of silk panties for a change. The supporting cast includes Gene Gerrard, Frank Cellier, Patric Knowles, Viola Keats and George Hayes.—Produced by G-B.

Paul Muni, with Josephine Hutchinson, in his finest character rôle

Bette Davis plays a thankless rôle beautifully and courageously

Jessie Matthews goes on a bender with Griffith Jones in a new film

THE STORY OF LOUIS PASTEUR

PAUL MUNI invades the field of screen biography which previously seemed the exclusive property of George Arliss and delivers the most brilliant of his rôles to date as Louis Pasteur, the Frenchman who struggled against great odds to prove his theory that germs spread disease, and that weapons could be devised to defeat these messengers of death. This picture is another great stride forward for the screen, proving as it does that entertainment possibilities are not limited to the hackneyed plots which have been filmed and re-filmed for years. Ably supporting Muni are Donald Woods, and Josephine Hutchinson.—Produced by Warner.

ONCE again Bette Davis appears in an unsympathetic rôle in a picture which box office observers fear may be none too popular because it is honest adult drama turned out with no apparent gestures to the public's supposedly established tastes. This critical department, however, suspects that the public will definitely approve Bette Davis in her rôle as the self-centered actress whose charms tempt Franchot Tone from his well-ordered marriage plans only to later find herself caught in the web of her own intrigue. Added strength is given the emotional appeal of the picture by the fine work of Margaret Lindsay, who in The Frisco Kid appeared merely as a bit of decorative scenery.—Produced by Warner Brothers.

BEHIND the not too intriguing title, First a Girl is a picture that merits attention, particularly since it marks the return of Jessie Matthews to American movie theaters for the first time since her hit in Evergreen. The backstage theme of this film is not as routine as might be expected. Jessie plays the rôle of a male impersonator whose assumed sex causes no end of embarrassment when she becomes tangled in hilarious love conflict. Here, for the first time, a British made picture enters the musical comedy field without fear of comparison with more polished American efforts. Jessie Matthews is more appealing than in her first American released film and is surrounded by an able cast.—Produced by G-B.

FRANK REVIEWS

A TALE OF TWO CITIES

★ ★ ★ ★

TO ATTEMPT a critical analysis of this masterful production in anything less than a small book would be folly. Almost everyone is familiar with Charles Dickens' powerful story of the French revolution, and perhaps the greatest tribute which can be offered to this picture is the prediction that by reason of its faithful adherence to the mood of the original story the film makes a great work greater. Ronald Colman masterfully plays the rôle of Sydney Carton, the hard-drinking young barrister; Donald Woods achieves the best work of his career as Charles Darnay; and Elizabeth Allan is an exquisite Lucie Manette. The flawless work of these three, however, is perfectly matched by Blanche Yurka, Basil Rathbone, Edna May Oliver and others. There has never been a greater picture than A Tale of Two Cities.—Produced by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Wallace Beery takes the pledge, but Aline MacMahon has her doubts

AH WILDERNESS

ADULT audiences will particularly appreciate this picture which will vividly recall the days of youth, but it is none the less appealing for young people. Will Rogers appeared on the stage in the original play by Eugene O'Neill and was to have starred in the film version, but following his untimely death Lionel Barrymore stepped into the rôle of the father who is the central figure in this domestic comedy drama. Eric Linden is particularly strong as the high school senior, brilliant yet ignorant of the facts of life. Wallace Beery is remarkably fine as the tipsy uncle whose marriage to the aunt, played by Aline MacMahon, is continually postponed because of his fondness for the demon rum. Cecilia Parker, Spring Byington, Mickey Rooney and Charles Grapewin also contribute much —Produced by Metro.

Claudette Colbert in a coquettish moment with impulsive Robert Young

John Boles, Confederate soldier, says goodbye to his daughter, Shirley

Lily Pons makes her sparkling début as a singer who insisted on love

IF YOU enjoyed Hands Across the Table and She Married Her Boss, this fine comedy which features Fred MacMurray and Claudette Colbert is certain to please. Featuring Claudette and Fred as a pair of battling lovers who fight through the picture and leave the audience suspecting that even then the squabbling is not over, the picture is devastating comedy-romance. The plot concerns a wealthy young wastrel who decides to start a magazine. He appoints his bodyguard as editor and a former feminine playmate as secretary. The magazine business promptly becomes secondary and love gets off to a wrangling start. The cast also includes Robert Young, William Collier, Sr., Donald Meek and Johnny Arthur.—Produced by Paramount.

THE conviction that any picture with Shirley Temple in it is a good picture is considerably strengthened by her latest appearance in this film with a Civil War background. The natural charm of Shirley makes a good story better, and once again she gives admirers something to gasp at as she dances with a cleverness that is not excelled by the famous Bill Robinson, who appears in a major rôle. John Boles plays the part of Shirley's soldier father convincingly as does Karen Morley in the rôle of the mother. Outstanding is the scene in which Shirley pleads with Abraham Lincoln for the life of her father, who has been sentenced to death. (See page 74.) The supporting cast includes Jack Holt.—Produced by Twentieth Century-Fox.

LILY PONS makes her picture début in a sparkling picture which has to do with an opera singer who weds an ambitious, unsuccessful composer. As the singer's career sends her soaring into new worlds, the composer-husband fails to attain success and they separate, despite the fact that they are still in love. Eventually, however, the opera star realizes that she cannot live on career alone, and contrives a scheme to win back her husband. Henry Fonda does a convincing job as the romantic young composer, but the picture's real interest lies in the songs of Lily Pons. Her voice is truly beautiful and the studio has wisely mixed operatic arias with popular numbers. Eric Blore steals a good many scenes.—Produced by Radio.

CHARLES BOYER Answers His Admirers

By The Inquiring Reporter

Everything you want to know about one of the most popular of all actors

THIS month it is Charles Boyer who takes a seat on the witness stand, lifts his hand and swears to answer your inquisition with the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth. In his answers you will doubtless find many new and interesting facts about this French cinema idol.

Under what pen name do you write?

Under my own.

How can one secure your short stories? I am interested in reading them.

They have appeared in French magazines which, I believe, cannot be obtained now.

Would you be interested in having a fan club started for you?

I should be very much flattered.

What are your favorite sports?

Tennis and riding.

Do you like dancing?

Not particularly.

Do you answer your fan mail personally?

Yes, I do.

How can I get a personally autographed portrait of you?

By writing to the Walter Wanger Studio, 1040 N. Las Palmas, Hollywood.

What is your new picture?

Invitation to Happiness* which Marlene Dietrich and I shall make in the spring.

Where were you born?

Figeac, France.

What is the date of your birth?

August 28, 1899.

What are your measurements?

Five feet, nine inches in height; weight, 150 pounds.

What is your favorite dish?

Crêpes suzette. (Sally Eilers tells how to make them on page 54).

Do you like Hollywood?

Very much.

What was your first picture?

Made in Berlin, it was titled Barcarole.

How do you pronounce your name?

Boy-āye.

Was there an incident in your life that caused the moody expression always to be found on your countenance—judging from your photographs? . . . If so, and if it is not too personal, what was it?

I cannot imagine, unless it could be the effects of seeing the war at very close range, and for a great length of time, in France.

How do you address your wife in private life? Pat—or what?

Pat.

Who are your friends in Hollywood?

George Brent and Walter Wanger, among the more intimate.

What color eyes have you?

Brown.

What qualities do you dislike most in people?

Curiosity which prompts them to ask personal and embarrassing questions. Insincerity.

For Years I Suffered in Silence!

AN AFFLICTION THOUSANDS SUFFER, BUT FEW TALK ABOUT!

HEMORRHOIDS or Piles are one of the worst afflictions. They not only harass and torture you, but they play havoc with your health. They tax your strength and energy, wear you down physically and mentally and make you look haggard and drawn.

Piles, being a delicate subject, are often borne in silence, and allowed to go untreated. Yet, no condition is more desperately in need of attention. For Piles can, and often do, develop into something serious!

REAL TREATMENT

Real treatment for the relief of distress due to Piles is to be had today in Pazo Ointment. Pazo almost instantly stops the pain and itching. It is effective because it is threefold in effect.

First, Pazo is soothing, which tends to relieve sore and inflamed parts. Second, it is lubricating, which tends to soften hard parts and also to make passage easy. Third, it is astringent, which tends to reduce swollen parts.

Pazo is put up in Collapsible Tubes with special Pile Pipe, which is perforated. The perforated Pile Pipe makes it easy for you to apply the Ointment high up in the rectum where it can reach and thoroughly cover the affected parts.

REAL COMFORT

Pazo is now also put up in suppository form. Those who prefer suppositories will find Pazo the most satisfactory. All drug stores sell Pazo-in-Tubes and Pazo Suppositories, but a trial tube is free for the asking. Just mail coupon or post card.

IRVIN S. COBB'S Great Tribute to WILL ROGERS

I consider this one of the most inspiring tributes ever given to any man, and I'm passing it on to you. Love Will Rogers? Hollywood worshipped him. He used to call out to me, "Hello, there, cousin!" in that dear old drawl of his every time we met. How I miss it!

Ginger Rogers

Shirley Temple unveiling the plaque at the dedication of a new sound stage in memory of Will Rogers

MR. TOASTMASTER and ladies and gentlemen:

On the menu which was laid before you, there is an error. It says I am to deliver an address of dedication. Nothing is further from my thoughts. Should I attempt a formal oration here, I think I would hear a homely, whiney Oklahoma drawl saying,

"Gimme my rope. Lemme lasso that sucker and drag him down before he makes a plumb idiot of himself."

Besides, a formal speech would ill-fit an occasion dedicated to one who was most informal in all the actions and acts and speeches of his life; who coupled a certain sweet sanity with a compassion that was like a well which never went dry; who had gallantry and generosity; who had a philosophy that ever was kindly, a wit that was salty but never was sour.

I think too often meetings, gatherings, like this, lack sincerity. What is an oration spoken at the open grave of the average man into his cold unhearing ears except a belated plea for the defense entered after the evidence is all in and the jury has given its verdict. And what is the average epitaph on a tombstone except an advertisement for a line of goods which permanently has been discontinued? But once in a century, perhaps not so often, there comes a human being who lives on and on and on, not so much for the achievements of his life but for the essence of decency and kindliness and sweetness which he radiated through the medium of those talents of his.

I think since Will went away from here, I've had thousands of letters about him from people, ninety-nine per cent of whom never saw him in real life perhaps, and I noticed a thing the other day in connection with this. I do not think there was a single one of those letters from high or low, from rich or poor, strangers, but spoke of him as "My friend," and I want to say this, if you don't think he was the friend of those he came into contact with, ask not these executives who dealt with him in a business way, ask not his co-stars who met him on equal ground, ask the extras, ask the struggling, old, weary actors fighting to live, and the young eager actors fighting for a chance, ask the technical crews, the boys behind the cameras and the sound machines, ask the boys in overalls who they love best of all the so-called stars they ever met on a lot.

I say to you that if all in this industry brought here one little flower apiece and planted it here, this great lot would be one vast garden of beauty and fragrance, with a tear of grateful remembrance to water every single bloom that grew here. We name this building by a name that will live in letters of eternal flame when the building itself has gone the way of all things of human fashioning, and when even the brass plaque on the outside of it has corroded and crumbled.

And reverently, with all love in our hearts, we dedicate this stage to one who trod life's stage so nobly well that forevermore the world goes on applauding. I thank you.

THERE'S a story behind these pictures! Consider, for instance, Crêpes Suzette. They're really nothing so frightening. Just thin rich pancakes, made whole-pan size and dressed with a sauce.

Smart restaurants feature them at Tiffany prices. Smart hostesses serve them at their swankiest dinners. And out in Hollywood Billie Burke, Sally Eilers, and other stars noted for their home-hostessing, depend upon them constantly for very special occasions. Yet they're really such a simple dish that not a cook in the land but could serve them for supper tonight, if she wished.

Here's how Sally Eilers does it:

CRÊPES SUZETTE
(Will make 6 crêpes)

1 cup flour
1 tablespoon powdered sugar
½ teaspoon salt
3 eggs
1 cup milk
½ teaspoon vanilla

Sift sugar, salt and flour into a bowl. Beat together eggs, vanilla and milk. Add egg-milk mixture slowly to dry ingredients, mixing as you add, in order to avoid lumps. Beat into a smooth batter.

Place one teaspoon of butter in a moderate-sized frying pan. Add just enough batter to spread out into a cake that will fill the pan. Bake over a moderate fire until golden brown on one side. Turn and bake on the other. Remove to a hot plate. Add more butter and bake another cake, etc.

When cakes are baked they may be spread with a thick and delicious orange sauce and served at once, or heated in a chafing-dish sauce, Sally's style.

For the former method use the following sauce:

First, be careful to follow the directions with utmost care.

Sally starts out with flour, sugar and salt

Next comes eggs and milk. Avoid the lumps

Just enough butter to fill bottom of the pan

Fry to a sunny golden color — and then flip it

SIMPLE ORANGE SAUCE

1 cup powdered sugar
⅓ cup butter
Juice of ½ orange
Grated rind of ½ orange

Cream butter until light. Add powdered sugar and beat until very light. Add orange juice and grated rind and beat hard so that mixture will not separate. Spread sauce on hot crêpes. Fold, or roll, and serve at once as entree or dessert.

understanding. I have fewer acquaintances—more real friends.

"I know now that I'd rather stay home with one real friend than go to all the night clubs in the world. I'd rather wake up in the morning, ready for a swim in my pool, a game of tennis, or a canter along a sunny bridle path. I'd rather spend my time attending to the thousand and one details of being a movie star—reading scripts, answering fan mail."

We have visited Jean many times when she has been doing just that. There isn't another star in Hollywood who answers personally so many letters from her admirers as Jean does. There isn't another actress who gives more time and thought to her career. Who can say, as Jean does, "I used to demand excitement from life. Now I want accomplishment!"

"My hair—" She turned her head so the slanting sunlight coming through the Venetian blinds caught lights and shadows in the ash-brown locks. She smiled wryly. "It wasn't an easy decision to make, naturally. Mother and I talked it over for almost a year. Every now and then, I think I'm sorry . . . and mother has saved a few strands of the old color to match in a portrait I am having painted.

"But I'm glad, really, that it's done. My friends like it better too, after the first shock." She smiled, and added, "A writer once complimented me by saying that Jean Harlow's hair does not match the real Jean Harlow. I hope that's true.

"I do feel that much of the tragedy that has come to me would have been avoided had I been less spectacular-looking—had I been an ordinary blonde, or a brunette. I've been told by newspapermen that half the headlines about me would not have been printed—had I not had that catchy title as the first platinum blonde.

"ON THE screen, too, the change is for the better. I watch myself up there as critically as I would a stranger—that's my business. And because they had to pump a terrific amount of light into my face, to balance the brightness of the hair, my face lost a lot of expression.

"I believe this darker shade will give weight and depth to the characters I play. It will allow me a wider divergence of rôles. I want to be known as an actress . . ." Jean was silent for a moment, and then added, "I'm tired of hearing people whisper that I'm in pictures just because I'm an unusual type of blonde. I'm tired of playing second to a head of hair!"

Jean's judgment is justified by the opinion of cameramen and technicians who worked with her on Riffraff. They say the new shade makes her face softer and more expressive—takes away a certain brittle quality she has always had on the screen, but never in real life. "For the first time," an important producer told me, "audiences will recognize Jean for the great actress she really is."

She stood up, suddenly, and looked out of the window over the rolling view of hills and valleys and in the distance, the sparkling blue of the Pacific.

"I'm wise to myself about love, too," she said. "Once I thought I wanted a home, and the companionship of marriage. Now—I don't see how I can combine marriage and a career successfully. And to me, my career is the most important thing in the world."

Several times, however, Jean mentioned the name of Bill . . . handsome, debonair William Powell, whom the gossips have linked with her name for months. In March, her final decree of divorce will be granted, and she will be free. She told me, laughing, "The columnists say we're going to marry—I say we're not. Let's wait and see who was right!"

IF YOU ARE SKINNY WEAK, PALE RUNDOWN!

Get Strength-Building IODINE into Blood and Glands!

Thousands of Weak, Nervous, Skinny Folks Have Found This New Way to Add 5 Lbs. in 1 Week or No Cost!

If you are weak, skinny and rundown—if you go around always tired, nervous, irritable, easily upset, the chances are your blood is thin, pale and watery and lacks the nourishment needed to build up your strength, endurance and the solid pounds of new flesh you need to feel right. Science has at last got right down to the real trouble with these conditions and explains a new, quick way to correct them.

Food and medicines can't help you much. The average person usually eats enough of the right kind of food to sustain the body. The real trouble is assimilation, the body's process of converting digested food into firm flesh, pep and energy. Tiny hidden glands control this body building process—glands which require a regular ration of NATURAL IODINE (not the ordinary toxic chemical iodine, but the iodine that is found in tiny quantities in spinach, lettuce, etc.). The simplest and quickest way to get this precious needed substance is Kelpamalt, the astonishing new mineral concentrate from the sea. Kelpamalt is 1300 times richer in iodine than oysters, hitherto considered the best source. With Kelpamalt's iodine, you quickly normalize your weight and strength building glands, promote assimilation, enrich the blood and build up a source of enduring strength. Kelpamalt, too, contains twelve other precious, vitally needed body minerals without which good digestion is impossible.

Try Kelpamalt for a single week. Notice how much better you feel, how well you sleep, how your appetite improves, color comes back into your cheeks. And if it doesn't add 5 lbs. of good solid flesh the first week, the trial is free. 100 jumbo size Kelpamalt tablets—four to five times the size of ordinary tablets—cost but a few cents a day to use. Get Kelpamalt today. Kelpamalt costs but little at all good drug stores. If your dealer has not yet received his supply, send $1.00 for special introductory size bottle of 65 tablets to the address below.

DOES YOUR SKIN LOOK LIKE SILK OR CANVAS?

It's that Hard-to-Get-at "Second Layer" of Dirt that Makes Your Skin Coarse and Gray

By Lady Esther

A black slip under a white dress will make the white dress look dark—grayish!

The same holds true for dirt buried in your skin. It will make your skin look dark—give it a grayish cast. It will also clog your pores and make your skin large-pored and coarse.

It's safe to say that 7 out of 10 women do not have as clearly white and radiant and fine a skin as they might, simply on account of that unsuspected, hidden "second layer" of dirt.

There is one sure way to remove that underneath dirt and that is to use a cream that penetrates the pores.

A PENETRATING Face Cream

Lady Esther Four-Purpose Face Cream is a penetrating face cream. It does not merely lie on the surface of your skin. Almost the instant it is applied, it begins working its way into the pores.

It goes to work on the waxy dirt, breaks it up, makes it easily removable. When you cleanse your skin with Lady Esther Face Cream you get dirt out that you never suspected was there. It will probably shock you when you see how really soiled your skin was.

Two or three cleansings with Lady Esther Face Cream will actually make your skin appear whiter—shades whiter. You would think almost that you had bleached it, but that's the effect of thoroughly cleansing the skin. When your skin has been thoroughly cleansed it blooms anew, like a wilting flower that has been suddenly watered. It becomes clear and radiant. It becomes fine and soft.

Supplies Dry Skin with What It Needs

As Lady Esther Four-Purpose Face Cream cleanses your skin, it also does other things. It lubricates the skin—resupplies it with a fine oil that overcomes dryness and makes the skin velvety soft and smooth.

Cleansing the pores as thoroughly as it does, it allows them to function freely again—to open and close—as Nature intended. This automatically permits the pores to reduce themselves to their normal, invisible size.

Also, Lady Esther Face Cream makes so smooth a base for powder that powder stays on twice as long and stays fresh. You don't have to use a powder base that will ooze out and make a pasty mixture on your skin.

No Other Quite Like It

There is no face cream quite like Lady Esther Face Cream. There is no face cream that will do so much definitely for your skin. But don't take my word for this! Prove it at my expense.

Let me have your name and address and I'll send you a 7-days' supply. Just mail a penny postcard or the coupon below and by return mail you'll get the 7-days' supply of Lady Esther Four-Purpose Face Cream; also all five shades of my Lady Esther Face Powder. Write today.

(You can paste this on a penny postcard.) (20) FREE

The Key to Glamour

By Jane Woodard

In which Virginia Bruce is cross-examined about her theories on feminine beauty

"THE most beautiful blonde in Hollywood!" That's what the late Florenz Ziegfeld once called Virginia Bruce. And today Virginia Bruce is even more glamorous than in the days when Ziegfeld selected her for one of his important New York shows.

In view of Ziegfeld's comments about Miss Bruce, it is particularly interesting to note that she will next come to the screen in the rôle of "Audrey Lane," most beautiful of all Ziegfeld's show-girls, in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's lavish and important production, The Great Ziegfeld, based on the life of this famous theatrical producer.

Asked about her rules-for-beauty while resting in her dressing room suite at M-G-M, in-between scenes for this picture, Virginia smiled and said: "It puts one rather on a spot to talk about beauty, doesn't it? And yet there are some things I very definitely believe. A girl should be herself. She should know her type, and then have her make-up accentuate the loveliness of her particular type. Her clothes should be in keeping with her type of beauty. Personally, I feel that femininity is beauty's most ardent ally, and so I try to have my make-up and clothes emphasize femininity."

Virginia ran a comb through her long, blonde hair as she continued: "While we were walking over here from the set of The Great Ziegfeld, you remarked that when you saw me at lunch yesterday, you wondered for a minute if I had any make-up on at all, except a little lipstick. I consider that a lovely compliment, because it shows that the make-up I use isn't obvious."

As she combed her hair, she put the comb down and said very earnestly: "A blonde should be very, very careful about the make-up colors she uses . . . so as to avoid even the remotest suggestion that she might be artificial-looking.

"Max Factor emphasized this point, too, when I had a make-up conference with him. He recommended for me a make-up of Flesh powder, Flame rouge and Flame lipstick."

"What do you consider the greatest asset to feminine beauty, outside of femininity and naturalness?" she was asked.

"It's awfully hard to say," she pondered. "Of course there are those physical things, like eyes, skin, hands and features which you are born either with or without. These things, I suppose, are the standards by which most people judge beauty. I can't say that I agree. I know many girls whose features are far from perfect, but who appear more beautiful to me because of dynamic personalities. I would say that personality would be the most important asset.

"A conscious effort to develop a pleasing personality, a conversational power, and a soft voice, coupled with making the most of her charm and femininity, would be my recipe for beauty."

At this point Virginia was called back on the set, so we left the dressing room. As she took her place under the lights of the sound stage she looked more like a lovely painting than anything actually alive.

As I watched her I recalled comments made by former neighbors of hers in North Dakota and Minnesota. It seems that even from babyhood Virginia Bruce gave promise of the rare beauty that she possesses today. Her face was always framed in golden locks. Her eyes were always the deep, [Continued on page 79]

Cooper, at the height of his popularity has never received within several thousand dollars of that amount, and her nearest competitor today, Freddie Bartholomew, earns only one-fifth as much.

MAE WEST, embroiled in another heated argument with Paramount, has hinted that as soon as her current contract, which calls for one more picture, has been terminated, she will definitely and permanently quit the screen. She wants to enjoy a little leisure and find time to author a new book which she has outlined.

By the way, did you know that the curvaceous lady receives from Paramount just as many dollars per week for her scenario work as she receives for her acting?

MARIAN MARSH, in No More Yesterdays, wears a wedding gown that is acclaimed as the most gorgeous creation ever designed for the screen. It is made of 12 yards of shimmering silver lamé and forty yards of tulle. When the wedding sequence was filmed, everyone in the studio who could leave his duties stood on the sidelines to observe—and marvel at—that gown.

HERBERT MUNDIN claims that the most embarrassing experience of his professional life occurred in England. Appearing with a stock company, he came out on the stage to discover that there was not a soul in the audience. As a gag he called out, "I say, are we all alone in here?"

"No," came a voice from the back row, "but you will be if you are here tomorrow night!"

MADGE BELLAMY, once one of Hollywood's greatest stars, is on her way back. She is now under contract to Twentieth Century-Fox and doing exceptionally well in small rôles. Her latest appearance is in Metropolitan. She is still a beautiful personality, and has what it takes to make a real come-back.

"Swell kids," he calls his leading ladies to date (Virginia Bruce, Jean Parker and Irene Dunne) and they, in turn, are willing to swear by him as Hollywood's Man of the Hour.

A CHANCE for AMATEURS in the MOVIES?

. . . . Yes!

Says Major Bowes

Major Bowes, ace showman

MAJOR EDWARD BOWES' two reel movies, which are "glorified screen tests of amateurs receiving the greatest amount of votes from millions of radio listeners," is his assurance to an ambitious younger generation that the screen shall not suffer from lack of talent.

Heretofore, the responsibility for choosing new talent has been left to the casting agents and producers, with the hope that their selections will coincide with the judgment of the audience. Millions of dollars have been wasted by "talent guesses" which failed to coincide with public preference.

Major Bowes, through his amateur film idea, offers a fool proof method of determining the audience appeal of untried talent, by allowing the film audience to determine beforehand just which performers you would like to see more of.

It is a comparatively simple matter to receive an audition for the Major Bowes amateur hour. Any amateur living in or within the immediate vicinity of New York City is eligible for a fair trial before the Major. Shirt sleeves rolled above the elbows in a business-like manner, the Major spends endless time in his N. B. C. audition rooms interviewing hundreds of aspirants. Those who survive the audition gong are eligible for one of the Major's Sunday night programs. And from those who survive the gong on the big Sunday night program are picked the performers for Major Bowes' two reel roadshows. Telegrams and votes from millions of listeners all over the country determine who will have a place in the film. Could any talent casting system be more accurate and just than this? And before an amateur is allowed a place in the picture he must submit to the cruel-est, yet most honest test of them all, the voice recording test. If this is passed satisfactorily, the amateur is then placed in the expert hands of the Biograph Studio (producers of Major Bowes' short films) make-up artists in preparation for their stint before the camera.

NOW and then we hear the Major bolstering up the courage of one of his more timorous amateurs who has suddenly developed "microphone knees." But so far in the making of amateur films, there has been no call for such assistance from the Major. The amateurs go through their paces before the cameras, singing, dancing and doing imitations with the fervor and self-assurance of a professional. Their initial success on the radio program was all that was necessary to insure self-confidence.

Fox Films has already signed Doris Wester, the "Cinderella" girl, whose plaintive voice and fragile beauty swept her overnight from a quiet suburban home to a six-week singing contract in the glittering Rainbow Room in Rockefeller Center, top of the amusement world, as proof even at this early date that amateurs really go places after they have been acclaimed by public vote.

A human interest story, typical of so many others in the present amateur scene, is that of the Youman brothers, three boy musicians who with the like amount of instruments, give imitations of well known bands: Wayne King, Cab Calloway, Guy Lombardo, etc. The boys traveled from Chicago with their father in a battered old car just to get on the program. With practically no money or the faintest idea of what they were going to use for such in getting back to Chicago, the three lads went on the Bowes program, pumping away on their instruments and radiating smiles that caught clear through the audience and into the glass enclosed control room.

The public virtually broke the voting machine in response. Major Bowes took them under his wing, saw to it that their immediate wants were taken care of and signed them up for a series of personal appearances in one of the Major Bowes stage units.

The incessant parade of aspirants marching before the Major each week come from every walk and phase of life. From the ranks of society came the Duchess of Torlonia, sister-in-law of the former Infanta Beatrice of Spain, and Mary Mumm, daughter of the Champagne King and prominent in Newport society. But the opportunity offered them was no more than that offered by the Major to Joseph Rogato, the Singing Garbage man. Regardless of how seemingly unknown or unique your job or profession might seem, it's a sure bet that the Major has met one of your professional kin during the regular course of his auditions.

So settle back in your seats, Mr. and Mrs. Movie-goer, and prepare yourself for one of the most exciting thespian revolutions that ever struck Hollywood. There will be plenty of changes made! And this time, thanks to Major Bowes' "Amateur Screen Test" idea.

And as conclusive proof that the Major and his amateurs is the most popular idea that ever struck show business, comes a prepaid cable from a Scotchman in Edinburgh with a vote for Major Bowes' amateurs!—Such popularity must be deserved!

Doctor reveals what 774 Illinois people did to help

KEEP FROM CATCHING COLD!

Test made under medical supervision for 2 full winters

The people lived together, worked together, ate the same kind of food

THE ONLY DIFFERENCE:

one half gargled with Pepsodent Antiseptic; the other half did not!

Proof of results obtained with

PEPSODENT ANTISEPTIC

CAN Pepsodent Antiseptic prevent colds? That was the question put before a reputable doctor noted for practical research. He was asked to find the answer in his own way. To take as much time as he needed. To spend as much money as was necessary.

This famous Illinois test is the result of his efforts. He worked for two full winters, with 774 people in all.

The people lived together. They worked together. They ate the same foods. In every way possible, this test was made under strict medical supervision.

The results left no doubt that Pepsodent Antiseptic did reduce colds!

The doctor's report

One half of the people gargled with Pepsodent Antiseptic twice a day. The other half did not gargle with Pepsodent Antiseptic. And here is the doctor's report of actual results:

Those who did not gargle with Pepsodent, had 60% more colds than those who used Pepsodent Antiseptic regularly.

What's more, the relatively few who caught cold, even though they used Pepsodent, got rid of their cold in half the time required by those who did not use Pepsodent Antiseptic!

Thus you have concrete proof of how Pepsodent Antiseptic actually reduced colds. Proof that it also cut the length of a cold in half!

Goes 3 times as far

When you buy a mouth antiseptic, remember this fact. The ordinary kind kills germs only when used full strength. But Pepsodent Antiseptic kills germs in 10 seconds, even when it is diluted with 2 parts of water! Thus it makes your money go 3 times as far!

For "Breath Control!" Pepsodent's extra power keeps the breath pure and sweet one to two hours longer.

throat and possibly make her lose her voice for a period; the other the threat of appendicitis, and an operation.

3—Danger of accidents, particularly in April, August and September.

More obscure are two other items that stand out in her 1936 horoscope—

There is the sign that some time during the year, family grief will come to Shirley. Whether it will come through death, illness or other causes, and how close to Shirley it lies, are matters that the planets do not state specifically, plainly.

The other not-so-plain indication is of some major professional change. There are signs that indicate a possible new contract—even one that may take her out of Hollywood, out of America, for a period that runs from six months to a year.

This prediction is strange, in view of the fact that only a month or so ago, Shirley's guardians and 20th Century-Fox films closed a new contract tying Shirley more securely than before to the pictures of that studio—and incidentally guaranteeing Shirley an income of more than $4,000 a week!

Whether the new contract or deal suggested by the stars would supplant this contract, or whether it will come in addition to her film work, is uncertain.

NOW, as to those three major threats against Shirley's happiness for 1936—the kidnap attempt, the illness, and the danger of accidents:

The time at which the kidnap danger will "break" is uncertain, according to the stars. However, the general picture for the year indicates that Shirley's guards will frustrate the effort.

Here it is no violation of confidence to reveal that Shirley is constantly guarded, today and every day. The chauffeur who drives her between her studio and her home is a detective—armed to the teeth, ready to guard Shirley with his own life, when the need arises. When she is on the set, she is guarded by an operative who never takes his eyes off her. At her home, certain precautions are in effect which would make any kidnaper's job a thousand-to-one certainty of failure.

And so, if the stars' prediction of a kidnap-try against Shirley work out, it is safe to say that somehow the effort will be effectually nipped in the bud, perhaps even before it reaches the point of overt action on the part of the would-be kidnapers. You see, Uncle Sam's G-men keep a particular ear and eye open for underworld plotters, and often they move in and ruin a plot which is still in the hatching.

As to the threats of illness before Shirley in 1936—

Her danger months are February, March, June, September and October. Especially in February or October is there danger of appendicitis. However, Dareos says the other signs in her horoscope warn against too hasty resort to operation to relieve her. An operation might develop into serious consequences, the signs suggest.

The other specific illness threat attacks her voice. Whether from overwork at speaking lines, or singing her songs, or from a cold that will develop into bronchial trouble of more serious nature, Shirley stands a bad chance of losing her voice entirely for a period of several months, unless extreme precautions are taken against the danger. Nevertheless, even if the danger does come true, her voice will return as lovely and sweet as before.

THE third major threat—danger from accidents—is particularly ominous in the months of April, August and September. She must be doubly careful in those months, and even triply careful on April eighth or ninth, August fifteenth or sixteenth, and September twelfth and thirteenth.

The nature of these accidents is not disclosed by the horoscope—whether in the studio, or while traveling in her car or perhaps an airplane, or from some totally unexpected cause—this secret is not revealed by the planets, so Shirley and her guards must beware.

In May or June, there is a slight danger that Shirley will collapse from overwork. Not because her studio or her family will force her to attempt too much, but simply because Shirley herself, loving acting and playing as she does, will throw her own self too deeply and too earnestly into her work—and suffer for it.

That, in general, tells the major points of her 1936 forecast.

NOW, here in brief is the month-by-month forecast for Shirley's 1936:

January—a fair month, with no outstanding events indicated. February—a month of adversity, with danger of appendicitis, and professional troubles. March—a better month, with particular indication that Shirley will achieve some signal professional honor or success. Her health will be endangered. April—her birth month. The signs are fair, for health, happiness and professional life, but with great danger of accidents on either the seventh or eighth. May—a good month, with particular indications of a development that will mean even greater financial gain for her. June—a month that will be, all in all, not so good. Her health must be carefully watched here. July—a good month, where signs of travel are plain. It is either now or next month that Shirley may go abroad for a long stay. In July, business matters concerning her will arise, and her business agents must show great care to guard her against some professional double-dealing. August—not such a good month. Travel signs still strong. The middle of the month, particularly the fifteenth and sixteenth, dangerous through accident. September—another good month, especially if Shirley has gone abroad. However, there is danger from both accident and sickness. October—a less favorable month, with another definite threat of appendicitis. November—not such a good month. This will be a period wherein Shirley's advisers will be wise to let her "coast" and to undertake no new work or fields. The latter part of the month, however, shows a definite indication of a great financial gain. December—an especially good month, with glowing forecast of great financial benefits to Shirley.

Follow the Fleet with Fred Astaire

"I would like very much to be able to retire in five years," says Astaire. "I would like then to spend my time between the United States and England. I once owned a racing stable. I would like to have another one. And if my dream comes true, I'll have a horse that I can enter in the Kentucky Derby."

More than anything else horse racing is Astaire's hobby. And while he bets on the races his bets are always conservative. He gets just as much of a thrill out of winning on a two-dollar bet as he would on a $100 bet. He plays his hunches but his hunches are usually backed up by a knowledge of the horse's history and past performance.

He's an enthusiastic football fan but seldom has an opportunity to see the games, for with him work always comes first.

He doesn't go in for Hollywood social life, and one of his pet fears is that sometime at a party someone will ask him to dance.

He has no particular superstitions but he clings to a frayed old bathrobe that has long since outlived its expectancy.

"The first time I ever wore it," he says, "was on the opening night of a new show. The show turned out to be a hit and it marked the turning point in my career. Since then I've worn it on opening nights of shows that have been flops but for the most part the old bathrobe has brought me luck—or at least I'm sentimental enough to think that it has."

I ASKED him what he considered the most essential requirements for the girl who would like to take up dancing as a career.

"I think the first requirement is a thorough understanding of rhythm and timing, combined with the ability to translate this into actual steps. And the girl who wants to take up dancing as a career must not only have physical vitality but the capacity for a great deal of hard work. It's no career for a lazy person."

"Do you think that a girl needs to have beauty in order to be a success as a dancer?" I asked.

"I wouldn't say that beauty is essential but it certainly is an asset. I believe that personality and the ability to put that personality over is really more important than beauty."

I tried to get Astaire to name the five best girl dancers he knows but Mr. Astaire is too much of a diplomat to do that. I might just as well have asked him to lead with his chin.

As soon as an Astaire picture is released the studio is swamped with letters from feminine fans begging for Freddie's worn out dancing shoes. Some of them even offer to pay for the privilege of securing this unusual souvenir. But to date Freddie's worn out Cinderellas have not left the lot.

Something tells me that you are going to like Astaire in the rôle of a sailor and that you'll soon be singing "We joined the navy to see the world but all we saw was sea."

SEARCH FOR TALENT

Extended!

Nancy McDonough was given a Search for Talent screen test at the Virginia Theatre, Champaign, Ill.

HOLD-BOB Bob Pins, Universal Pictures, Motion Picture and Screen Play extend the Search for Talent to February 1st 1936

Due to the large number of entries the Search for Talent has been extended to February 1, 1936!! . . . and instead of guaranteeing 6 persons a trip to Hollywood, we are guaranteeing that at least 7 persons will be brought to Hollywood, all expenses paid, for a chance in the movies!

It's simplicity itself to enter the Search for Talent . . . just fill out the entry blank (or facsimile) printed right on the back of the HOLD-BOB card, attach your photograph and send to the Search for Talent headquarters. A local committee will select from these photographs the most likely prospects for a screen career. When the Search for Talent truck arrives, those selected will be given a FREE screen test which will be forwarded to Universal Studios for final judging. Winners will be brought to Hollywood, all expenses paid, for a final studio screen test.

Blossom Chan, petite Oriental, Search for Talent entry from Minneapolis, Minn., was selected for a FREE screen test at the Orpheum Theatre, Minneapolis, Minn.

A beautiful, Chicago, Search for Talent entry is Miss Margaret Hehn. She was given a FREE screen test and a chance for fame in the movies.

Remember, one of Hollywood's first requirements is a well groomed hairdress. Do as the movie stars do, use HOLD-BOBS, always. They insure a perfect hairdress because they have small, round, invisible heads; smooth, non-scratching points; flexible, tapered legs, one side crimped—and are available in colors to match your hair.

Be sure to get HOLD-BOBS. You'll know them by their Gold and Silver Metal Foil cards, on sale everywhere...and the entry blank to the Search for Talent is printed right on the back of the HOLD-BOB card!!

GRAY HAIR!

The Best Remedy is Made at Home

YOU can now make at home a better gray hair remedy than you can buy, by following this simple recipe: To half pint of water add one ounce bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and one-fourth ounce of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it yourself at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. Barbo imparts color to streaked, faded or gray hair, makes it soft and glossy and takes years off your looks. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off. Do not be handicapped by gray hair when it is so easy to get rid of it in your own home.

STOP IT! I can't stand that! It's driving me mad!

hangnails and becoming hard and calloused at the nail corners—unless it is softened by cuticle removers and oils and trimmed a bit, at the corners, with nippers.

To take care of your cuticle properly you need: a good cuticle softener (there are several fine ones in both cream and liquid form) which can be massaged into the skin; a pusher or orangewood stick with which to scrape away bits of cuticle that cling stubbornly to the nail; a tiny cuticle scissors to remove thin jagged edges that will not succumb to cuticle remover; and nippers to snip away the thickened cuticle at the corners of the nails.

THE rumor that liquid nail polish causes brittle nails is based on the erroneous belief that it has the power of penetrating the nail surface. As a matter of fact, nail polish acts as a protective coating for the nails and is not absorbed. If, after using liquid polish for a long time, you notice that your nails have lost their natural lustre, this is because the polish has shielded them from friction or rubbing, which naturally polishes them! If you will buff your nails before applying your liquid polish, you'll find their natural gloss returning in a jiffy.

You'll find a candidate for the Oily-Polish-Remover Hall of Fame nestling in that very luscious looking pair of hands illustrated in this article. The Cutex people were one of the first firms to bring out an oily polish remover and now they have increased the size to positively gigantic proportions. (If you change polishes frequently, you can't have too much remover on hand!) The outsize bottle of genuine Cutex Oily Polish Remover costs only thirty-five cents. You can't find a better bargain that that!

Those pretty, well-cared for nails in the picture are wearing a coat of Cutex Creme Polish in a pale shade—not because their owner doesn't like deep shades but because she's a business woman and reluctantly tore herself from her desk to have this picture taken. For social occasions she likes vivid, startling shades of Cutex polish—which only proves the old adage, "Scratch a business woman and you'll find a siren."

The smooth whiteness of her hands, she claims, is due to the fact that she uses Campana's Italian Balm at least six times a day—always after she has had her hands in water. She finds it as quick and economical to use as it is beneficial, on account of the handy dispenser cap.

It shouldn't be hard for you to recognize the box of Kleenex, also illustrated, but you might be mystified by the one in the foreground. It's Kleenex, too, in a new decorative beige covering which will make your dressing table or bathroom shelf look much more ornamental. This attractive and sturdy outer covering slips right over any medium size box of Kleenex (the 200 sheet size), and the slit down the middle enables you to remove tissues with the usual ease. You know, of course, how grand Kleenex is for removing face cream, but have you ever tried it for wiping excess nail polish off the tips and sides of your nails?

ALL Tangee Rouge and Lipstick fans must have sighed at not being able to buy their favorite cosmetics in compact, dressed-up form for evening and formal daytime use. But that omission has just been remedied—the Tangee people have introduced a "Little Miracle" Lipstick and Rouge Compact Set! The illustration shows you its interior, but doesn't, unfortunately, show you the exterior of this attractive silver-finished case containing a plaque for your monogram.

Admirable features of the compact are the large mirror, the "Tangee colored" silk moire rouge puff and the snug groove for holding the lipstick. The compact comes packed in the bright-colored gift box you see hovering in the background. Beside the compact is the familiar dollar Tangee Lipstick, put there to remind you that it's still superb for giving your lips a soft natural tint and also (on account of the cream base) for keeping them smooth. The compact set costs $1.50; rouge refills can be had for fifty-five cents and lipstick refills for thirty-nine cents. Isn't it a bargain?

You'll find a newcomer to the famous Winx family if you go nosing around ten cent store cosmetic counters these days. It's the new Winx Creamy Mascara, in a generous size green and white tube with black lettering, mounted on a card, as illustrated. To use this harmless, tear-proof mascara, you simply squeeze some on a dry brush, then transfer it to your lashes. It gives a very natural and yet dangerous beauty to the thinnest, lightest lashes. And it comes in three shades—black, brown and Parisian blue.

It's pretty well established that milk of magnesia is a good anti-acid when used both internally and externally. It is also well established that the pores secrete a fatty acid which, if left on the skin, is ruinous. So it follows, doesn't it, that creams containing milk of magnesia should be pretty effective in neutralizing these fatty acid accumulations on the skin so that they can do no harm?

Well, that's the line of thought that the Phillips' Milk of Magnesia chemists followed and it resulted in the two excellent new preparations you see in the illustrations—Phillips' Milk of Magnesia Cleansing Cream and Phillips' Milk of Magnesia Texture Cream.

I am particularly fond of the Texture Cream because it is the kind that sinks in rapidly and doesn't leave a greasy residue. Yet it has all the emollient or softening qualities you could demand—as you will see after using it for a time. If you have excessively oily skin with coarse pores and blackheads, you should find the use of these two creams, together with a bland soap and water and a complexion brush, very helpful. They cost only 60 cents each, which is another good reason for investigating them!

The 8th WOMAN

.... gets more out of life

ALWAYS HERSELF

That enviable woman who is never at a disadvantage, never breaks engagements, never declines dances (unless she wants to!) and whose spirits never seem to droop! She is apt to be that eighth woman who uses Midol.

Eight million women have had to always consider the time of month in making an engagement — avoiding any strenuous activities on certain days.

Today, a million escape this regular martyrdom because they have accepted the aid of Midol. A tiny white tablet, is the secret of the eighth woman's poise and comfort at this time.

Are you a martyr to regular pain? Must you favor yourself, and save yourself, certain days of every month? Midol might change all this. Might have you your confident self, leading your regular life, gloriously free from periodic pain and the old discomfort.

The smallest degree of relief you might get from Midol means a great deal to your comfort.

Midol is taken any time, preferably at the first sign of approaching pain. This precaution often avoids the pain altogether. But Midol is effective even when the pain has caught you unaware and has reached its height. It's effective for hours, and it is not a narcotic.

Get these tablets in a trim little aluminum case — they are usually right out on the toilet goods counter. Or, a card addressed to Midol, 170 Varick St., N.Y., brings a trial box in plain wrapper.

ONE of the leading manufacturers of linoleum, the Armstrong Cork Company, has some interesting information to pass on to those who have linoleum floor coverings. One of the surest methods of insuring a long life to your new linoleum floor is to wax it before you walk on it. In waxing, which is done to prevent dirt from being ground into the linoleum, best results will be obtained by spreading the wax in a thin even coat and then rubbing it in with straight strokes in one direction only. Once a floor has been properly waxed, daily care is simple. A special wax called Linogloss may be obtained for this purpose.

Not only has this new discovery brought normal, good-looking pounds to hosts of skinny men and women, but also naturally clear skin, freedom from indigestion and constipation, new pep.

Scientists recently discovered that thousands of people are thin and rundown for the single reason that they do not get enough Vitamin B and iron in their daily food. Now the richest known source of this marvelous body-building, digestion-strengthening Vitamin B is ale yeast. By a new process the finest imported ale yeast is now concentrated 7 times, making it 7 times more powerful. Then it is combined with 3 kinds of blood-building iron in pleasant little tablets known as Ironized Yeast tablets.

If you, too, need these vital elements to build you up, get these new "7-power" Ironized Yeast tablets from your druggist today. Then, day after day, watch flat chest develop and skinny limbs round out to natural attractiveness. Constipation and indigestion from the same cause vanish, skin clears to normal beauty — you're an entirely new person.

Try it — guaranteed

No matter how skinny and rundown you may be, try these new Ironized Yeast tablets just a short time, and note the marvelous change. See if they don't build you up in just a few weeks, as they have thousands of others. If you're not delighted with the benefits of the very first package, your money will be instantly and gladly refunded.

Special FREE offer!

To start you building up your health right away, we make this absolutely FREE offer. Purchase a package of Ironized Yeast tablets at once, cut out the seal on the box and mail it to us with a clipping of this paragraph. Hollywood Shop Talk

Anita Louise, who has a leading rôle in "Anthony Adverse", suggests buds and blossoms, real or artificial, as a costume theme for evening gowns several different outfits out of the one.

Myrna Loy, appearing in "Whipsaw", with Spencer Tracy, introduces something new in a chic little overseas cap of brown tweed. Smart, isn't it?

While we were looking for the cocktail costume we ran into the neatest pair of tailored pajamas which Anita simply couldn't resist. Because a number of you girls have written me asking where you could purchase certain pajama outfits you have seen on the screen I am going to tell you about these. Those you see on the screen are of course designed in the studios and cannot be purchased. But these are similar and are carried by this particular shop the year around and the price is only $8.95. They are tailored in China and are made of that lovely Fuji silk in oyster white. The coat is double breasted with a notched collar and colored frogs marching down the front. The trousers are made slack style with a wide cuff at the bottom. But the really grand thing is the long tailored robe of the same material. The price of the robe is $7.50. For another dollar the shop will put an embroidered monogram on the lapel or the cuff. The outfit comes in combinations of white with navy blue, white with green, or white with red. Anita chose the red and white combination.

I MUST tell you, too, about the clever cigarette case which Anita purchased. It is made of crystal (I believe the technical name is "Prystal") and it has little gold hinges and clasp. The cases are of course transparent and they come in the clear crystal or in green or amber. Some of them have a couple of gold bands across one corner. The price is unbelievably low.

If you want to know where either of the above can be purchased drop me a note and I will be glad to give you the name of the shop.

NOW to tell you about some of the clothes you'll soon be seeing on the screen.

The most thrilling things, of course, are the clothes for The Great Ziegfeld. I spent hours in the Metro wardrobe the other day oooh-ing and ahhhh-ing over them, but since they are strictly period things I won't take time out to describe them. I'll merely tip you off to watch for the lovely black velvet and ermine costume which Luise Rainer, who portrays Anna Held, wears; also the tiny turban of coq feathers worn by Myrna Loy who plays Billie Burke. A muff of coq feathers goes with the turban. I shouldn't be at all surprised to see a revival of some of these costumes for modern wear. They are the sort of things that make women look so lusciously feminine.

By the way, did you know that the Paris and London designers have recently labeled Myrna Loy the best-dressed woman of the screen?

Myrna is wearing a lot of nice sport things in Whipsaw, in which she is starred with Spencer Tracy. In the story Myrna is involved with a band of international jewel thieves and since they are usually just about two steps ahead of the law her clothes are styled for action. One outstanding outfit is a brown tweed suit with lapels and collar of brown suede. Instead of buttons, the coat has suede straps and buckles. With this suit Myrna wears a tweed cap fashioned like the overseas caps which the boys wore during the World War, trimmed with a gay feather cockade.

Out at Warner Bros. Studio, Ruby Keeler and Dick Powell are doing Colleen. This is the story of a boy (Dick) who falls heir to a number of properties left by a relative. Among these properties is a modiste shop managed by an Irish colleen played by Ruby. Yes, you've guessed right. This means that somewhere in the picture there will be a fashion show.

Personally, I like a sport outfit that Ruby wears. It is a tailored dress of tobacco brown crêpe with a narrow Peter Pan collar and a knife pleated skirt. Over this she wears a flannel jacket of pale yellow with orange and brown plaid and a yellow felt hat with a peak crown and tilted brim. The color combination is lovely and most becoming to Ruby.

MAYBE I just naturally have a weakness for sport things for they are the things which usually attract my attention. Over at Columbia, Lange has done a reefer coat for Rochelle Hudson to wear in Rolling Along, which is as cute as the proverbial bug's ear. The material is a Marine blue gabardine and the coat is double-breasted with high revers and fullness at the shoulders to give width. The most novel feature, however, is the collar which is an exaggerated turtle neck with an inner collar of heavy white ribbed bengaline which ties in front in a cravat manner. With this coat Rochelle wears a Marine blue felt pillbox hat with gloves and shoes to match.

And that's all for this time. I'll be telling you more next month.

Borden Quality

EAGLE BRAND SURPRISE APPLE CAKE

2 tablespoons butter, melted
½ teaspoon cinnamon
2 cups graham cracker crumbs
3 eggs, separated
1⅓ cups (1 can) Eagle Brand Sweetened Condensed Milk
2 tablespoons lemon juice
Grated rind of 1 lemon
2 cups canned or drained, sieved apple sauce

Add butter and cinnamon to graham cracker crumbs. Spread thick layer of crumbs on bottom of buttered spring mold or deep 10-inch layer cake pan. Beat egg yolks well, add Eagle Brand Sweetened Condensed Milk, lemon juice, rind and apple sauce. Fold in stiffly-beaten egg whites. Pour into mold. Cover with remaining cracker crumbs. Bake 50 minutes in moderate oven (350° F.). Serve hot or cold.

● Tender and moist and delicately flavorous inside, and nice and crumb-y outside—here's a chef's creation. Yet a beginner could make it! ● But remember—Evaporated Milk won't—can't—succeed in this recipe. You must use Sweetened Condensed Milk. Just remember the name Eagle Brand.

the girl left off. She doesn't take the nice things that have happened to her for granted. She isn't brittle and "fed up with it all." She's more enthusiastic than ever!

If I had to describe her in a one-sentence word picture I think it would be: Swift, charming moods all touched with a brilliant color—that's Janet Gaynor.

When she reads poetry, for instance, she forgets time, space, people, everything. She's mad about it and the thrill of it is in her voice if you can get her to read some aloud. I remember one afternoon on the set when she read me Oscar Wilde's "The Ballad of Reading Gaol." There was the confusion of lights being changed and cables shifted all around us but that faded into the distance. . . .

ANOTHER time, likely as not we'd go into a buck dance between scenes! Janet's an exceptionally good dancer and she dotes on learning new steps. I taught her a couple and she showed me a routine she'd learned in Honolulu.

Honolulu . . .that word spells magic to her. If you want to see a child's eyes at the mention of Santa Claus—just try it! Nothing could be as beautiful a fairyland as Janet's Honolulu. Someday I hope to pack my little grass skirt for a journey to this land of the ukulele and gardenia. And if I should find our Miss Gaynor is the silent partner of the Honolulu, Honolulu, Honolulu & Co., I shouldn't be a bit surprised. . . .

If there was a moment that dragged through the whole time we were making Change of Hearts I never heard of it.

If anything went wrong—the "mike" acting up or something like that—Jimmy Dunn would say, "Let's go home and start fresh Monday!" It got to be a catchphrase with everybody. Janet took it up and how her eyes would dance! She has the most alive, mischievous eyes in the world, anyway. Always looks as if she were about to get into a jam or had something up her sleeve. We played a lot of games between scenes. "Squares" mostly, the idea in that being to keep the other person from finishing a square. Now I've worked at the game with any number of fanatic square players since then but none—if I must break down and confess—have had me going so completely in circles!

One of the loveliest, most home-like places on earth is that Irish cottage of Janet's there on the Fox lot. You enter by way of a flagged walk through a beautiful garden and, once inside, you forget there's a beehive studio-city of nearly five thousand people all around you. The entrance is on the order of a little library—and the main room! You know those homey, panelled rooms with an enormous fireplace you see in pictures around Christmas time? That's the kind Janet has. I lunched there with her often—incidentally she adores baked beans—and we'd talk of everything under the sun.

It was fun. Grand fun. And suddenly the thought came to me, "Why, maybe I can get along with girls after all!"

The odd part was that Janet had always felt about girls the same way I did. A little awkward with them. Margaret Lindsay and I were the first two she'd chummed with—and we did have a good time! Down at Janet's beach house, swimming or just lying in the sand. But that was after the picture was over, of course.

I was sorry when we completed it. It had been more like a holiday for me because Janet quit regularly at five o'clock—I'm not sure, but I believe that's part of her contract—and I'd been used to going on until eight or whenever the director decided to stop. It means so much to a player to have definite hours, a quitting time she can bank on. With Janet it's especially necessary, otherwise she'd drop in her tracks. Because when Janet works, she works! With everything she's got. And the five o'clock whistle is her release.

On our free days we played tennis or ping-pong. Once, Janet and her mother—"Gaynor" as she calls her—and Lela, that's my mother, and I went out to paint the town red. We started in at an Italian restaurant ordering food we couldn't pronounce but which tasted terribly good. And we talked . . . and talked . . . (Good grief, I just remembered . . . Whatever happened to the tickets we had for a concert that night? Certainly we never got there! We were still talking when they began putting out the lights. . . .)

One afternoon when neither Janet nor I were on a picture we went over to my house after a tennis game and I showed her my new drawing materials. Mrs. Ayres' little boy Lew had just sent them. It was funny about that—how he came to send them, I mean.

Lew is really a very clever musician and a composer as well. He'd been working on a symphony, "Autumnal Equinox," off and on for some time and I'd been trying to make him finish it—that was before we were married. (N. B. It's finished now . . . ahem!) Well, he decided if he was going to compose I had to paint. That's how he came to buy those materials for me. Paints, brushes, pencils and so on. I've always done sketching more to amuse myself than for any other reason. Janet first became interested in it when she saw me making a head of Jimmy Gleason on the set one day. But she never dreamed she had a gift for it.

"I don't think I can paint the side of a barn," she told me. But she finally did—on canvas and it was extremely attractive. Only that's ahead of the story. . . .

ON THIS particular afternoon we simply picked up the drawing things and started working in opposite corners of the room. It didn't seem twenty minutes before the lines suddenly began to grow faint. We looked up, and it was dark outside. We'd been there three and a half hours!

Even in that rough sketch of hers—the first she'd ever done—there was no mistaking Janet's talent. "It'll be Janet Gaynor, N. A., before long!" I assured her.

And maybe I wasn't so far from wrong because one of her oil paintings, submitted very surreptitiously to a Los Angeles art exhibition, recently won a prize. (She would probably shoot me if she knew I was telling this).

She hasn't taken lessons. She simply sent down for materials like mine and began working steadily. Later on she went in for oils and now she's far ahead of me.

JANET is always deep in a hobby. It's one of the things that's so colorful about her. When we first became acquainted, it was rug-making; she was working on a beauty for a Christmas present. But I imagine her painting is going to be much more than a hobby. She has converted her trunk room into a regular little studio with palettes and easels about, and some of the remarkably lovely things her fans have sent her. Then too, the room has a gable roof which gives it even more of an artist's atmosphere.

When I think of Janet, though, the picture of her that instantly stands out is the one in her yellow bridesmaid's dress at my wedding. She looked so completely adorable. I've caught half-minute snatches of her since then between our working schedules and her travels. And as I write this my tennis rackets are up there yawning at me, my paints and brushes are collecting cobwebs on the shelf. Writing about her makes me want to talk to her. Think I'll call her on the 'phone . . . excuse me, please!

dawn . . . comes breakfast time. And the same thing invariably happens—with a grunt of disgust he tears up his work. . . .

I would say the four most important factors in his life are his work, his home, his music, and his love of ferreting out strange fascinating details. We were up at Death Valley one time, for example, rambling about without any real destination when suddenly Lew looked as if he'd been handed a gold mine. As a matter of fact he'd found one; an old fashioned one that had been worked out a half century ago and forgotten. He had stumbled across the entrance to it. But of course that wasn't enough. The shafts were still up and Mr. Ayres had to go exploring. He spent four hours digging around, examining the veins or whatever they are. And the tag line to that is—he honestly discovered some gold. About enough to put under a fingernail! And he swears that some day he's going back and "re-work" that mine!

I think Lew practically built the planetarium in Griffith Park. We went up there day after day to "inspect" its progress until the telescopes were in and the concrete moon, and everything. He heard that Archibald Garner was sculpting figures of the great scientists of history for it. And, being Lew, he wasn't satisfied merely to hear about anything so interesting. He went to see—with the usual result that he and Mr. Garner are now very good friends.

But this remarkable curiosity of Lew's doesn't always result in anything so pleasant! Every once in a while he "inquires" into our radio, takes it apart with the certain idea he can remedy that static and at the same time see what makes the thing go. But it refuses to after an "inspection" by Mr. Ayres. And we have to call in the regular fixer.

Lew can be amusingly direct at times. There was the incident of my birthday just to illustrate. He'd given me a at any moment, from any sudden movement. It just "snaps out" and besides causing him excruciating pain, it's a fifty-fifty chance that it'll just kill him some day—or, worse, paralyze him for good.

George Brent—the Daring Young Man

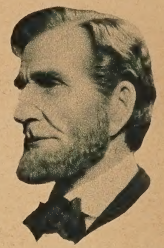
"Cut out polo!" his bosses at Warners told him. "If you've got to play at something, play at something less dangerous."

"Okeh," said George, obediently — and bought himself an airplane! Today, he's one of Hollywood's best aviators. And that despite the fact that he's terribly afflicted with that disease which has some fancy name, but which means simply that from heights, Brent suffers from extreme dizziness and vertigo; actual nausea. When he has to play a scene that takes him ten feet off the ground, he's sick as a dog. And yet he's made himself an expert flyer! Then, one day, he ran into fog. He was lost—mountains all around him, and any moment he might crash one. He didn't know whether he was flying straight, down, sideways, or how. It's the top-terror of an airman's experience. Somehow, by sheer luck, he came out of the fogbank, heading in the opposite direction in which he'd entered it, and a few moments from a certain crash. Many new fliers have quit the game cold after one experience like that! But George — well, he merely grunted, fitted his ship with one of those blind-flying hoods that completely covers the cockpit so he can't see where he is — and learned blind flying! He took on that plane just exactly as he took on that wild bull in Spain—and licked it!

THE MAN WHO PLAYS LINCOLN



ONE of the most dramatic scenes in Shirley Temple's The Littlest Rebel is that in which Shirley comes to the White House to plead with the President for the life of her father, a Confederate officer doomed to the firing squad. In this remarkably human scene, Lincoln lifts her to his desk and they share an apple together as she presents her case. Frank McGlynn is the man who plays Lincoln, and it is not his first effort in this great portrayal. He reached the height of his fame as an impersonater of the Civil War President in John Drinkwater's play, Abraham Lincoln. McGlynn himself never met Lincoln, but his father knew the Great Emancipator and it was from him that the actor learned many facts which help his portrayal. Because there are more than eighty-four "spittin' images" of Lincoln alive today, McGlynn is proud that he was chosen for the rôle. "I think I know from my own experience," he says, "what it is to know sorrow and defeat. One must know these things to really play Lincoln."

That plane, by the way, is his only extravagance. In everything else, he's a self-appointed tightwad, and he not only admits it, but asserts it. And the answer is the only thing in life that George Brent fears. That is, the danger of stagnation, of "settling down." Of the possibility of that, Brent is intensely afraid. And so he's insuring himself against it.

"My idea of a swell time," he says, "is to bum around the world, see places, try things. On dirty little freight ships, where you don't have to be photographed, dammit! I want to go everyplace, anyplace, yet have no place in particular to go, and have all the time in the world to get there. I want to be free, to live my own life, to take on any and all thrills, anywhere, of any and every kind. . . ."

I grinned, and shot him the question he notoriously hates:

"But what place in that dream of dangerous freedom," I demanded, "will women — or the woman — occupy?"

George scowled. When it comes to talking about women—women in particular, like Garbo or Chatterton, or just women in general—George is a clam.

"Women don't have any place in that idea at all," he finally grunted, with none too good grace.

"But what about all this rumor of—that is, you're fair game for the women; you're a bachelor; you're handsome; you'll be well off—and you're a normal male human. How does the woman angle fit in with your plans to 'bum around the world'?"

"There isn't any woman angle at all," he repeated. Then he added: "—not now, anyway."

AND now that we're on the woman subject, you all, of course, know that it's current Hollywood rumor that Brent and Garbo will marry, soon. Brent says nothing, and no questioning or talking or prying will get a word out of him. As for other women in his life—well, there simply aren't any. On the one occasion in months when he has night-clubbed it for an evening, it was with his agent, Minna Wallis. And even that evening, he went home early to his books.

At that home, he rarely has any guests. His closest friend is his stand-in, Carter Gibson. Brent lives in Charlie Farrell's Toluca Lake house. But in a few months, he's going to move. Where to? He just doesn't answer. One of his studio associates said maybe he's going to move in with his wife.

Wife?

"Yeah, Garbo," they answer; "they'll be married by then." Brent doesn't even seem to hear gags like that. If he does, he ignores them.

In that Toluca Lake home, at present, Brent keeps a womanless bachelor hall. For companionship, he's got two of the best friends a man ever had. They're named Max and Whiskey. Max is a Dobermann-Pinscher; Whiskey is a lady bulldog—one of the underslung kind. Despite Brent's intense bachelorism, Max and Whiskey have had a romance. Brent's expecting an addition to the family any week, now. He says he can hardly wait to see what the pups of a Dobermann-Pinscher father and an Underslung Bulldog mother are going to look like!

Did you know that twenty retakes of a single scene were necessary in Barbary Coast, due to the necessity of cleaning Miriam Hopkins' gown after every shot which showed her walking along a muddy street?

diamond pendant, a really beautiful cross and crown piece, and naturally I was pretty happy. But when I woke up the next morning there was a Buick car, all tied with ribbons, sitting in the driveway! Going to dinner that night I gave a "pep" talk on the Necessity of Being Frugal or Why Actors Should Save Money.

Lew grinned and kept silent.

"Look here," I protested, "didn't you think that pendant was enough?"

"Yes," said Lew, "I did." Now what can a girl say to that?

The funny part about Lew is that he appears as casual and irresponsible as a gypsy—whereas he's the complete mainstay of the family. In that quiet way of his he's terribly thorough. When we moved into a new home recently he was the one who took control and saw that the trunks were locked and the samovar didn't stay behind. I was rehearsing and everything would have been skittle-skattle if he hadn't been a born organizer.

He's always on time. Maddening fact. I seldom am. Also maddening. And thereby hangs a tale. . . .

I've heard of these things happening, seen them in movies, but never thought they could in real life until—

It was the day we were going down to get our marriage license. Lew was working out at Fox Hills at the time and he had only two hours to get way down into Los Angeles and get back again. Consequently he asked me to meet him at the corner of Vermont and Beverly. "Right in front of the drug store, Ginger, at one o'clock sharp. One o'clock, mind you."

And at one o'clock I was there. For once I was on time. And for once Lew was late. I waited. One thirty came. A quarter of two. I went in the drug store and telephoned mother. "Where on earth are you?" she demanded. "Lew has been telephoning regularly trying to find out."

"Right where he told me to be," I assured her. "And if he calls up again you tell him so!" Then I went out to stamp my foot some more.

At two I rang her up again. "Lew's in a frenzy. You can't be at the corner of Vermont and Beverly!" she informed me.

"Well I am!" I told her. But this time as I went out there was Lew across the street pacing wildly up and down! There were two drug stores at that intersection and plenty of traffic in between and we'd timed our phone calls so that we continually missed each other.

P. S. We got the license but would Mr. Ayres believe I was there on time? Oh no! . . . And even as I write this a voice comes over my shoulder, his voice, "Well, I still think you were late!"

Curious Facts

During the shooting of The Petrified Forest, Leslie Howard and Bette Davis were discovered to be ailing from a mysterious throat malady. Investigation by a doctor proved the cause to be pollen from cactus transplanted in the studio. The dust irritated delicate membranes in the throat. Did you know that Peter Lorre, who scores such a hit in Crime and Punishment, stands-in for himself?

SOUR STOMACH WORRIES BANISHED FOR MILLIONS

MILLIONS now know the smart thing is to carry a roll of TUMS, always. Sour stomach, heartburn, gas, and other symptoms of acid indigestion have a habit of occurring at unexpected times. You don't have to drench your stomach with harsh alkalies which physicians have long warned may make the tendency toward acid indigestion worse. TUMS, a real scientific advancement, contain no soda or other alkalies, instead a wonderful antacid that simply neutralizes stomach acidity, the balance passing out of the body inert.

Try TUMS when you feel the effects of last night's party, or when you smoke too much. Pleasant to eat as candy, only 10c a roll. Put a roll in your pocket now.

KILL KIDNEY ACIDS

Win Back Pep,
Clear Your Skin,
Look Younger.

Women Need Help More Often Than Men

When Acids and poison accumulate in your blood you lose your vitality and your skin becomes coarse and cloudy—you actually feel and look years older than you are. And what is worse, functional Kidney disorders may cause more serious ailments, such as Getting Up Nights, Nervousness, Leg Pains, Lumbago, Swollen Joints, Rheumatic Pains, Dizziness, Dark Circles Under Eyes, Headaches, Frequent Colds, Burning, Smarting, Itching, and Acidity.

The only way your body can clean out the Acids, poisons, and toxins from your blood is through the function of 9 million tiny, delicate tubes or filters in your Kidneys. When your Kidneys get tired or slow down because of functional disorders, the acids and poisons accumulate and thus cause much trouble. Fortunately, it is now easy to help stimulate the diuretic action of the Kidneys with a Doctor's prescription, Cystex (pronounced Siss-Tex), which is available at all drug stores.

Doctors Praise Cystex

Dr. G. B. Knight

Dr. Geo. B. Knight, of Camden, New Jersey, recently wrote: "When Kidneys don't function properly and fail to properly throw off the waste matter strained from the blood, aches develop in the muscles and joints, the appetite suffers, sleep is disturbed, and the patient is generally run-down and suffers with lowered vitality. Cystex is an excellent prescription to help overcome this condition. It starts its beneficial action almost immediately, yet contains no harmful or injurious ingredients. I consider Cystex a prescription which men and women in all walks of life should find beneficial in the treatment of functional Kidney disorders." And Dr. T. J. Rastelli, famous Doctor, Surgeon, and Scientist, of London, says: "Cystex is one of the finest remedies I have ever known in my medical practice. Any doctor will recommend it for its definite benefits in the treatment of many functional Kidney and Bladder disorders. It is safe and harmless."

World-Wide Success

Cystex is not an experiment, but is a proven success in 31 different countries throughout the world. It is prepared with scientific accuracy and in accordance with the strict requirements of the United States Dispensatory and the United States Pharmacopoeia, and because it is intended especially for functional Kidney and Bladder disorders, it is swift, safe and sure in action.

Guaranteed To Work

Cystex is offered to all sufferers from functional Kidney and Bladder disorders under an unlimited guarantee. Put it to the test. See what it can do in your own particular case. It must bring you a new feeling of energy and vitality in 48 hours—it must make you look and feel years younger and work to your entire satisfaction in 8 days or you merely return the empty package and your money is refunded in full. You are the sole and final judge of your own satisfaction. Cystex costs only 3c a dose at all druggists, and as the guarantee protects you fully, you should not take chances with cheap, inferior, or irritating drugs or with neglect. Ask your druggist for guaranteed Cystex (pronounced Siss-Tex) today.

Shearer, Myrna Loy and Ginger Rogers struggling through periods of drudgery, resolved not to stop short of the stars. Hollywood has gathered up people from the four quarters of the earth, and most of them have gone places because they had the bravery to laugh at despair. Talent Overlooked

THOSE Hollywood "biggies" are making the mistake of their lives by overlooking one of the best bets they have had in years. They continue to scream for new talent, yet let one of the better actors slip through their fingers. Onslow Stevens may not be an Adonis, but his acting and personality always overshadows the rest of the cast, no matter who they might be. Stop wasting him in those "quickies." Give him a nice, juicy rôle to sink his ivories into. Then watch his smoke!—Lillian Houtwed, 219 6th St., West New York, N. J.

Bouquets for Blore

WHY must all the bouquets for the phenomenal success of Top Hat inevitably be thrown at the feet of Ginger Rogers or Fred Astaire? True, Ginger was never more lovely and Fred never fails to fascinate, but in my opinion Eric Blore really "makes" the show. It isn't the exciting dance numbers, catchy tunes or exciting locale which marks the success of a picture. It is the comedy situations which drive away care and give us moments of side-splitting laughter.—Buda Bronson, Box 475, Ronceverte, W. Va.

Bring Wally Back

IS THERE anyone present who wouldn't like to see Wallace Beery brought back into the element which he so magnificently proved to be his own in The Big House? He has never scaled the heights in the softer rôles. It's a case of keeping him soft and making us sick of his goofy grin or turning him hard again, letting us have the convincing "tough guy" we love so well.—*Joe Sherrod, 4422 N. Muni, the Magnificent

WHEN I read a particularly good book, the spell stays with me for days, and that's the way I feel about a Paul Muni picture. He makes every picture live and breathe. Every time I see the Muni label tacked on a picture, I know I am going to see a masterpiece. Any good-looking actor can make love to women, but when it comes to the matter of acting, Paul Muni has no equal on the screen today.—Eleanor Sherman, 620 North Graham St., Charlotte, N. C.

A Woman Who Fought For Love!

forget she is woman. One year later Jessie Matthews was married to Sonnie Hale, one of the greatest comedians in England.

When I think of that year through the eyes of Jessie Matthews, I am honest in saying I do not see how she lived through it. When I look at Jessie and Sonnie, today, living tranquilly, beautifully, happily in their lovely old farmhouse, close to Windsor Castle, with its modern nursery and an adorable adopted daughter—I realize rewards do come to those who go through hell upon earth, with heads held high and lips sealed tightly.

Jessie Matthews was cast in a play with Sonnie Hale. He was married to Evalyn Laye, who was far, far away from them. Neither Jessie nor Sonnie intended to fall in love with each other. Jessie knew Sonnie was married. That was the reason she saw him only on the stage. For a long time she told herself she didn't even like this man with whom she chanced to be playing. Then, appearing in Manchester, far away from friends in London, it rained. Now, there is nothing more lonely than rain in a strange city. There was nothing to do. After all, they were playing in the same show. Why shouldn't she accept an invitation for a little fun, a ride or something. Of course, there are no shows in England on Sunday.

I wish you knew Jessie Matthews. She is one of the most dynamic, fascinating and yet wistful women I have ever known. She is coming to America this winter to do a picture for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. If you have a chance to meet her, don't miss it. It isn't beauty—it's that dynamo hidden behind a will-o'-the-wisp personality. And Sonnie Hale is perhaps the wittiest man I have known. When you see them together, you do understand a bit about Dan Cupid. To an American viewpoint, there is no doubt these two were intended to meet and to marry.

And that's what they wanted to do: to marry. From the moment Cupid finally managed to get them alone together. But Sonnie was married. And Evalyn Laye—well, wives have never been generous about men who show interest, even professional interest, in other women.

Again, in America, the fact that they had fallen in love so they wanted to marry and establish a home where they could have children would have been proof this was love. Perhaps we Americans understand love too well. Perhaps we forgive too much because we are incurably romantic. Anyway, we would have understood Jessie. And when she wrote a little note to Sonnie in which she said she wanted a man like him to be the "father of my children," we would have understood she was saying, "This is the real thing. I have discovered the Zenith of life for a woman. I want you to know I have never really loved before; will never really love again. You are the type of man whom I want to be the father of my children." The highest compliment woman can pay to love.

But a wife and an English judge did not interpret this letter in that way. Undoubtedly, Sonnie Hale kept that note because it meant so much to him. A man does not throw away the highest compliment paid him by a woman.

HOW it got into court is immaterial. It was there. And when the judge granted Evalyn Laye her divorce, he condemned Jessie Matthews as few women have been condemned in this world. Unfortunately, the English law allows the newspapers to print what a judge says but not why. There is no chance for a legal explanation. And Jessie and Sonnie refused to discuss this situation with anyone—to make explanations.

I believe I am the only woman to whom Jessie has talked about it. And I can tell you that even today that woman suffers from what the world read into the greatest experience God has brought to her. And yet, so big is she, that the name of the other woman never passes her lips! There is no condemnation—only regret. Sorrow.

For six months, Jessie and Sonnie did not see each other. This was while his divorce was coming through. The world thought this the only reason. It wasn't. "We wanted to know just how our love would withstand this great testing, this horrible nightmare which had come to it. If we added separation—"

Jessie came to New York in a Cochran show.

NOW, it is seldom I feel honestly ashamed of my own profession. But I tell you frankly the way the reporters of New York treated Jessie Matthews is something for which I blush—and I have been a reporter all my life. American reporters are supposed to be broad-minded. We are supposed to understand love and marriage and divorce in a different way than those working in nations living with traditions. Yet we accepted the obvious, without investigation, without knowing the English divorce laws and what they might do to innocently help misinterpret a situation. So it was suggested Jessie Matthews not be allowed in this country. It was suggested she be turned back at Ellis Island. It was suggested she not be allowed to work in this country. She was called an immoral woman without one shred of proof. And this to a woman who was a guest from another nation. I wonder how we would feel if England did this to one of our numerous divorcees who visit there?

But our government was just. She was admitted. She opened in her play. The audience gave her a terrific ovation. She could scarcely keep from bursting into tears as they called and recalled her. She is a magnificent dancer and a great actress and that audience appreciated the talent she offered. She sat up all night waiting for the first editions of the morning papers. At last, she had recognition. The American audience had adored—all this publicity was a horrible mistake. The people were going to make it up to her. The tears rolled down my cheeks as she told me how she waited for those papers. The man she loved was thousands of miles away. The horror of what love had done was still a huge Devil's head before her.

She opened the first paper. The play

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—
Without Calomel—And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Your whole system is poisoned and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

Laxatives are only makeshifts. A mere bowel movement doesn't get at the cause. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." Harmless, gentle, yet amazing in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name. Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c at all drug stores. © 1935. C.M.Co.

Bill Powell Debunks Himself

(The grip's hand waved toward the luscious showgirls who were on the set).

"—but he got treating them to so many candybars that they began takin' on too much beef to be glorified, so the candybars are out!"

One day, there wasn't a woman on the set. That day, Bill treated to ice-cold ale and "hamburgers-with." His male co-workers, Bill reasoned, could take it, but he's too much the gentleman to ask any actress to listen sweetly to onion-breathed words from his lips, even for a scene!

It's fun to watch Bill on the set, any time.

The day I watched them making The Great Ziegfeld, he was helping Luise Rainer. Luise, you know, is foreign, and she sometimes stumbles over American words. Bill's always there to help her. Most of the time, he slips her a simple word to use instead of the difficult one in the script. Luise plays Anna Held, you know. She was trying to say "intoxicated."

"Eeentossy cats," was the way it fell from the lovely Luise's lips. Bill grinned.

"Make it just plain 'drunk,' Luise," he said. She did, and the line packed a lot more punch. Bill's always helping direct, too, and the directors love his help. He's got a marvelous sense of punch and drama, and often he and the director have rewritten a scene right on the set and improved the original script. Always, he does it with a sense of humor that delights, rather than offends. Like the line where I watched Luise try to say "bracelet."

"Brass-let," she made it.

"No, brace-let," yelled the assistant director.

"Brass-let," said Luise, again.

Bill horned in.

"Look," he said to her. "You know payday, don't you?"

"Oooh, but surely," said Luise, "I know payday!"

"Well, it's braycelet, like payday," stressed Bill.

She got it.

Incidentally, it's amusing, in view of the story of the buttinsky with which this story starts, that at the studio today, Bill isn't called "Mr. Powell," around the lot at all. Instead, everybody—fellow-actors, grips, executives, publicity man, waitresses, electricians, directors, truck-drivers—everybody calls him "Mister Ziegfeld." There's that indefinable under-cover thrill going round that electrifies a studio when one of those unusually swell pictures is in the making. It's an unexplainable grapevine code that seems to fly all over the lot, just as everybody knows too when a picture in the making is heading for a flop. The Great Ziegfeld has the whole studio aquiver with the sixth-sense certainty, even long before preview, that here's a big picture coming up. And so, it seems more natural that they call Bill "Mister Ziegfeld." And it seems natural to Bill, too.

BILL'S home isn't at all finished yet, even though Bill is living in it. Only his bedroom, den and bathroom, and his kitchens, are what you'd call finished. He lives in them, while the rest of the house is in the hands of decorators and artisans. It is significant that not only one kitchen, but several, are finished. Bill loves good food and he loves to eat. His cook is a gourmand's delight and his kitchen is the last word in what the well-dressed house will wear.

IN ADDITION to the chef's kitchen, Bill has kitchenettes sprinkled here and there. There's one off his bedroom, with a big electric refrigerator, so that any time he feels like it, he can get up and rummage in the icebox for a leg of cold chicken or scramble himself an egg or make a cup of coffee. There's another kitchen off his den! Wherever he is in the house, when it's done, Bill'll never be more than a hand-reach from an icebox and a range.

You might gather from this that Bill is something of a homebody. His friends know that they can pretty well depend on Bill himself answering the phone, anytime they ring the house while he's not at the studio. Rarely does he go out. He's still laughing at his most recent attempt to take a vacation anywhere else but in his own home—

"We'd planned a fishing trip to Mexican waters," he tells you. (The "we" includes Ronnie Colman and Dick Barthelmess.) "Well, we fished for several weeks, but it's funny, we never caught a fish!

"And do you know, when the fishing trip was over, I was so tired, that I had to extend my vacation two weeks, to go to Catalina Island to rest up.

"Well, darned if at the end of that two weeks' rest in Catalina I wasn't so tired from resting that I had to take another vacation at Arrowhead Springs, and rest!

"Why, it was a whole week more before I got back to work to recuperate from my third vacation after my second vacation after my first vacation!"

Oh, I could tell you a lot more things about Bill. I could tell you how he hates to gamble, because he's such a rotten gambler that he almost always loses, he says. So when he won $25 in a studio football pool, despite his "always losing," he gave the $25 to his stand-in, so as not to spoil his record. And I could tell you how he hates to be called on to be Master of Ceremonies, so he always is.

And I could, I suppose, tell you about how popular he is with the girls—what charm he has for them, and all that. I suppose you're wondering why I haven't devoted most of this story about him to that sort of thing, because most stories about him are about that sort of thing. Well, the reason is that Ginger Rogers, Editor Pro Tem of this magazine, warned me that she was tired of stories about how charming Bill Powell was to women, and that she didn't want me to mention how, why, when, where, etc., Bill felt about women.

But I can't help telling you. Because just the other day, an interviewer asked him if he'd tell, "What I Dislike About Women."

Bill was silent for a long time.

Then he replied:

"Nothing."

Gable—the Big Brute

Then I asked myself what my grown-up uncles would think of such babyishness. I closed my mouth. A few minutes later, with my hand wrapped up in a clean white dishcloth, I was back there watching Aunt Josie slicing cabbages and just as fascinated as if nothing had happened."

So this young Dutchman grew in stature and in favor with men. Running wild in summer over the hills, learning to hunt and fish. Hardly ever seeing a girl and when meeting such an alien creature, masking what amounted to fear with a brusque assumption of the masculine superiority he copied from his uncles.

"In the old Pennsylvania Dutch families," he explained, "the men were the dominating factor. It was a provincial, old-style existence and the women were kept in the background.

"Till I was six and went to school and had my first encounter with girls, about all I knew of the sex was that women took care of me, but the men stood out. They did things. Women were told what to do."

WHEN he came to marry, Clark followed the life pattern formed in childhood. He married Josephine Dillon, an energetic little woman several years his senior. He was married to her when they lived in the old house in the Hollywood hills. She was a product of the Little Theater movement and she was coaching him, while they lived in poverty, for a more determined onslaught on stage and screen.

The wife from whom Clark has recently separated—after a long, brave fight on both sides to make a go of it—was a wealthy widow, formerly Ria F. Franklin, whom he met and married in New York. In spite of his extreme masculinity, Clark Gable doesn't want a clinging vine to care for. He needs a woman to take care of him, and that in a rather impersonal way, as the grown-up aunts cared for a small motherless boy back on the farm in Pennsylvania. It is the extreme difficulty of finding such a made-to-order aunty which dooms Clark to marital failure.

The saga of Clark Gable's life struggle is too familiar to bear repetition. Years of labor in factories and oil fields and construction camps—the world of lonely men. Periods of unemployment and hunger, long cold rides on the rods under freight cars. Suddenly, as if a curtain had been lifted before his eyes, young Gable discovered that for which he had been unconsciously preparing himself—the career of an actor.

There was more poverty then, more hardship on the road, playing in fly-by-night companies on a percentage basis that failed to materialize. But the young Dutchman had learned courage. With the first stage part he landed he clicked on Broadway. And when he was offered a choice he took a chance on the picture part in Dance, Fools, Dance, though he had just attained security as a stage actor.

Through the factory smoke, through the murk of his long struggle, the character of Gable emerges, clear and honest. Walking with a masculine swagger as he makes Fletcher Christian walk through the harrowing scenes of Mutiny on the Bounty.

Like every success that is real, Gable's success in a chosen career is not due to luck, but to character developed as a child. He turned what was a childish weakness born of the fear of girls into a masculine superiority that has made him the idol of women; for that is the invariable female response to male aggression—since first a cave man swung his club athwart some skin-clad cutie.

But while this built-up attitude serves him well as an actor, it will fail him every time in real life. The most valuable asset that Gable acquired in his struggle to reach the goal of superiority was the courage learned as the child who cut his hand and wouldn't cry.

The unusual photograph of Clark Gable sans shoes was taken in Mexico City on the first lap of his recent South American jaunt. Clark had just stepped off a plane and in the few minutes he had to relax did what any man would do—discarded his shoes.

pansy shade of blue; she was essentially feminine from her first step.

In writing of Virginia Bruce it is important to emphasize that she is personally as charming and gracious as she is beautiful. And she is not temperamental.

After visiting with Virginia, I was reminded, too, of something that her close friend, Dolores Del Rio, had told me recently. Miss Del Rio had said: "A woman should not dissipate her strength, nervous system or disposition by worry, bitterness or temperamental outbursts. These are the greatest hazards on the path to beauty—whether it be directed to figure or face."

Neither life nor people can disappoint or disillusion Virginia Bruce. Even after the break-up of her romantic marriage to John Gilbert, she wasn't at all bitter. She was just grateful for the happiness she had had. Maybe that is another reason why Virginia Bruce has such glamorous charm!

THE SALARIES OF MOVIE CHILDREN

Shirley Temple now earns more than $4,000 weekly on her movie contract. Freddie Bartholomew started at $150 a week, but recently was boosted to $250, with $150 weekly for the services of Aunty Myllicent. Mickey Rooney, who appears in Ah Wilderness, receives $400 every week whether he is working on a picture or not. Jackie Searle is paid $3,300 a picture. David Holt's salary check amounts to $175 every seven days, and Edith Fellowes, who did such a grand job with Claudette Colbert in She Married Her Boss, receives $150 weekly.

New Film Notes

Pat O'Brien, standing at his desk overlooking the flying field, surrounded by weather and topographical maps, radio instruments and all the paraphernalia of a dispatcher's office on a big air-line was the composite character of every ground officer I've ever seen. It was hard to realize that metallic, static punctuated voice of Tex's was just Stu Erwin in a nearby sound booth as it came over the loud speaker in the office.

It wouldn't be fair to you to recount here the throat-tightening manner in which Dizzy, the same old gay, careless, wise-cracking Jimmy Cagney, comes back despite the ever-present and willing ladies who dog his path and winds up the picture with a self-sacrifice smash that will probably leave you as limp and, strangely exalted as it does Pat O'Brien when he—

But never mind. Take my advice and see that finale!

ROSE MARIE

Putting Together A Smash Hit

THE sandy point jutted out in the brilliant blue of the lake; chilled, sweet mountain air rustled the crisp pine needles. The huge war canoes were beached on the eastern side of the point. Over three hundred Washoe Indians moved about in ominous silence. From off-shore beyond the western side of the point came the muffled precision, the liquid chunking of paddles, hundreds of them, as they were driven deep by the approaching Piutes.

As the Piute war canoes touched ground a small band of the younger braves, headed by old Chief Black Hawk leapt ashore and formed a casual appearing protective semi-circle about their canoes, goods and families. Mid-way on the point between the two tribes stood a veritable forest of totem poles under which waited Director Van Dyke, his crew, Nelson Eddy and Jeanette MacDonald. With steady, solemn suspicion Black Hawk and Chief Red Bear of the Washoes approached, followed by a picked crew of their own warriors.

It was a delicate moment.

Both tribes are proud, quick to take a slight, and this was the first time in years that they had encountered one another en masse—and memories of ancient battles stirred the blood of the young men. With supreme tact and diplomacy "Woody" opened the pow-wow. MacDonald and Eddy were introduced to the stolid-faced men whose only show of feeling came from now twinkling eyes.

Thus it was that two ancient tribes lived amicably together for five weeks on a small point in a mountain lake—and went into the movies!

A few of them broke down and grinned with delight when part of the company was moved to a small valley noted for its five clear and distinct echoes, a perfect spot for Jeanette to sing her Indian Love Call. There was something they could understand—sheer beauty. All this business about precious black boxes that white men fussed with and their big lights and silver reflectors was a lot of bunk to them, but they did get a wallop out of Jeanette singing, and out of Nelson Eddy releasing his powerful voice in Friml's melodies—even if they didn't know or care who Friml was.

"The Indians did get a wallop out of Jeanette singing and out of Nelson Eddy releasing his powerful voice in Friml's melodies, even if they didn't know who Friml was."—Scene from Rose Marie, a Metro film

"When Claudette did her fainting scene, I could hardly keep from rushing to her side, cameras or no cameras. She brought out the Walter Raleigh in me."—Scene from The Bride Comes Home

THE BRIDE COMES HOME

When It's Colbert It's Real Comedy!

THE elevated train rumbled and screamed around the curved tracks, passed tenements and lofts and jolted into the station. Below on the street were hurrying crowds, trucks, taxies, cops, an armored car and side-walk vendors. Standing at every point of vantage on the "L" structure, guarding every exit in calculatedly unobtrusive manners, stood over a dozen detectives.

As the train stopped and the doors flew open there was the usual rush and jam. Stenographers hurrying to work were pushed back into the cars by salesmen trying to find a prospect somewhere in the Windy City; guards shouted imprecations at the sluggards. It was nine a. m. in Chicago—all except for one little thing, one little thing with large liquid brown eyes who answered to the name of Claudette Colbert.

When Claudette did her fainting scene, I could hardly keep from rushing to her side, cameras or no cameras. She brought out the Sir Walter Raleigh in me.

As soon as she fought free from the crowd jamming the platform of the "L" built on the Paramount lot, got her clothes rearranged and started for the stairs, Director Wesley Ruggles called "Okay!" and the cameras stopped.

Outside of that one duplicate of a Chicago street set, even down to—or, rather, up to—the elevated structure, there is little that is startling about The Bride Comes Home, but there is a tremendously fine piece of entertainment wrapped up in it. Fred MacMurray and Bob Young round out the bickering, comradely trio that argue and make love through another of Claudette's successful light comedies. They even had fun making the picture, which is something unusual in these days of short shooting schedules.

But the only thing that Claudette will really remember about the picture was young Wesley Ruggles, Jr's. visit to his daddy's set. His huge, two-year-old eyes, borrowed direct from his mother, Arline Judge, swept the set. Claudette saw him, rushed over, exclaimed, "What a darling baby! Oh, please, come over here and see me!"

Little Wesley regarded her gravely, stepped back a pace, looked quickly around and, finger on lips, hissed:

"Sh-h! Don't talk on set! Daddy doesn't like it!"

PROFESSIONAL SOLDIER

Bartholomew And McLaglen—Tough Guys

"FREDDIE! What on earth are you doing?"

"Oh, it's quite all right Aunty Millicent! I'm just shooting craps, a lovely American game that Mr. McLaglen taught me for the picture."

So Freddie Bartholomew doesn't shoot craps any more, on or off stage.

Little Lord Fauntleroy has gone American in a big way. He wouldn't budge from the set whenever there was any chance of watching Vic handling a tommy gun or a heavy typewriter. He wants to be a soldier of fortune and considers almost any other job as "rather dull, you know."

When Vic pulls one of his dashing escapes from the legendary castle of a mythical Ruritanian Kingdom and mows down dozens of fancy-garbed soldiers whose aim is singularly bad, Fred hollers his head off in glee. There is one long shot in the palace court-yard; Vic is kidnapping Fred, the boy King who has been kept prisoner in his own palace by an unscrupulous regent who is ruining the country. Fred is tickled to death to be kidnapped and hopes against hope that Vic is really Dillinger in disguise. Soldiers surround them in the yard, on roof and wall tops, everyplace. Vic backs away, his tommy gun chattering death; men drop like flies, fall from Chauteau roofs and pin-wheel through the air; and the little boy-King, Fred, hops from one foot to the other yelling and cheering. Golly! It's action! This is really like being in the movies!

a word spoken or used incorrectly in her class without being openly discussed. At all times, the Webster Dictionary is the only authority—no matter what the college professor might say—Mr. Webster is always correct.

The pupils must learn to read so well that they can turn their backs to the class and make the class feel everything they read.

"That is good radio training," she explains, "also, no one can ever tell when a player on the stage or screen may have to turn his or her back to the audience and still put over the full meaning of the speech."

She also teaches them to read "cold." That is, to read aloud something they have never read before and to put all the feeling into it that they would into something they had rehearsed.

"That comes in handy when a director asks a player to read a new script for him. Too often, really good players lose out on parts simply because they cannot read 'cold'."

In addition to the voice, she emphasizes mobility of expression, centralizing upon the eyes. The eyes should speak as clearly as the voice and if the eyes speak as they should, it isn't necessary to screw the rest of the face up into all sorts of horrid knots to express an emotion.

AFTER all this is mastered, then comes actual work upon the stage. "One might not think that, with all the preliminary training, any actual stage experience was necessary, but it is! The greatest cook in the world, in the most adequately equipped kitchen couldn't turn out a dinner without actual food to prepare, so it is with my pupils. They might know how to read lines but until they have actually read them before an audience, they cannot feel at home upon the stage."

Mrs. Rogers does not choose her own pupils. The casting director signs young people that he feels have promise. They come from all over the United States—mostly from small stock companies or local home-talent plays. After they are signed under contract, they are turned over to Mrs. Rogers.

Doesn't she teach them how to enter a drawing room, how to meet people, how to conduct themselves in public, how to dress and how to make up?

No! If they want to learn that, she refers them to Emily Post, some well known modiste or prominent make-up artist. Physical culture or dancing lessons will give them the necessary bodily grace.

Mrs. Rogers is interested only in the mental and spiritual side of charm. "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he." It shall never be said of one of the Rogers' graduates, "She was charming until she opened her mouth to speak," for that pupil will not only have learned to have something to say, but how to say it.

"WITH the mind and the heart right—appreciative, and able to express that appreciation, all other complements of charm will come naturally and easily. A person with a bright, active, eager mind will not walk slovenly, he will not slouch in his chair, he will not enter into petty discussions nor gossip. He will not have untidy hair or nails, unpressed trousers or unpolished shoes. His sense of fineness would not permit such incongruity.

"Just recently, I was invited to a gathering of very cultured people. It so happened that I could take one of my pupils. This particular girl had been most difficult. At times, it seemed impossible for her to grasp the full significance of my teachings. However, she was diligent and I was patient and the combination never fails. I was so anxious to give her just that one glimpse of charm en masse.

"I did not tell her what to wear, nor how to conduct herself. I merely invited her to accompany me. She was beautifully and appropriately dressed and I was so proud of her. I turned her loose with the other guests and from a distance, watched her. She was perfectly at home and happy. Only once during the evening did she drop to her former self and that was when she whispered in my ear, "How'm I doin'?"

"I forgave her that one slip and whispered back, "You're doing all right—you are charming!"

—By HARMONY HAYNES.

was written up—but her name was not mentioned. She opened the second. The same thing. The papers had enthused about a production but had not even written the name of the woman who starred in it!

THERE is no insult so great for an artist as the insult of silence. I doubt if many women would have returned to the footlights under those conditions. I have already mentioned courage. Jessie Matthews returned to her next performance and she did not miss even a matinee.

The girl whom Sonnie Hale married, as soon as the divorce made him free, was one who had walked through fire not once but again and again and he knew it. His adoration for her is the kind few husbands give; few wives receive; perhaps few merit. Immediately after the ceremony, they opened together in Evergreen in the West End of London. No need to recount the fear, the dread of these two for that opening. It was either the end or the beginning—of Success and Fame. They knew they had happiness but they knew nothing of what the public might do to them professionally.

It was a sensation. They were a sensation. Somehow, the depths of their love and their sorrow had reached through every obvious opposition. Somehow the people—the people who had themselves known love and sorrow and the ability of a world to condemn—had felt the truth despite what reporters had told them.

Today, Jessie is the highest paid and most popular screen player in England, except Gracie Fields. This winter she is coming to America. She and Sonnie have been married four years. They have lost their first baby, adopted one and are planning on having another of their own in another two years. They have refused huge sums to tell this story. I assure you I went into it most thoroughly. I am hoping I may meet Jessie at the boat when she arrives in America. I am hoping my fellow reporters will meet her. Here is a woman who has suffered as few women have suffered; here is a woman who has conquered as few have conquered. Here is a woman who has loved—a woman who has walked through Hell Fire into Heaven.

Curious Facts

Movie-goers who see Ah Wilderness will marvel at the beauty of the evening scene which shows Cecelia Parker and Eric Linden strolling home together after a high school graduation party. Strangely enough, the scene was taken in broad daylight under a bright sun. A filter over the camera lens produced the unusual effect of twilight. In the same picture, the scene in which Eric begged Cecelia for a kiss, eleven re-takes of the scene were needed before Director Clarence Brown said, "Print that." The eleven re-takes of this vivid screen moment must have had something to do with the fact that the two players have been romancing ever since and may make their affection permanent by having it blessed at the altar. Much of Ah Wilderness was filmed at Grafton, Mass., where the studio paved an entire street and presented it to the town.

$400

Mrs. F. McE. (Penna.) thought it was too good to be true when she read that Chicago School of Nursing students were often able to earn $25 a week while learning "practical" nursing. However, she sent for the booklet offered in the advertisement and after much careful thought decided to enroll. Before she had completed the seventh lesson she was able to accept her first case—in three months she had earned $400!

Think of the things you could do with $400!

CHICAGO SCHOOL OF NURSING

The Truth About Captain Blood

greatest water battle scenes ever photographed had just taken place before their eyes! Those spectators weren't just cheering because "Loud Cheers" were interspersed through their scripts. What they had actually seen on that long sequence was enough to make anybody cheer. In these days of realism on the screen you don't get effects like that in an action adventure story unless the action is the real McCoy.

THE ships, the cannon, the muskets were all the real thing, or as the property sheet lists them, "700 practical muskets." Naturally they didn't shoot ball and shot, but, take my word for it, if you're accidentally hit by even the paper wadding from a blank charge you know darned well that it isn't a bean bag.

Another piece of realism in the picture is Errol Flynn, who plays the title rôle. That guy is Captain Peter Blood! To call him an actor in this rôle is quite unfair to him. If Blood was an adventurer, a man of dash and action, so is Errol Flynn; if Blood lived a riotous life with head and steel drawn in search of danger, well, Flynn is his reincarnation three hundred years later.

For example, you've probably noticed the picture here of Flynn and Basil Rathbone dueling on the cliff edge. You have seen enough pictures and read enough about them to know of the phonies so often perpetrated in the name of drama; well, this one is no phoney. Those rapiers are the real thing and no doubles were used. Flynn wouldn't have it, even though he sustained four wounds in the process—not scratches, wounds—a lacerated neck, a gash over his right eye and two slices on the right forearm. It wasn't a question of two valets, a sweetheart and three doctors rushing on the set at the first sign of blood to treat a noble leading man. Flynn kept right on fighting, harder if anything, and the cameras kept on grinding to the end of the scene.

In one take of that same scene on the edge of the sea cliff, forty feet above the sea with a twelve foot beach immediately below, it was necessary to work over near the edge. The unexpected happened; Flynn's foot slipped on a loose stone. He started sliding. It was instantly apparent to a mind used to emergency decisions that no power on earth could keep him from going over the edge—a forty foot drop to the beach.

Had he been a moment slower or a bit less powerful he would have lit on the beach and many a day would have passed before Errol Flynn would have felt like fencing. However, with a tremendous heave he added that necessary impetus to his fall and hurtled out over the beach and into the comparative safety of the deep water beyond.

THE risks and action that went into making a thriller out of Captain Blood didn't all take place on the water. For some of the close shots it wasn't feasible, due to time and weather conditions, to make them on the sea. Exact, life-size duplicates of two of the boats were reconstructed on a huge sound stage, the background given color by a huge cyclorama. Stunt men did some of their daring jobs on the ropes there. Swinging and dropping with swift precision from their high-strung ropes and performing all manner of dangerous feats that could not have been photographed over water, they encountered some of the biggest thrills in the production of the picture. They were the "men on the flying trapeze," but without the benefit of the trapeze. Flynn came on the set one morning to find the company already working on some of this aerial stuff. A man very much like himself in general build and make-up was rehearsing a rope swing and jump from the high quarter deck of the Arabella to the low and far away main deck of the Cinco Llagas. Flynn asked a couple of suddenly embarrassed assistant directors who the chap was. He got evasive answers until he pinned Mike Curtiz, the director, down to the fact that he was a double, quietly hired to do these few scenes.

It was the only time on the picture that the easy going young Irishman came close to blowing off. A double to do his stuff for him? Ridiculous! "And anyway, Mike," he added, "It's not fair! Here I do all the hard work, sitting around under lights and in front of the camera and doing not much more than talk, talk, talk for weeks and then when the real fun comes along you give that to a double! No, Sir! Absolutely not! I want some fun, too! That looks grand—why—why that's action!"

THE unexpected action on the picture apparently wasn't enough for him. Not that the incident that occurred during his escape from the slave quarters and down past the huge water wheel on the plantation set was exactly innocuous. Casey Robinson, the script writer, played fate when he wrote in a piece of business where Flynn swiped the steel helmet from a dead soldier as a disguise in that scene. If it hadn't been for the helmet, Mr. Flynn wouldn't have been interested in action after that scene was canned. A heavy timber, a break-away, fell from a high balcony just a split second before it was "cued" to do so. And the helmet he'd just donned as a disguise in the story saved Flynn's skull. As it was he was knocked down and all but out. Upset? Not a bit of it! "Just the breaks!" he grinned, "Or was it 'just the break-aways'?"

Rafael Sabatini, himself, could have wished no greater thrill than to have witnessed this filming of one of his greatest books. It will be a thrilling picture on the screen not only because of story and acting, but mostly because it was a thrilling picture to make. Exhausting at times, but of that grand kind of exhaustion that leaves the mind exhilarated and the nerves trembling.

It is Captain Blood!

What are the most important things to remember in acting?

To forget that you are acting, and to be as natural as the lines themselves are.

Do you prefer blondes or brunettes?

Blondes.

How did you learn English?

In school in France.

What is your hobby?

Books and the study of philosophy.

Do you play classical music on the piano? If so, please tell me your favorite composition.

The violin is the only instrument I play. Debussey and Stravinsky are my favorite composers.

What is your idea of a perfect woman?

My wife, Pat Paterson.

In one article in a magazine it was stated that you are interested in philosophy. Have you ever looked into the scientific philosophy called Anthroposophy?

I have read of it but never studied it deeply.

Did you see action during the World War?

Yes.

What do you consider your biggest drawback as a husband?

Ignorance of Anglo-Saxon traits and customs.

Have you any desire to portray a character similar to that of Yorisaka in The Battle?

I would like nothing more than to find a story which would give me a rôle as strong as was that one.

Who is your favorite movie player?

Claudette Colbert.

How many times have you been married?

Once.

How did your career begin?

In the conservatory, and in unpretentious Paris stage productions.

What is your real name?

Charles Boyer.

Do you love children and do you wish for some of your own?

Yes, to both questions.

Do you intend to stay in Hollywood more than six months a year?

Not if my contracts can be arranged otherwise.

What has been, in your opinion, your best picture rôle so far?

That of Dr. Monet in Private Worlds.

What is the difference between American and foreign audiences?

Foreign audiences are more critical but more loyal. They support favorites of other decades indefinitely. In this country, they are forgotten after they have been in one or two bad productions.

PICTURE TIPS

Follow these rating—★★★★ Hit Picture ★★★ Good Show ★★ Fair Film ★ Mediocre

Current Films

ROSE OF THE RANCHO—★★★★—Gladys Swarthout makes her début opposite John Boles in a splendid picture which recounts the adventures of early California families in their battles against the land-grabbers. Miss Swarthout's songs are a sparkling contribution to the finer things the screen has to offer.—Paramount.

FRISCO WATERFRONT—★★—Somewhat implausible, but with Ben Lyon as the young dock worker who fights his way to success with the help of his wife, Helen Twelvetrees, the film has its exciting moments.—Republic.

SEVEN KEYS TO BALDPATE—★★★—Gene Raymond as an author who spends a night in a deserted hotel to win a bet and finds himself mixed up with a gang of jewel thieves. Interesting and swift-moving, with Eric Blore, away from his usual comedy characterization, making good in a detective rôle.—Radio.

KIND LADY—★★—Crook story revolving around the attempt to steal famous paintings, with Aline MacMahon, Basil Rathbone and Mary Carlisle in the cast.—Metro.

SHOW THEM NO MERCY—★★★—Thrilling kidnap story with Rochelle Hudson, Bruce Cabot and Cesar Romero.—Twentieth Century-Fox.

TWO FACES—★★★—Comedy and drama intermingled in the story of a gangster who has his face remodeled and turns movie actor. Wallace Ford, Molly Lamont and Phyllis Brooks in the cast.—Radio.

MILLIONS IN THE AIR—★★½—The story of what happens backstage in an amateur radio hour, performed in a whirlwind of hilarity with John Howard, Wendy Barrie, Willie Howard and many others.—Paramount.

SPLENDOR—★★★—The story of a girl sacrificing almost but not quite all for money to save the pride of the snooty family into which she has married. Miriam Hopkins turns in a fine performance opposite Joel McCrea.—United Artists.

CRIME AND PUNISHMENT—★★★★—The story of a man who commits a murder in getting money for his destitute family and is finally driven to surrender by his own conscience. Beautifully filmed and directed heavy drama with Peter Lorre, Marian Marsh and Tala Birell.—Columbia.

THE CASE OF THE MISSING MAN—★★—In which a clever newspaperman solves a crime by means of his trusty camera. Roger Pryor and Joan Perry featured. — Columbia.

CORONADO—★★—Musical comedy with slight plot about a wealthy young song writer and his romantic troubles with a pretty vocalist. Aside from the story, the film is peppy and amusing. In the cast are Betty Burgess, Johnny Downs, Andy Devine and Alice White.—Paramount.

NEVADA—★★—A better - than - average western with novel twists to the familiar two-gun plot, featuring Buster Crabbe, Kathleen Burke and Sid Saylor.—Paramount.

MARY BURNS, FUGITIVE—★★★—Sylvia Sidney does a fine job as the girl whose life is smirched by one unwitting association with a gangster. Thrilling, moving picture throughout, with Melvyn Douglas stealing a great share of the honors.—Paramount.

SO RED THE ROSE—★★★—The story of a fine Southern family's tribulations during the Civil War, dramatically portrayed by a fine cast which includes Margaret Sullavan, Walter Connolly and Randolph Scott.—Paramount.

THE PAYOFF—★★½—Entertaining story of a newspaper columnist whose wife keeps him continually in debt. His arch enemy, a crooked gambler, finally manages to buy up I.O.U.'s given by the columnist's wife, putting him on the spot. Well played by James Dunn, Claire Dodd and Patricia Ellis.—Warner.

WHIPSAW—★★★—Myrna Loy as a member of a jewel thieving gang abandons her life of crime just before the G Men, headed by Spencer Tracy, catch up with her. Pleasing excitement, with Myrna Loy doing her usual excellent job.—Metro.

MISS PACIFIC FLEET—★★—Nothing particularly unusual in this film which follows the usual romantic pattern, but with the help of the Navy and an amusing beauty contest, it is fair entertainment. Joan Blondell, Glenda Farrell, Hugh Herbert and Allen Jenkins together again. —Warner.

Previously Reviewed Hits

THANKS A MILLION—★★★★—Superb musical comedy based on the silly business of politics. A grand cast, including Dick Powell, Fred Allen and Ann Dvorak, turn out perfect entertainment. —Twentieth Century-Fox.

A NIGHT AT THE OPERA—★★★★—The dizzy Marx Brothers return to the screen after a long absence in one of the funniest pictures ever filmed. Groucho racketeers in opera, with Kitty Carlisle and Allan Jones as foils for his crazy antics.—Metro.

MUTINY ON THE BOUNTY—★★★★—A bloody page from the annals of British naval history, so perfectly filmed that it cannot help but be chosen the best picture of the year. The cast includes Charles Laughton, Clark Gable and Franchot Tone.—Metro.

THE FRISCO KID—★★★—Cagney as his admirers love him in the rôle of a young adventurer who becomes the boss of San Francisco's infamous Barbary Coast. The cast includes Margaret Lindsay, Donald Woods and Ricardo Cortez.—Warner.

PETER IBBETSON—★★★★— Exquisite fantasy with Ann Harding and Gary Cooper delivering beautiful, sensitive performances. — Paramount.

$1,000 A MINUTE—★★★—Highly improbable though the plot of this picture is, this film is excellent entertainment. Roger Pryor, after being fired as a reporter, is given the job of spending $1,000 a minute. And he has a hilarious time doing it!—Republic.

The Secret Of Claudette Colbert's Charm

And the incident was closed, almost. . . .

"Did you actually want to take that dirty child?" I asked.

"No," she said softly "but it was a baby! And the look in the mother's eyes! Did you see that? Isn't it worth a few spots on my gown, to make a woman's eyes shine that way?"

Sounds like sentimental nonsense? Not if you know Colbert! And it wasn't said for publication. She'd probably shoot me for printing this incident, at all. Or for mentioning that she once risked her life to save a dog which didn't even belong to her. A good thing the studio didn't know about that, because studios pay high rates for accident insurance on their stars and think Miss Colbert is a lot more important than a small boy howling with grief and terror because his four-legged pal is in the path of a heedless motorist!

But bravery and kindness are a part of that charm you so admire.

One rather amusing instance of Claudette's power of fascination occurred when she turned up unexpectedly and I had as guest, a lady who thoroughly disapproved of the actress. My elderly friend whom I shall call Mrs. M. is over sixty, very narrow and like a certain large class of Los Angeleans, thinks all motion picture people are headed straight for perdition. I had heard Mrs. M. condemn Claudette as a "wild modern—doesn't live under the same roof as her husband." Mrs. M. had never met the lady in question or seen her on the screen, but now she was about to meet her, come what might! On impulse I mumbled Claudette's name indistinguishably while Mrs. M. gave Claudette's smart little hat a disapproving glare. I left them in fear and trembling to greet other guests, and a little later saw their two heads close together and overheard Claudette saying "a pinch of bicarbonate in the beans keeps them bright and green." You can't beat that girl! Mrs. M. was fascinated. When she got me alone she wanted to know who "the dear domestic little woman" was. I wish you could have seen her face when I broke the news that it was Colbert.

ANOTHER story which I have on good authority also has to do with this willingness of Claudette's to put herself out for old, uninteresting-looking people. In the early days of her Hollywood beginnings, she noticed a dour, lonely-looking old man around the studio. He appeared to snap at everyone who came near him and Claudette decided he must be suffering from indigestion. She chatted with him as blithely and naturally as a daughter with an ailing father, although for a while he only grunted in reply. She was right about the indigestion, and when she herself actually ran out to the drug store and brought him her favorite remedy, standing over him until he'd taken it, she finally drew a smile. It is noteworthy that her fate at the studio was rather uncertain at this period but she could take time out from her own worries to help a sick old man. With the result that one day he wrote "okey" on a very important piece of paper bearing her name. Her lonely old man happened to be one of the most important executives from the eastern offices, and he has since then done more perhaps than any one person in the way of spreading the word that "Colbert is all right."

I think that a great part of Colbert's charm comes from her personal habits. Few French women, no matter how prettily dressed, look really clean. In fact the French as a race are seriously convinced that bathing often is injurious to health. Well, Claudette certainly is the shining exception which proves this rule. She is the cleanest woman I have ever known. Her hair is washed very often—many women would think too often, but Miss Colbert has a theory that cleanliness chases germs, and soap and water never did any serious damage when applied to the person. The camera has a way of making women's faces look dull. The greyness of the silver sheet enormously accents the slightest lack of freshness. Think of how comparatively few actresses, even blondes, look convincingly dainty—compared to Colbert!

On the screen she always appears to be absolutely immaculate. She looks as if she smelled good. Well, she does. By a judicious use of cosmetics and perfumes and with plenty of delicate soap and water. Her clothes have an indescribable freshness about them, and I cannot resist again stressing a fact I have often proclaimed; to wit: that Claudette Colbert is far prettier and more smartly dressed in actual life than on the screen. You have never seen the real Colbert until you've seen the peculiar high-lights in her hair, the changing colors in her enormous eyes, the fine texture of her skin and, last but not least, the astounding skill with which she chooses her clothing.

These things, then, are in my opinion the ingredients of Claudette's charm: the will to please, kindness, perception of others and a rare physical freshness. But behind them lies the soul of the woman. It is a brave thing. Claudette has wanted to learn about the world and its people and has honestly tried to do so. And from that honestly acquired knowledge she has woven the soft web of her enchantment.

"The women of the Orient learn it," she told me. "They practice charm—they study it deliberately, consciously. Their very existence depends on being charming—otherwise the Sultan will perhaps chop their heads off!"

We American women don't get our heads chopped off by our husbands—not as a usual thing, anyway! But we do get our heads "snapped off" quite often. How would you like it if, at the mention of your name, your husband threw away his newspaper and smoothed his hair, wanting instantly to look his best for you—as he does when you take him to see Colbert's lovely shadow on the screen? Well, let's see. The recipe isn't very elaborate—go back and read it over and then let's start by washing our hair! And if we can't quite come up to Claudette Colbert's standard, I'm sure we can acquire quite a lot of charm by following her precepts, with some of her magnificent persistence!

With the Editor IN HOLLYWOOD

Ginger Rogers takes a turn at the editor's duties. She wants a word with you!

EVERY editor has his "just-between-you-and-me" page where he gets right down to business and talks to his readers. And that's what I'm going to do. My heartiest thanks to SCREEN BOOK, and its editor, Carl A. Schroeder, for giving me the opportunity!

It isn't very often a player has a chance to speak out in quite this way. And am I going to take advantage of it? Watch me!

Frankly, I'm tired of the piffle that's been printed about Hollywood. You pick up the paper and what do you see? Big headlines about "HOLLYWOOD STAR INVOLVED IN SCANDAL!" Or maybe it's a murder even. Another black eye for the old town. And when you come to find out the truth, the person implicated played extra for one day and actually lives in Sherman or West Los Angeles.

It's usually the outsiders, the "hangers-on," who create the real trouble in Hollywood. Not those in the movie business itself. All the records prove that. Naturally there's a certain glamour about the place and people do things here they wouldn't dare do at home. They come to Hollywood to have a fling—and it's essentially a working town . . .

- You hear it called an "abnormal city." That, to me, is the best joke of all. I find myself and everybody I know taking much better care of themselves here than they do any place else. I've been at a good many parties where business men and women were and I haven't heard one of them say, "Well, I've got to leave early. Have to be at work the first thing in the morning." But actors say it constantly. They have to keep regular hours. They have to lead the most normal and regular kind of life or the camera turns tattle-tale.

The guest editor at her desk

- Another thing I resent—and I think you do too— is what actors themselves sometimes say about this place. They say it's "mechanized" and "no one can call his soul his own." That seems to me pretty much like biting the hand that feeds you. It's quite true that Hollywood is exacting. But where on earth would you get such returns? If you can take advantage of all it has to offer, it's the best place in the world to develop. One reason is because the spirit of competition is so keen. You're surrounded by brilliant, clever people and you have to develop your personality to the nth degree or be lost in the shuffle.

- The trouble is that a great number of persons blame the old town for everything and anything that happens to them. And it's so wrong, wrong, wrong!

It's wholly up to them whether they're going to adapt themselves or not. The smart folk are that ones who know that Hollywood isn't permanent. The very nature of the business precludes that. But at the same time, if you use it right, it can be your bulwark for the future.

- The one thing I have against Hollywood is this: Its doors are so hard to crash. Every studio gets an everage of nearly five thousand letters a week from people wanting to get into the movies. Asking how to go about it . . . what to do.

It may sound queer but here's what I'd suggest—if you want to break into Hollywood, keep away from it.

Anyone coming here "cold," and unknown has—to get statistical for a moment—one chance in 59,000.

The thing to do is to get background. To get as well known as you can in theatrical or radio circles elsewhere. Then you stand a much better chance of getting somewhere when you do come to Hollywood.

- The studios spend somewhere near $850,000 a year making tests of newcomers. They give them expert coaching, the services of famous make-up men, a good director—and three-fourths of the tests are thrown away because the subject lacked training.

Do anything to gain experience—play in one night stands if it's necessary. Then try to meet the biggest theater exhibitors in your city so they can give your name to studio scouts when they come through.

- And don't expect too much when you do come out. I know a girl in Santa Ana who thinks if she could just get a stock job in a studio she'd be all "set." Why, that's only the start of the real contest! I wish you could see the way girls around here with an actual foothold and a signed contract have to struggle and work and study to get bigger rôles and more recognition. That's what I mean by saying Hollywood's doors are so hard to crash. The newcomer has to work so hard, sometimes for years, before she gets a break.

- So watch out for the new faces on the screen. Even if you yourself are not interested in a movie career think of what it means to them. Support them by your letters and that way you'll encourage the producers to give them better parts.

- I've had a lot of fun as Guest Editor of SCREEN BOOK. Perhaps one reason I have enjoyed it so much is the fact that my mother was once a newspaperwoman, and the journalistic bug is in my blood too. Some day, a long time hence, I hope to turn to writing as a profession.

Anyway, if you have enjoyed this issue half as much as I have working on it, we've all had a good time. Remember, when you see Follow the Fleet, that much of the work on this issue was done between scenes. So between the magazine and Fred Astaire I've about danced myself out for awhile.

I thank you!

Ginger Rogers

WHY SHOULDN'T I TAKE IT EASY ON WASHDAY WHEN THERE'S A MODERN SOAP THAT SOAKS CLOTHES WHITER AND BRIGHTER WITHOUT SCRUBBING OR BOILING? NOT ONLY THAT, BUT—

Rinso actually makes my clothes last 2 or 3 times longer. That's because Rinso's active suds safely lure out dirt and get clothes whiter and brighter without harsh washboard scrubbing. Even stubborn dirt on cuffs and edges yields to a little gentle rubbing between the fingers.

Rinso gives thick, sturdy, lasting suds—even in hardest water. No chips, bar soaps or powders ever needed. Wonderful suds for dishwashing and all cleaning. They get rid of grease like magic. Dishes don't have a greasy film left on them. And Rinso is kind to your hands—it doesn't make them red, rough looking. Try Rinso—and see!

Grand for washers, too

Rinso is recommended by the makers of 33 famous washers for safety and for whiter, brighter washes. Tested and approved by Good Housekeeping Institute. Buy the BIG economical household package.

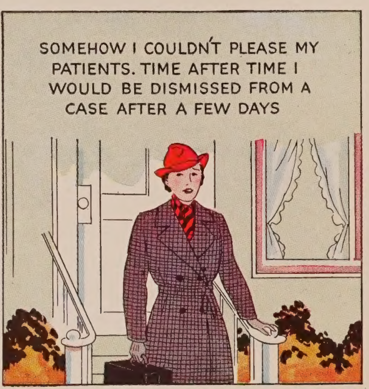
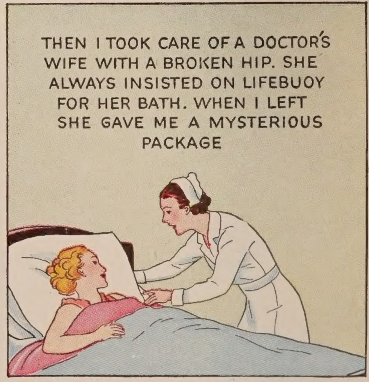
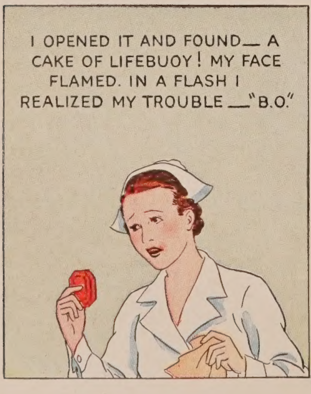
HERE'S MY TRUE CONFESSION ABOUT "B.O."
I am a nurse. But I almost had to give up... Uncle



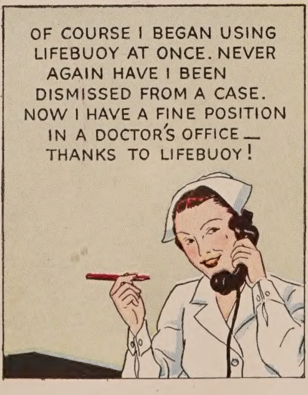
SOMEHOW I COULDN'T PLEASE MY PATIENTS. TIME AFTER TIME I WOULD BE DISMISSED FROM A CASE AFTER A FEW DAYS



THEN I TOOK CARE OF A DOCTOR'S WIFE WITH A BROKEN HIP. SHE ALWAYS INSISTED ON LIFEBUOY FOR HER BATH. WHEN I LEFT SHE GAVE ME A MYSTERIOUS PACKAGE



I OPENED IT AND FOUND— A CAKE OF LIFEBUOY! MY FACE FLAMED. IN A FLASH I REALIZED MY TROUBLE—"B.O."



OF COURSE I BEGAN USING LIFEBUOY AT ONCE. NEVER AGAIN HAVE I BEEN DISMISSED FROM A CASE. NOW I HAVE A FINE POSITION IN A DOCTOR'S OFFICE— THANKS TO LIFEBUOY!

MISS X, I NEVER CEASE TO MARVEL AT THE FRESH CLEARNESS OF YOUR COMPLEXION!
I CAN THANK LIFEBUOY FOR THAT!

PROTECT your complexion with gentle, deep-cleansing Lifebuoy lather! See your skin grow smoother, younger! "Patch" tests on the skins of hundreds of women prove Lifebuoy is 20% milder than many so-called "beauty soaps."

A timely warning!

This letter in picture form, from a real nurse, is a real warning to all to use Lifebuoy! It purifies pores, stops "B. O." (body odor).

LIFEBUOY HEALTH SOAP

Savage!

SAYS DEBUTANTE

A DEBUTANTE AND A DENTIST QUARREL ABOUT A RIB OF BEEF

Sensible!

SAYS DENTIST

(But the civilized way to combat "PINK TOOTH BRUSH" is IPANA and MASSAGE)

In this picture, you see a girl chewing vigorously on a rib of beef. Viewed from the angle of good manners, it's pretty bad . . . And the debutante is right when she says, "It's simply savage!"

But the dentist is right, too. And it needn't surprise you to hear any dentist say: "That's a good, common-sense demonstration of the healthy way to use teeth and gums."

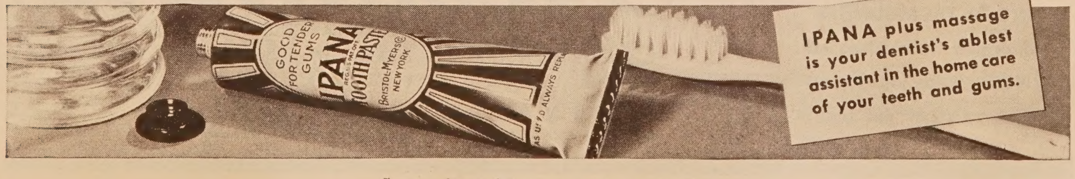
In modern dental circles, it is freely admitted that the lack of coarse foods and vigorous chewing is largely responsible for a host of gum disorders. Naturally, gums grow sensitive on a soft food diet. Naturally, they grow flabby, weak and tender. And, naturally, that warning "tinge of pink" eventually appears upon your tooth brush.

"Pink Tooth Brush" Tells the Truth

And the truth is—your teeth and gums need better care. You should change to Ipana plus massage . . . You should begin, today, the double duty you must practice for complete oral health. So start now to massage your gums with Ipana every time you brush your teeth. Rub a little extra Ipana into your gums, on brush or fingertip—and do it regularly.

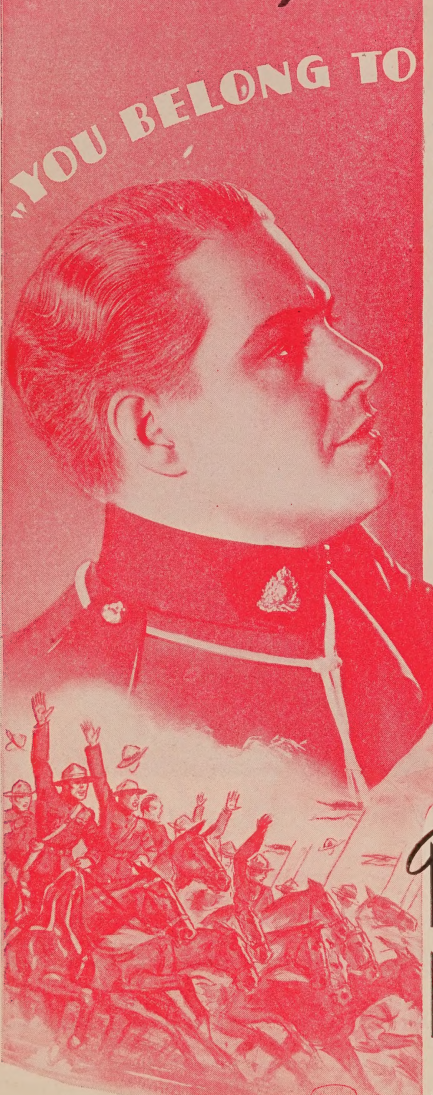
For Ipana plus massage helps stimulate circulation. It helps your gums win back their firmness. It helps them recover their strength and their resistance. They feel livelier, better, healthier. And healthy gums have little to fear from the really serious gum troubles—gingivitis, pyorrhea and Vincent's disease.

So be reasonable. For your smile's sake, for the sake of your good looks and your good health—begin today with Ipana plus massage.



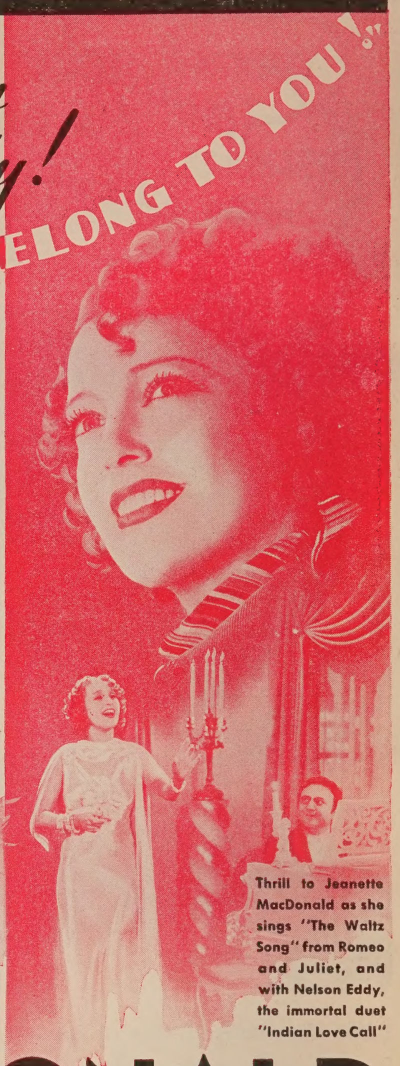
IPANA plus massage is your dentist's ablest assistant in the home care of your teeth and gums.

Again they thrill you with Glorious Melody!



"YOU BELONG TO ME! I BELONG TO YOU!"

The singing stars of "Naughty Marietta" now lift their golden voices to excite all the world with the immortal melodies of the most vibrant and stirring musical of our time — "Rose Marie" . . . The romantic drama of a pampered pet of the opera and a rugged "Mountie" torn between love and duty, whose hearts met where mountains touched the sky . . . How you'll thrill with delight as they fill the air with your love songs — "Rose Marie, I Love You", and "Indian Love Call"! It's the first big musical hit of 1936—another triumph for the M-G-M studios!



Thrill to Jeanette MacDonald as she sings "The Waltz Song" from Romeo and Juliet, and with Nelson Eddy, the immortal duet "Indian Love Call"

What's going on all over Hollywood

By the Star
Reporter

Gene Raymond poses with Stan Poray, noted Polish artist, who painted the remarkable portrait which the star of Seven Keys to Baldpate recently presented to his mother as a gift

Ginger Rogers, completing work in Follow the Fleet, has retired to the tennis courts for strenuous work to regain her strength

Clark Gable, Arline Judge and Edward G. Robinson arm themselves for a game of billiards at Arline's recent cocktail party, attended by the élite of Hollywood

DICK POWELL just cast a score of rumors into the discard when he made a statement to a friend, with this writer as a witness, that he certainly intended to marry Joan Blondell and expected she would name the definite date at any moment.

Which disposes of one subject the film colony has mulled over for, lo, these many weeks.

DARRYL ZANUCK, production genius of Twentieth Century-Fox, claims that, within twenty-four hours of the publicity break anent the right or wrong of mercy killing, his studio received exactly twenty-three stories, suggested for screen plays, and each based on the aforesaid theme.

Sad to relate, Mr. Zanuck was not interested in any of them.

ELAINE BARRIE, the young lady who occupied considerable of the front page space in the press recently, due to her John Barrymore affiliation, found the California climate very icy when she arrived in Hollywood hoping to do some picture work.

AL JOLSON has a suggestion to make to those who would argue that Ruby Keeler cannot possibly tap dance at the rate of 840 taps a minute, as claimed for her in a recent studio statement.

Al suggests that doubters sit in and count the steps while holding a stop watch. And that would be a stunt in itself.

TAY GARNETT, ace director, now on a tour of the world and currently in the Orient, with his sea going yacht docked at Shanghai and his camera crew piling up footage, will bring back to Hollywood something really novel in the way of film.

Garnett's wife, on the trip, is personally supervising the filming of fashions of all countries for a special feature length picture.

Which means that she will parade the belles of Samoa, Tahiti, Hawaii, China, Japan and twenty other countries arrayed in their best dress or undress.

COLLEEN MOORE is leaving Hollywood and her palatial Bel-Air home is on the market.

Not so much because of excessive taxation is Miss Moore establishing her residence in New Jersey, but mostly because the prohibitive rental the the home entails finds it unoccupied and the overhead piling up is her real reason. And again, Colleen expects to marry her business partner, John Hewlett when the law allows.

Strangely, Colleen's former husband, John McCormack is trying to aid her in finding a purchaser for the Bel-Air home.

CLIFTON WEBB, one of the most versatile stage stars of the past decade, has certainly found Hollywood to be a jinx, insofar as his film career is concerned.

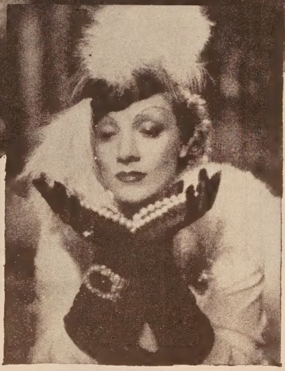
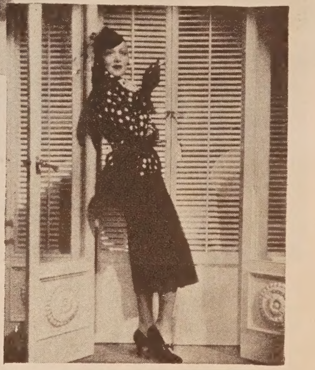
"DESIRE"

• MARLENE DIETRICH, more alluring than ever, GARY COOPER, more casually exciting than ever, in their first picture together since Morocco . . . a yarn about a beautiful lady with a very bad habit of stealing very expensive jewels and a young American motor car engineer who steals the lady's heart.

Just an old European custom . . . but we'd like to be John Halliday, the gentleman who's doing the hand kissing.



Marlene seems to be going in for jewels in a big way . . . also note the pom-pom hat. It'll set a style.



This ought to be in color, for those star like spots in the crisp black taffeta jacket are a really ravishing shade of pink.

Directed by Frank Borzage from a comedy by Hans Szekely and R. A. Stemmle.

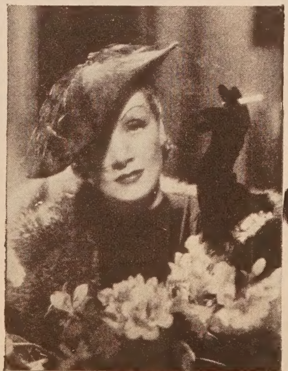
This shot is from the picture. Gary apparently has said something pretty tough, for that's a real handkerchief and those are real tears.



Marlene shows she's still loyal to the beret, this time, a novel black antelope affair, designed by Travis Banton Paramount's Fashion Expert.

Frank Borzage talks over a scene from "Desire" with Marlene and Gary.

Webb has been in Hollywood under contract to a major studio for nearly a year and has not been before the camera other than for screen tests.

Recently he was assigned his first lead. On the first day on the set Webb suffered a severe injury to his toe while dancing, putting him on the shelf for several days.

LITTLE LORD FAUNTLEROY, the Selznick production, we mean, will have to struggle along without the aid of Mae West.

Seems the publicity department decided to print a series of pictures of those who had played the title rôle in the past, that is, those who are now prominent and the picture they most wanted was one of Mae West, who really did play the rôle in stock.

But Auntie Mae had long since purchased all photos and negatives of her in existence as Fauntleroy and they happen to be in her safety deposit vault, where they will remain.

CARY GRANT and Virginia Cherrill certainly crossed up the London scribes when Cary arrived in London recently to star in the British picture, The Amazing Quest of Mr. Ernest Bliss.

Seems the scribes anticipated some sort of a reconciliation between Cary and his ex-wife. They met Cary at the dock, ganged on him, followed him to his hotel and then trailed him for days.

Eventually Cary and Virginia happened to be in the same night spot one foggy evening. Cary came in with friends, passed by a table where Virginia was seated, also with friends.

Anita Louise, who has played a great variety of rôles for the screen, poses as Peter Pan, a rôle she would like some day to have

A pair of very hard-boiled gentlemen—Wallace Beery and John Boles, who relax for a smoke on the set of A Message to Garcia

"Hi, there!" Cary waved to Virginia.

"Cheerio," returned Virginia.

And nothing else happened.

Cary later did call Virginia up and expressed his disappointment at the news that she had been replaced in the stellar rôle of Sleeping Beauty, the musical she had rehearsed for weeks.

FRANCES LANGFORD, radio and screen star, and Tony Martin, a handsome young chap likewise with a really fine singing voice, are as close as the hands on the clock at noon or midnight, despite reports to the contrary.

After Frances finishes with Bing Crosby in Rhythm of the Range, she may have a statement to give out.

MAE WEST, always in the news, furnished Hollywood with one more innovation, one which is being copied.

NEW FILM NOTES

A veteran reporter covers the Hollywood picture front and presents a remarkable story

By Bill Ulman

"Marlene had been Europe's most accomplished jewel thief and Gary was an innocent American engineer. They become involved with one another as a result of one of Marlene's most daring exploits."—Scene from Desire

DESIRE

A New Dietrich Comes to the Screen

THE lustrous Marlene Dietrich and smiling Gary Cooper were in each other's arms in the charming vineyards of a Spanish villa. Marlene had been Europe's most accomplished jewel thief and Gary was an innocent American engineer. They become involved with one another as a result of one of Marlene's most daring exploits and even after Coop learned the truth love burgeoned forth. In the middle of this rather swell love scene between the two, a grazing ewe on the hillside gave an anguished bleat and sank to her knees. The love scene that was the result of months of preparation stopped. Both Coop and Marlene rushed to the stricken sheep.

"What is it, Gary? What is it?"

Gary grinned and motioned her away, "It's okay, 'Lene . . . looks like we're about to have a new lamb hereabouts. Leave it to me. Ask Frank to call time out, will you?"

And thus Cooper, the lover, once again became Cooper, the rancher. After it was all over Marlene took one look at the knock-kneed lamb and went weak all over. She had to have it for Maria. She begged Coop for it. Once more he grinned, "Sorry, lady! You'll have to ask the mother." Involuntarily she turned and caught the look of almost human understanding in the ewe's eye. "Ah! The mother! Of course! I couldn't take a baby from the mother, Gary! Come! We'll buy both of them!"

Marlene's chauffeur had an awful time with two live sheep on the way home.

This picture is the first one since Morocco in which these two people have played. Desire, despite its title, is a story packed with action and suspense as well as la belle Dietrich. When Marlene goes crooked and lifts a hundred grand worth of pearls in the neatest bit of outwitting you'll see in many a night at the Bijou, ropes Gary in as her unsuspecting stooge to get them across the border one jump ahead of an

EXCITEMENT RIDES THE Hollywood RANGE . . . AS THE "TRADE" CRITICS Preview

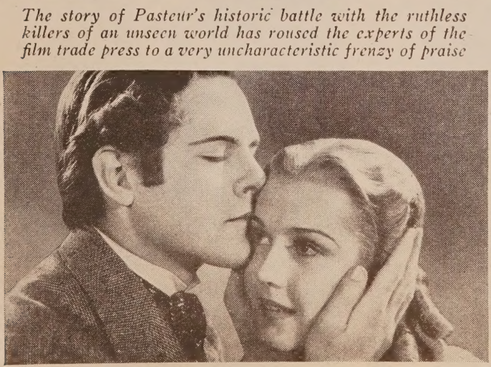
*"THE LOUIS

PAUL MUNI'S sensational new success throws the spotlight on some important personalities you never knew till now.

The story of Pasteur's historic battle with the ruthless killers of an unseen world has roused the experts of the film trade press to a very uncharacteristic frenzy of praise



Moving performances by Josephine Hutchinson, Anita Louise, Donald Woods, Fritz Leiber, and many others, have been a vital factor in the salvos of applause for "Pasteur"

WHAT is it that even the most conscientious film fan never hears about—yet is as well known and important in "picture business" as famous stars, directors, or producers?

Answer—a movie "trade paper" publisher.

If you were in the movie business the publications presided over by these gentry would be as familiar to you as your daily newspaper. Their reviews of new pictures are the first impartial comments published anywhere and usually have an important influence in determining at what theatres a production will be shown and for how long.

Being steeped in picture affairs to the eyebrows, these "inside" reviewers never hesitate to call a spade a spade and a flop a flop. Praise is the exception rather than the rule and it's rare indeed for the boys to agree unanimously in favor of any one production.

So you can understand why the film industry practically in toto sat up with a jerk one recent morning when they picked up paper after paper and found every one of them not only praising, but gushing like schoolgirls about the same picture—Paul Muni in The Story of Louis Pasteur.

FOR instance, they found seasoned, cynical Jack Alicoate's Film Daily notifying the world that "The Story of Louis Pasteur is distinguished and gripping drama that blazes a new trail in pictures. Warner Bros. have fashioned a story that grips from the start. Muni's performance is something to cheer about. William Dieterle's direction deserves lavish praise."

Veteran publisher Martin Quigley's Motion Picture

STORY OF PASTEUR"

Magnificently Muni re-creates the famous hero of humanity who fought a jeering world that we might live

JACK ALICOATE

Herald simultaneously informed the industry that "in The Story of Louis Pasteur the screen makes a great departure from prosaic formula....There is not a single trace of theatrical artificiality. . . . Expertly acted and directed, . . . its power to create and hold interest immediately gripped the preview audience and kept it in hushed silence all the way through. . . . Here is a picture the worth of which is almost certain to impress both class and mass alike."

MARTIN QUIGLEY

At the same moment Motion Picture Daily under the editorship of peppery, astute Maurice Kann was broadcasting the news that "the theme of The Story of Louis Pasteur is so absorbing that the film is sure to win terrific word-of-mouth endorsement."

The daily edition of youthful, aggressive Sid Silverman's famous Variety chimed in with the unqualified statement that "in The Story of Louis Pasteur Warner Bros. have made a truly great picture. . . . It stands among the significant works of the screen. . . . Told in such fashion as to grip every audience it will reach, The Story of Louis Pasteur is headed for big acclaim. Profoundly stirring as sheer drama, it will widen the range of picture venturings. . . . Muni is superb. . . . Seldom has a picture preview shown so strongly-shared interest of men and women. Men were openly in tears of emotional response throughout the audience."

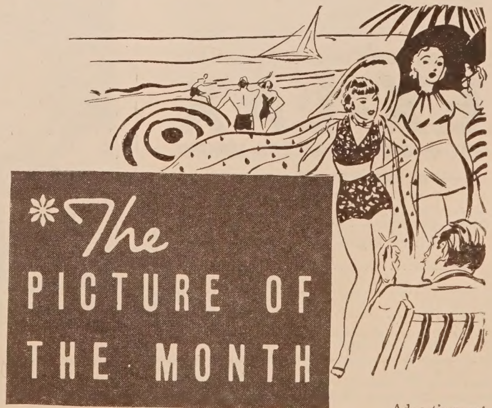
MAURICE KANN

And dynamic, hard-hitting "Chick" Lewis of the Showmen's Trade Review informed his followers that "this outstanding hit will send patrons away talking. A powerful production, impressive entertainment and a stand-out characterization by Paul Muni make this a prestige picture of importance with world-wide appeal."

"CHICK" LEWIS

THESE are strong words, dear listeners. But we subscribe to every one of them! And we've reprinted them here as the most impressive tip-off we can give you on the extraordinary importance of this brilliant Cosmopolitan production.

Naturally it's been the talk of film circles ever since these remarkable reviews appeared. And you're going to hear a lot more about it before it's released by First National late this month.



*The PICTURE OF THE MONTH

Unprintable ... but TRUE!

[They're unprintable! The things that happen to your system when you take a harsh, quick-acting cathartic. Good taste forbids a detailed description]

YOU OUGHT TO KNOW . . . for your health's sake . . . what happens when you introduce a harsh, drastic laxative into your system. One that works too quickly. One that upsets you . . . that rushes unassimilated food through your system . . . that rips and tears its way, leaving you weak, dragged down—internally abused. But, we cannot tell you the graphic details here because they are too graphic. This is a family magazine, not a medical textbook.

This much we can say: whenever you need a laxative, be sure the one you take is correctly timed. Be sure it is mild and gentle. Ex-Lax meets these important specifications.

Avoid quick-acting cathartics!

Ex-Lax takes from 6 to 8 hours to accomplish its purpose. It relieves constipation without violence, yet it is completely effective. Elimination is thorough. And so close to normal you hardly know you've taken a laxative.

Because of its gentle action, Ex-Lax doesn't leave you weak, as harsh cathartics do. It doesn't cause stomach pains. It doesn't nauseate you. And you don't need to fear any embarrassment afterwards. It is best to take Ex-Lax at night, when you go to bed. In the morning you will enjoy complete and thorough relief.

A joy to take!

Another thing people like about Ex-Lax is the fact that it is equally good for children and adults. Thus, you need only one laxative in your medicine chest.

And here is still another pleasant thing about Ex-Lax . . . it tastes just like delicious chocolate. Don't ever again offend your palate with some bitter, nasty-tasting laxative!

Get a box of Ex-Lax today. It costs only 10c. There is a big, convenient family size at 25c, too.

GUARD AGAINST COLDS!...Remember these common-sense rules for fighting colds — get enough sleep, eat sensibly, dress warmly, avoid drafts, keep your feet dry, and keep regular, with Ex-Lax, the delicious chocolated laxative.

The Girl GINGER ROGERS Helped to Fame

How Harriet Hilliard stepped into the spotlight with the help of Fred Astaire's leading lady in Follow the Fleet

IN EVERY Ginger Rogers-Fred Astaire picture at least one new screen personality has been discovered. In the Gay Divorcee it was Eric Rhodes and Eric Blore, in Roberta the fans discovered a "new" Randy Scott, Top Hat brought Helen Broderick from the New York stage . . . and now in Follow the Fleet the fantastic pair's latest film, we have the lovely Harriet Hilliard, who for three and a half years has been the featured vocalist with Ozzie Nelson's orchestra.

Harriet arrived in Hollywood a thoroughly excited girl. She was a bride of less than a week, having made the proverbial story of "She Married Her Boss" come true by becoming the bride of orchestra leader Ozzie Nelson three days before she left for the coast. She was telegraphed enroute that, instead of having her play the rôle that she had originally been signed for, she would be "tested" for a more important part, that of Ginger Rogers' sister in Follow the Fleet. She was met at the train in Pasadena and hurried to RKO Studio, where they handed her some scenes to learn while she was being made up. She was introduced to Mark Sandrich, the director, and to Ginger Rogers. Before she had been in the Cinema town for two hours she was caught in the rush and whirl of the Hollywood maelstrom.

"I was never so frightened in my life," Harriet says. "I don't know what I would have done without Ginger during that test. She worked in it with me, you know. They tell me it's unusual for a star to make a test with a person who isn't established, but she stayed with me until I finished at nine o'clock that night, giving me tips about the microphone, and showing me camera angles. I think she's greatly responsible for my getting the coveted rôle, and I'm certainly grateful to her for it. She's always been my favorite actress, and now she's my favorite person, too."

Harriet,

"I know now why HOLD-BOBS are accepted by Hollywood. The movie camera "picks up" those straggly ends that mar an otherwise perfect picture," says charming Ruth Martin Chrastka of Chicago.

Miss Chrastka was given a screen test recently, in the nation-wide Search for Talent sponsored by Universal Pictures, HOLD-BOB Bob Pins, Motion Picture and Screen Play.

An attractive, well-groomed hairdress is just as important to a movie star as her make-up or clothes. That is why HOLD-BOBS have been chosen by Hollywood as the only bob pin that will keep their hairdress lovely at all times.

You, too, can have the lovely, well-groomed coiffure of the movie stars by using HOLD-BOBS—the only bob pin with these exclusive, patented features: small, round, invisible heads that cannot show in the hair, smooth, round points that cannot scratch the scalp, flexible tapered legs, one side crimped, which hold the hair securely in place. And—only HOLD-BOBS come in all colors to match every shade of hair.

Look for the name HOLD-BOBS. It is your assurance that your coiffure will be lovely always. Try HOLD-BOBS today.

Final winners of the Search for Talent will be announced shortly.

Prelude to Triumph

UNDER the date of December 31, 1933, I received from Papeete, Tahiti, the following note:

"Dear Mr. S:

"My friend, Charles Nordhoff, and I were much pleased to learn that you have enjoyed our Bounty Mutiny tales, and it was kind of you to take the trouble to tell us so. The "Men Against the Sea" tale was much abridged in the serialization, but I imagine that no one could have known that except the authors themselves.

"The Bounty story divides itself naturally into three parts, and our intention has been, from the first, to write the three in turn. We are now at work on the Pitcairn Island chapter. This is, to me, the most interesting part of the Bounty history, but, as you have guessed, it is far the most difficult to write. I am afraid that, for all our efforts, we will end by making an awful mess of it.

"With all good wishes,
Sincerely yours,
(Signed) James N. Hall."

Of course, all who have read Pitcairn's Island know that Hall and Nordhoff by no means made "an awful mess of it." It is a powerful tale worthy of taking its place in screen history alongside the epic-making Mutiny on the Bounty. I think I'm expressing the hope of millions when I voice a wish that it may be produced in the near future.

A point of interest to residents of this town and alumni of Miami University, which is located here, is the fact that Talbot Jennings, who did the screen story of Mutiny on the Bounty was a member of the English Department of Miami University before resigning to take up screen work in Hollywood.—E. H. Switzer, 111 East Walnut St., Oxford, Ohio.

As readers now know, Pitcairn's Island is now in preparation at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, with Clark Gable starred. Mr. Switzer's letter therefore is particularly timely.

Worthy of Praise

CHARLES LAUGHTON is one of the screen's greatest actors. He has never been praised as highly as other actors because of the rôles to which he is assigned. But, as any other actor, he deserves recognition and due praise. His portrayal of Javert in Les Miserables, and Captain Bligh in Mutiny on the Bounty, pictures him as a real actor in every sense of the word.

Because he plays mean and hateful rôles, he has made many enemies among audiences. Now, let's remember Laughton as a "regular guy" and have him cast in a picture that will do him justice. Why not let him be the sane and human individual he really is?—Miss Ella Schure, 214 Division Street, Amsterdam, New York.

Outstanding among many similar letters, Miss Schure heads a campaign to "humanize" Charles Laughton.

"SHE HAD THE KIND OF LIPS MEN LIKE TO KISS"

SAID GARY COOPER

Popular male star gives his reasons for choosing the Tangee Girl

GARY COOPER, star of "Desire", a Paramount Picture, picks the most kissable lips in lipstick test.

● We presented three lovely girls to Gary Cooper. One wore the ordinary lipstick...one, no lipstick...the third, Tangee.

"Her lips look kissable," he said, choosing the Tangee girl, "because they look natural."

And other men agree. They don't like to kiss lipstick either, and that's why Tangee is so much in vogue today. Tangee makes your lips glow with natural color, but it avoids "that painted look," because Tangee isn't paint. If you prefer more color for evening, use Tangee Theatrical. Try Tangee. In two sizes, 39c and $1.10. Or, for a quick trial, send 10c for the special 4-Piece Miracle Make-Up Set offered below.

● BEWARE OF SUBSTITUTES... when you buy. Don't let some sharp sales person switch you to an imitation... there's only one Tangee.

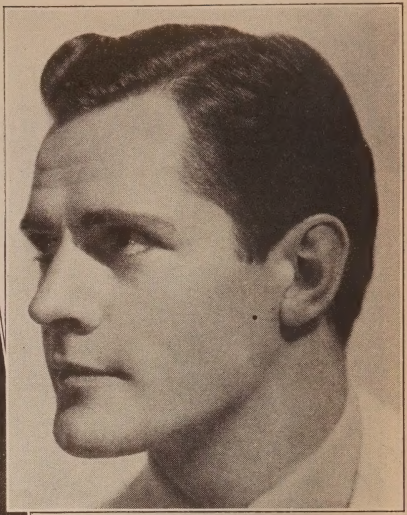
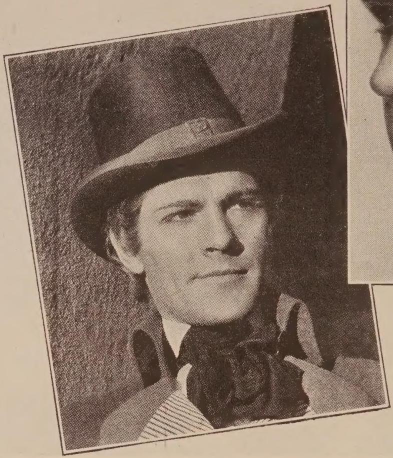
DONALD WOODS





Above: Donald Woods' most recent portrait. He looks like an actor who has never missed a meal, and that's just what he is. Left: Donald Woods as he will appear in Anthony Adverse. Recent pictures in which he has scored hits are The Frisco Kid and A Tale of Two Cities

By Hal Conrad

DISCOURAGING remarks by old troupers and the usual tales in newspapers and magazines about actors who had to fight their way to fame, have people fairly well convinced that empty stomachs are an iron-clad tradition of the theater.

Knocking all these legends into a "cocked hat" is the story of tall, dark and handsome Donald Woods who is making Hollywood sit up and take notice with a repetition of fine performances in current films. For young Mister Woods, so the film colony learned to its profuse embarrassment, is one actor who never missed a meal, and was never broke.

"Why," the old stand-bys will shout. "it simply isn't artistic! Who ever heard of an actor riding to fame on a full stomach?"

But Donald, sitting on the cool patio of his Beverly Hills home, parks his feet in a convenient chair and scoffs at the idea of having to "starve your way to stardom."

"Whenever I've been out of a job and down to my last few dollars," he told me, waving me to a chair, "I'd splurge—go out and buy something by way of a luxury. Something to give me a lift—a sense of prosperity. It might be a new hat, new shirt or a pair of new shoes—but the best I could find. Doing this gave me a certain mental stimulation that anyone needs who is looking for a job. I can't analyze it but it gave me confidence in myself. Believe it or not, something always turned up at the crucial moment."

"Why that sounds plain crazy," I said, moving to another chair so I could get a better view of this man Woods.

"Well, it probably would be for a lot of people," laughed Donald, running his hand through his hair with that peculiar gesture that women rave about in his fan letters. "But you see, I found out about it sort of by accident. After I finished high school and the first two years of dramatic study at college, my father informed me one morning that our money was gone and I'd have to get a job.

"I was willing—but how to find that job? My capital was exactly one dollar. I wanted to finished another year of drama and English at the University of California where I was studying. And incidentally, there was a fraternity dance at the local hotel that very night.

"I spent that last dollar to go to the dance. And the way it turned out that night, I landed a job and met the girl who is now my wife. Sure it's crazy, but this is what happened next. As the couples were getting their wraps to go home, the clerk

Mary Pauline Callender Author of "Marjorie May's Twelfth Birthday"

Can't chafe

Because the sides of Kotex are cushioned in a special, soft, downy cotton—all chafing, all irritation is prevented. Thus Wondersoft Kotex provides lasting comfort and freedom. But sides only are cushioned—the center surface is left free to absorb.

Can't fail

Because Kotex has a special "Equalizer" center whose channels guide moisture evenly the whole length of the pad. Gives "body" but not bulk—prevents twisting and roping. The filler of Kotex is actually 5 TIMES more absorbent than cotton.

Can't show

Because the ends of Kotex are not only rounded, but flattened and tapered besides. Absolute invisibility — no tiny wrinkles whatsoever. Even the sheerest dress, the closest-fitting gown, reveals no telltale lines.

BING CROSBY Plans His Future

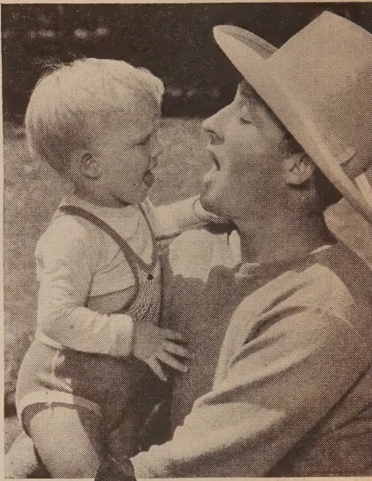
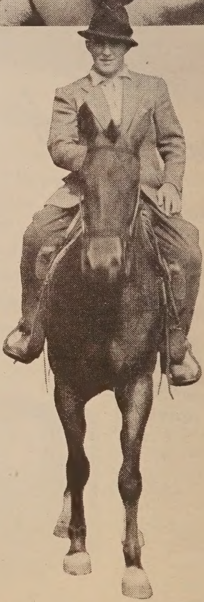
Soon there will be no more movies or radio for Bing. Read why!



Gary Evan Crosby with his famous dad who has invested in insurance heavily enough that his sons may be guaranteed a college education. After that they will have to scratch for themselves



Bing Crosby astride one of his race horses. "I'm supporting sixteen horses now," he says, "but I expect them to support me in my old age"

IF YOU'RE a Bing Crosby fan (and who isn't?), you'd better rush right over and see his newest picture, tune in on his weekly broadcast and lay in a supply of phonograph records, because you're not going to see or hear much of him any more three years from now!

It was just recently, when Bing was presented with his new Paramount picture contract and the Kraft radio contract, that his plans came to light. And it was only after the usual five-year clause had been written into the contracts that Bing's deep-laid plot was discovered.

"Okay," said Bing to studio and radio officials, "if you'll just change that clause to read 'three-year,' I'll sign."

"But," the executives argued, slightly bewildered, "why 'three years?' After all, you've always signed for five years before."

"Well," was the Crosby's calm response, "I figure on retiring at the end of three years—for good."

And that was that.

Of course, the whole thing seems absurd. Actors don't just up and retire of their own accord in the middle of a successful career. It's practically unheard of! But then, Bing has never considered himself an actor—in that sense of the word. "I am," Bing has said, again and again, "a crooner. That's all—just an old gravel throat."

And in the back of his mind there's been the hope that some day—not too far in the future—he could pack up his make-up box for keeps, put on his old orange sweater and cap (without any comments from his family or the studio) and really do the things he's had his heart set on.

Quietly and calmly, he's been making his plans for that day—investing his money in a few good, sound stocks, buying real estate and going about the business of preparing for the future—his and Dixie's and the three kids.

What's he going to do, you ask?

Well, you'd never in the world guess. Bing wants to write!

Very casually, he's taken more and more to writing lengthy replies to fan letters, batting out articles for this and that magazine, without saying much, but obviously trying his hand at becoming an author. And darned good, too, if you ask me.

Of course, that isn't all Bing plans to do. During the past year, he's been getting things in ship-shape order down at his ranch in Southern California so the family can move there to settle down. And there's an eight-stall stable all ready to receive his breeding mares, built in a U-shape so it can be enlarged, if necessary, to accommodate more horses.

For Bing's race horses haven't been just a fad with him, as many people have thought. In his own placid, non-committal fashion, Bing has been looking to the future.

"I'm supporting sixteen horses now," Bing said the other day, "but I expect them to support me in my old age!"

There'll be fields of alfalfa soon, for feed for the young colts. There's a small orchard on the property which will supply fruit for the three boys. There's a swimming pool for hot summer days and there'll be a real home life for the Crosbys when they're ready to settle down.

THERE'S a new house in town under construction, too, when they crave a taste of city life. My guess is that it will be seldom. But, at any rate, it will be there if they want it.

And then there's the golf situation. You've all heard about how Bing sneaks away at every opportunity for a couple of rounds on his favorite course. But he's never had time to really go into it in a big way—and that's what he wants to do. Some day, he hopes, he'll be good enough to enter the national tournaments. But that takes practice, and by golly, that's what he's going to have! And what, you're bound to ask, about the

THE LOVELIER WAY TO AVOID OFFENDING

Do you know the 8th WOMAN ?

Why be miserable, or even uncomfortable certain days of every month? Be that eighth woman who lets Midol carry her serenely through those difficult days. There used to be eight million sufferers every month. Today a million women are smart enough to use Midol and escape this regular martyrdom to pain.

You can depend on Midol. Tiny tablets, perfectly pleasant to take. Not narcotic. A merciful medicine which specialists recommend for regular pain. Nature doesn't make the woman who uses Midol give up a cherished "date" for the theatre — or even a dance. It means freedom!

This truly remarkable medicine may be taken any time, preferably at the first sign of approaching pain, to avoid the suffering altogether. But Midol is effective even when the pain has caught you unaware and has reached its height. It is effective for hours, so two tablets should carry you through your worst day.

You get these tablets in a trim little aluminum case. All druggists have them —they're usually right out on the toilet goods counter. Or, clip coupon:

An enjoyable evening, no trace of pain; the time of month forgotten—thanks to Midol.

Try it MIDOL free!

Visit the STARS!

Announcing the 1936 Movieland Tour, a gala event for all who wish an inexpensive vacation

Introducing Simone Simon, sparkling young French actress who will help entertain guests of the Movieland Tour

Alice Faye

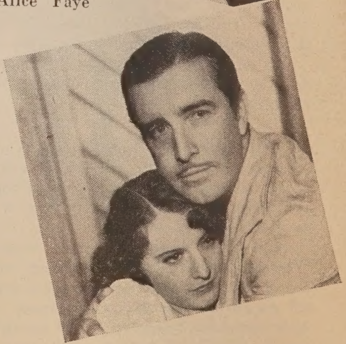
IMAGINE the thrill of meeting Shirley Temple face to face! The pleasure of chatting with Janet Gaynor, lunching with Alice Faye and many other popular favorites! These, and many other exciting adventures, await those who join the Movieland Tour of 1936.

A big special train will be made up in Chicago, with the most exciting journey any vacationist could imagine being planned for the two hundred or more travelers who register for the trip to Hollywood. The tour will leave Chicago on July nineteenth, travel through the colorful Northwest with stops in the Twin Cities, Yellowstone National Park and Seattle, and then whirl away down the Pacific coast to Hollywood.

In Hollywood the Movieland Tour will make its headquarters at the famous Roosevelt Hotel. Arrangements have been made to open the gates of Twentieth Century-Fox Studios to the visitors.

Stars any movie-goer would want to meet will be on hand to welcome you. Perhaps the most beautiful of all Hollywood studios, Movietone City, occupies 110 acres. Here the visitor is privileged to see the biggest dry land ocean liner ever built, castles and mansions built for famous pictures of yesteryear, the canal set used for Janet Gaynor's The Farmer Takes a Wife, the dressing room of the late Will Rogers, Shirley Temple's cute little cottage and many other interesting sights.

One of the beautiful sound stages at Twentieth Century Fox studios, where Movieland Tour guests will watch their favorite stars work before the camera



John Boles, who appears with Barbara Stanwyck in A Message to Garcia, will help play host Shirley Temple, too, plans to be hard at work on a new picture when the special train arrives in Hollywood. Will you be among those on the Movieland Tour?

Twentieth Century-Fox has one of the biggest programs ever launched by a major studio and there will be much activity when the Movieland Tour arrives about July twenty-seventh. Shirley Temple, whose next picture is Captain January, plans to be at work on a new picture about that time. Warner Baxter, Gloria Stuart, John Boles, Victor McLaglen, Loretta Young, Rochelle Hudson and many other popular favorites will be facing the cameras, too.

This is your opportunity to plan a vacation you will never forget. Reservations will be filled long before the special train is ready to leave for Hollywood, so write now for details about the tour. Address Mr. Joe Godfrey, Jr., Movieland Tour Manager, SCREEN BOOK, 360 North Michigan Ave., Chicago, Ill., for full particulars. Complete information explaining the itinerary, costs, and description of the luxurious train will be sent you free. Simply send a three-cent stamp with your letter asking for information.

Max Factor, famed studio make-up artist who for a quarter of a century has been cosmetic expert for the stars, has invited tourists to be his guests at a reception to be held in his new beauty salon, and to meet prominent screen favorites.

This glorious two weeks vacation is planned at an amazingly low cost. You may never have another opportunity to visit the stars in this way—so all aboard for Hollywood! And remember, if you are not able to arrange your vacation for the first "Movieland Tour," another tour is being planned—an equally exciting adventure called "The Movieland Special."

Next month you will learn about plans for a big private party which will be given in your honor. Watch for it!

Mary Pickford's CASH PRIZE Contest

Find a Trademark For Her Studio!

$600 in cash offered for a simple, original idea. Send your entry today!

SHARPEN your pencils, you readers of SCREEN BOOK Magazine, and let's all help Mary Pickford devise a trademark for her new studio! When Miss Pickford decided to start making pictures instead of acting in them, she asked the Editor of SCREEN BOOK what to do, and he suggested asking all our readers.

"And I'll offer prizes!" Miss Pickford promised.

First of all, there'll be a prize of $100 for the SCREEN BOOK reader whose entry is considered best of all those received. Next, this prize winner will compete for a grand prize of $500 against the winners of similar contests conducted by Screen Play, Hollywood, Motion Picture and Movie Classic Magazines. So you stand a chance to win $600 in cash—if you win both the SCREEN BOOK prize and the grand prize.

Now for the particulars, and then you'll be ready to go to work. Mary Pickford and her friend and long time business associate, Jesse L. Lasky, who founded what is now Paramount, have become partners in a huge studio and have signed up stars, bought stories, and are ready to turn out splendid pictures. The company name will be Pickford-Lasky Productions.

Only the finest product will come from their studios. Therefore your trademark should indicate quality. It might show the name of the company or the initials. It might carry some slogan.

YOU DON'T HAVE TO DRAW THE TRADEMARK.

That's important, because few of us are artists, anyway. And even if you drew a trademark the final entries will be done by a high priced artist. Therefore, just describe your entry, with perhaps a rough pencil sketch to help explain your idea. The idea is what counts, not the art work. After the judges have chosen the idea for the trademark, an artist will be called in and drawings will be made. So remember, please, that you don't have to draw your entry.

And of course you don't have to send in a fanciful or decorated entry—just write your idea on anything that is handy, and mail it to Mary Pickford, SCREEN BOOK Magazine, 7046 Hollywood Blvd. Hollywood, Calif.

Here are the rules:

Contest opens February 1, 1936, and closes April 15, 1936, at midnight. Judges are: Mary Pickford, Jesse Lasky, and Roscoe Fawcett, Editor-in-chief of all the Fawcett

IMPORTANT TO ALL CONTESTANTS!

Remember the closing date, April 15, 1936, and send your entry in early! All trademark ideas should be mailed to Mary Pickford, Screen Book, 7046 Hollywood Blvd., Hollywood, California. Results of the contest will be announced as soon after the closing date as possible.

and Motion Picture publications. Any reader of these magazines can enter, except employees of Fawcett Publications and its affiliates, or their relatives.

It is not necessary to draw a trademark; you can describe it.

In case of ties, duplicate prizes will be awarded.

Prizes are: Five prizes of $100 each, grand prize of $500; total, $1,000.

There, are you ready? Then let's go! First of all, what sort of trademarks do other studios use? Naturally, we can't suggest an idea for a trademark that will be too similar to one already in use.

Everyone is familiar with the famous Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer lion. Old Leo growls at you at the start of each Metro picture. Sam Goldwyn, now head of his own studio, thought that one up, because a lion was the symbol of Columbia University where he studied.

Universal's world is also known round the globe. The airplane that circles the world is a recent addition, since the original trademark, designed by Carl Laemmle, Sr., in 1907, came before airplanes filled the skies.

Then there's the Paramount mountain, which fits well with the renowned name of this studio. You guessed it—a man from the Rocky Mountains thought that one up. He was W. W. Hodkinson, who in 1914 was a leader in the organization of this studio. No one could think of a name until he noticed an apartment building named Paramount.

YOU can't use a radio tower, because RKO-Radio pictures is making that device famous. Here again the trademark is most appropriate to the studio name.

The name Columbia naturally suggested a trademark showing the Statue of Liberty—gem of the ocean. The emblem for 20th Century-Fox is as modern as the twentieth century, with skyscraper letters looming big on the screen.

Darryl Zanuck, head of the 20th Century-Fox, instructed his artists to make his trademark as modern as today's newspaper, and they succeeded.

Warner Brothers use their own name as a trademark for pictures that stand for high quality of entertainment. Walter Wanger uses his own name, also, for his studio.

Miss Pickford and Mr. Lasky will want a trademark that is distinctive, indicates high quality, and that is easily pictured and remembered. We'll admit that's not easy, but the prizes are worth working for.

You have until April 15 to get in your entry, but do not put off gathering the family around the table and making everybody work toward one of those prizes. Meanwhile, we'll supply you with other data about the Pickford-Lasky Pictures company next month.

Do This to Ease Sore Throat Instantly

Relieve Soreness in 3 Minutes This Easy Way

1. The moment you feel a throat irritation, crush and stir 3 BAYER ASPIRIN Tablets in ⅓ glass of water. Gargle twice. Do not rinse mouth.

2. If you have a cold, take 2 BAYER ASPIRIN Tablets and drink a full glass of water. Repeat if necessary, according to directions in package.

If you want the most astonishing and quickest relief from sore throat, you have ever experienced, just do this:

Crush and dissolve three Bayer Aspirin Tablets in ⅓ glass of water for use as a gargle.

Gargle your throat twice with this medicated mixture, holding the head well back to allow its going deep into the throat.

That's all! Relief will come almost instantly. For the Bayer Aspirin will act like a local anesthetic to ease throat pains. And, at the same time, will soothe and quiet irritation.

People by the tens of thousands are combating sore throat this way. Doctors endorse it. And scientists acclaim it as perhaps the most effective gargle yet discovered — for it provides a medication, and it takes medicine to combat a sore throat.

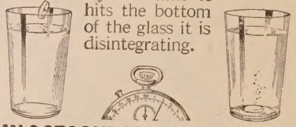
If you have a cold with your sore throat — take two Bayer Aspirin tablets with a full glass of water at the same time you gargle.

When you buy, though, be sure to get real BAYER ASPIRIN TABLETS. They dissolve fast and work fast; bringing quick relief.

Why BAYER Aspirin Works So Fast

Drop a Bayer Aspirin tablet into a glass of water.

By the time it hits the bottom of the glass it is disintegrating.



IN 2 SECONDS BY STOP WATCH

A Genuine Bayer Aspirin tablet starts to disintegrate and go to work.

What happens in these glasses happens in your stomach — Genuine BAYER Aspirin tablets start "taking hold" of pain a few minutes after taking.

HOLLYWOOD SHOP TALK

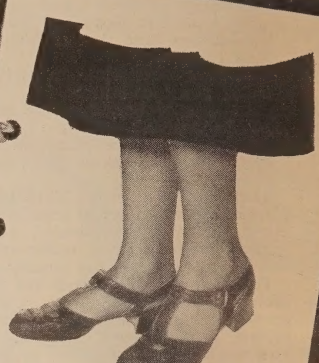
FASHION POINTERS

Zodiac jewelry is Hollywood's newest fashion fad.

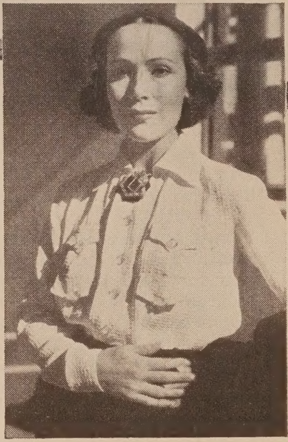
If you're a business girl, dress to please the boss' clientele as well as the boss.

Square-toed shoes are the newest thing in footwear.

An all-white costume is smart for evening.



Dolores Del Rio's smart footwear—square-toed, low heel shoes of black alligator



Left: A close-up of Dolores Del Rio in her white silk vest, with its four tailored pockets and turn-over collar

WHEN foreigners come to our United States they are always impressed by how well-dressed the American working girl is. There are several reasons for this. First of all, our shops carry inexpensive clothes which are both smart and in good taste. And, second, the American girl, no matter how much or how little she has to spend, is learning to think and plan before buying. Undoubtedly the movies have had a great deal to do with this. They show you how certain types of clothes look "in action," how they "characterize" the girl who wears them and accentuate her charm and personality and give you advance ideas which you can adapt to your own particular needs. Of course the Hollywood designers frequently complain that you copy the wrong things but we won't argue about that.

Over at Metro they are doing a picture called Wife vs Secretary. Myrna Loy plays the wife and Jean Harlow, the secretary. I'm sure that every young business girl will be interested in the clothes Jean wears. Dolly Tree designed them. She and Jean got together and decided that a smart secretary should dress not only to please the boss (who in this case is Clark Gable) but to please his clientele. And this, by the way, is darned good logic for any business girl to follow. Of course Jean plays one of those indispensable secretaries whose salary is somewhat above normal—or maybe her boss is just generous. Anyway, her clothes budget is large enough to enable her to have a slightly more extensive wardrobe than the average business girl can afford. But they are all practical, in good taste, and suitable for office wear.

First, there's a tailored suit in slate blue. With this a very feminine blouse of white handkerchief linen and a tailored hat made of the same material as the suit. Then

NOSE PORES

Largest Pores on Your Body— A Test of Your Cleansing Methods!

By Lady Esther

The pores on the nose are the largest on your body. For this reason, if allowed to become clogged with waxy excretions, they will become conspicuously large and noticeable.

The pores on your nose, therefore, are a good test of your skin-cleansing methods. If the pores are plugged with waste matter and gaping large, it's a sign your methods are insufficient. By keeping your pores—and this includes the pores of your nose—thoroughly clean, you can keep them normal in size, invisibly small.

A Penetrating Cream Required

To get at the dirt and waxy matter that accumulates in your pores, you must use a face cream that penetrates, one that actually works its way into the pores. Such a cream is Lady Esther Face Cream. It does not merely lie on the surface of your skin. It actually penetrates the pores, and does it in a gentle and soothing manner.

Penetrating the pores, Lady Esther Face Cream goes to work on the imbedded dirt and waste matter. It dissolves it—breaks it up—and makes it easily removable. In a fraction of the usual time, your skin is thoroughly clean.

Cleansed perfectly, your pores can again function freely—open and close as Nature intended. Automatically then, they reduce themselves to their normal small size and you no longer have anything like conspicuous pores.

Lubrication, Also

As Lady Esther Face Cream cleanses the skin, it also lubricates it. It resupplies it with a fine oil that overcomes dryness and keeps the skin soft and smooth.

Make a test on your face of Lady Esther Face Cream. See for yourself how thoroughly it cleans out the pores. Mark how quickly your pores come down in size when relieved of their choking burden. Note the new life and smoothness your skin takes on. One test will tell you volumes.

See For Yourself!

Behind the Mystery of MYRNA LOY

The most searching story ever written about the fascinating heroine of The Great Ziegfeld

IF, KNOWING nothing of her history, you were to meet Myrna Loy and talk to her for ten minutes, and were then to be told what her profession was, the chances are that you'd drop your jaw and mutter: "Not a movie star!" Which would imply no shadow of disrespect on your part toward movie stars, but only your recognition of a generally accepted type, to which this clear-eyed, self-contained girl does not conform.

She has none of the attributes we associate with the genus actress—nothing flamboyant, nothing exaggerated or bizarre—and this despite the Oriental rôles in which for so many years she was cast or miscast. More than anything else perhaps, she creates an impression of inward strength—of dignity and simplicity and the kind of pride that has nothing to do with vanity. She's been called stiff and cold—not on the screen, heaven forbid, where her warmth of spirit glows all the more convincingly for being uneffusive—but by short-sighted folk who have met her casually.

"I have the reputation for not being good copy," she will tell you herself, a little smile on her lips, a deeper one in her gray eyes. "I've been generously bawled out on that score by my well wishers—advised to develop colorful eccentricities, since I don't come naturally by them." No point in asking her what she does with advice of that kind. It's obvious enough that what she doesn't come by naturally, she won't pretend to.

"People," scoffed a friend, "think she's high-hat because she's got this cute little sort of tilted nose and walks with her head in the air. Her nose is like that because that's the way it was made, and she walks with her head up, because, thanks be, she knows how to carry herself."

In Hollywood, where the ruling atmosphere is hail-fellow-well-met and strangers start using each others' first names on five minutes' acquaintance, the measuring-rod of "stiffness and coldness" is not as in other places. If, like Myrna Loy, you're a person innately reserved, not given to back slapping nor free and easy raillery with all comers—if you're not much good at chit-chat and feel more comfortable saying nothing, when you've nothing to say—if you shrink from opening up to the whole world and his brother and prefer to keep your intimacies for your intimates—then you run the risk of being called stiff and cold by those who recognize only one kind of friendliness, and that their own. Not that the label bothers her. She takes it, as the children say, "whence it comes," and gets her own quiet brand of fun out of exploding the ice queen myth, as occasion arises.

Myrna Loy has one of the most unusual acting assignments ever given to an actress. In The Great Ziegfeld, she takes the part of Billie Burke, who in real life was the wife of Florenz Ziegfeld, the famed theatrical producer. Billie Burke now has the unique emotional experience of watching Myrna re-live on the screen the episodes in her own private life

AS CUTE as five Shirley Temples, and just as popular, the Dionne quintuplets are miracle babies in every sense of the word. In the first place, quintuplets occur in but one birth out of 57,000,000, and until Marie, Emilie, Cecile, Annette and Yvonne appeared on the scene not one set of quintuplets ever survived more than an hour.

But the miracle of their birth is only a start. These five have set a record that can never be equalled. Before they reach their second birthdays, they will have acquired future wealth for themselves that will be many times over the life income of most human beings. They are the most photographed and discussed babies the world has ever known. They are the first children ever to appear in a motion picture without benefit of direction or Kleig lights. They are the first actresses in Hollywood who, without even demanding special attention, made it necessary for a whole picture company to travel to another country to secure the benefit of their histrionics.

The Country Doctor, which stars the quintuplets, might never have been filmed had it not been for a Chicago newspaperman by the name of Charles Blake, who conceived the idea, and alert Darryl Zanuck, who arranged that it be produced under the banner of Twentieth Century Fox.

On a bitterly cold day early in December, a company of twenty-one actors and studio workers poked their soft Hollywood noses from two special cars at North Bay, Ontario, sniffed the snow-filled below zero atmosphere and fervently wished they were back in the land of sunshine.

In the group were Director Henry King, Jean Hersholt, who plays the rôle of Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe; Dorothy Peterson, who portrays a nurse; Dan Clark, an ace cameraman, and various script and technical workers. Director King

Jean Hersholt, who fell and was injured while pursuing amateur photography off the location, is visited by Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe. The two have become fast friends

Dorothy Peterson in the rôle of the nurse in The Country Doctor fell in love with the quintuplets and sadly misses them now that she has returned to Hollywood and Clark hurried to the comfortable home of Dr. Dafoe immediately for consultation on the picture. Here they learned that the appearance of the quintuplets on the screen, as far as they were concerned, would be a far different task than any baby-shooting they had done in Hollywood. In the first place, the quintuplets were no respectors of shooting schedules. They had their regular eat-sleep-play routine that couldn't be disturbed no matter what the exigencies of picture-making demanded.

In place of the usual strong lights employed in Hollywood studios, Dr. Dafoe inspected and approved especially constructed lights, equipped with blue filters. These lights, clear enough for filming, would not endanger the eyes of the world's prize babies.

Similarly, the unconscious temperament of the Mlles. Marie, Emilie, Cecile, Annette and Yvonne would not permit shooting any earlier than eleven o'clock in the morning, although the quintuplets have a habit of waking at five-thirty in the morning. They breakfasted at six on cod liver oil and tomato juice. Then, until seven, they sat around yawning, sorting over their rattles and chewing chubby fingers until eight o'clock, time for a second breakfast. After indulging in bread, butter, milk and a soft-boiled egg apiece, their royal persons were escorted outside for a nap which usually lasted until eleven o'clock—just time for their picture work to begin. They always sleep outside, unless the weather hits twenty below, a fact that was a source of amazement to the picture company which admitted being frozen to death most of the time.

CONTRARY to reports, the picture company had no trouble shooting the quintuplets, except on one occasion when they slept twenty-five minutes past their usual time. But to a Hollywood director who is used to adult stars, their late arrivals and bursts of temperament, this was nothing.

Actually, the cameras did not grind on the babies more than twelve minutes a day. At ten-thirty each morning the camera crew set up its equipment ready for operation, and waited for the stellar appearance of the quintuplets at eleven. All work was promptly halted each day at ten minutes to twelve.

The first scene filmed shows Dorothy Peterson dressing the quintuplets, with Jean Hersholt standing by and attempting to help, and oddly enough this was the only shot which necessitated a retake. When Dorothy leaned over the crib and baby Cecile stretched up her arms in a plea to be picked up, both she and Hersholt were so moved that they forgot their lines.

After that, however, everything went smoothly. The five cherubic stars never knew that they were in the movies, and behaved perfectly. They accepted Jean Hersholt just as they do Dr. Dafoe and Dorothy

JEAN PARKER'S Private DIARY

By Ruth Biery

There is a thrill in every word of this unique story!

Robert Donat was Jean Parker's favorite actor long before she met him. Playing opposite him in The Ghost Goes West has been the greatest thrill of her career

JEAN PARKER was clowning in her shower. "Oh, Jessie," she called to her legal guardian, Mrs. Jessie Wright, "ours is a horribly stilted existence. Just think, if we devoted the rest of our lives to travel, we couldn't spend twenty-four hours in every interesting part of the world. I'm simply longing to get away. I want to live and experience that I may look at myself and my career with a different perspective. I want to get East of California; I want to go to Europe—"

And because this is a true story about Hollywood's real fairy-princess who was literally swept from washing dishes for her "board" to acting in motion pictures, the telephone rang just at that moment. The studio wished Miss Parker to report immediately.

"Hello, Jean," casting director Ben Thaw at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer smiled at her. "How would you like to go to London? You are to catch the three o'clock plane tomorrow, sail on the Berengaria and make a picture for London Films. Think you can get ready?" Oh, life was good! To be going to England at eighteen—why, she'd have her nineteenth birthday in London.

I met Jean in London when she had been there a month. Never have I seen anyone so happy. She had kept a daily diary. She spent hours telling me additional stories. I am going to quote freely from her diary so you can hear in her own words the excitement of this young girl's first trip to Europe. How many of us have longed, at eighteen, to cross the ocean; how many of us look back and wish our lives had been like a fairy story?

Jean was born in the West; she had not been further East than Salt Lake City. Her diary for July 3rd says: "I can say, with all my heart, that I've never experienced anything more glorious. A thunderstorm in the air! Up to now, I've seen only branch lightning but tonight it was like a great burning sprout that illumined the whole countryside. Waiting for each burst of thunder, I had my nose glued to the window—peering at the wings as they seemed to give submissively, like a human being. Such an abundance of beauty in sight and sound left me thrilling to my very toes."

July 4th: "This morning—out of a dream of pink and blue and sunlight, we arrived in New York. I wanted to continue flying but, then, New York is so impressive. I enjoyed the trick Mr. Cohn played on me."

Although Jean was in New York only one night, producer Harry Cohn, of Columbia pictures, arranged a dinner for her at the fashionable Rainbow Room, atop Rockefeller Center. A man, who was not in evening dress, came to Jean's table. Evening dress is required. "How did he get in?" she asked.

"Sh! He used a gun to persuade the head waiter. He's one of New York's most notorious gangsters. You must not dance with him," they told her. Jean hurriedly tore the buckle from her slipper and held it up as her excuse for refusing. Then, she was sorry. A chance to dance with a real gangster! Surely, she'd be safe here. She was going to snatch every adventure this trip offered! She glanced at him. He asked her EXCITEMENT in the AIR!

Joan Crawford, in her stocking feet, rehearses the script for a recent radio broadcast

A remarkable behind-the-scenes story telling what goes on in the radio studios from which the stars parade into your own home

Joan Bennett is one of many actresses who is profiting by taking to the air

Charlie Ruggles, who appears with Bing Crosby in Anything Goes, is baffled by the mike

WALLACE BEERY was gone. He wasn't in his hotel. He wasn't at the broadcasting studio. He seemed to have vanished from sight.

The producers of the Lux Radio Theater were going wild. They wanted to check over some lines with him. He was due to go on the air the next evening. And he had completely disappeared.

A few hours later the phone rang. It was a long distance call from a little town in Maryland, and the voice coming over the wire was Wally's.

"Say—I just went out to get a breath of air in my plane," said he, "and I was down here in Maryland before I knew it. I'll be back before midnight. Just didn't want you boys to worry."

Little surprises like that are all in the day's headaches for those who are concerned with the business of bringing important Hollywood stars to the microphone for this weekly dramatic show.

Radio is an exacting business. Everything must go off "on the nose." Hence, a cold in the head, a case of laryngitis, or plain jitters, a delay in train, boat or plane schedule becomes a major catastrophe.

Take the time Clark Gable was starred in the air show, His Misleading Lady.

Clark was just coming in from a vacation jaunt through South America. But the boat was delayed by fog. There was an anxious exchange of radio messages. Clark insisted that he'd be at the studio on time.

It was several minutes after eleven when word was received that the boat had finally docked down on the Brooklyn waterfront, a good many miles from the studio. The cast was assembled. Rehearsals were due to start at twelve.

And Gable had to clear his luggage through the Customs, meet officials, and submit to interviews. Everyone thought he'd be doing well if he turned up by dinner time.

At the stroke of twelve, the elevator door opened in the Columbia Broadcasting Studios, and there was Gable.

"It took a motorcycle escort to clear the way," he said with a grin, "but you said twelve—so here I am. I'm never late for a rehearsal, no matter what. Likewise, when five o'clock comes, I put on my hat and go home—even if I'm right in the middle of a line."

Gable may be a strong silent he-man on the screen, but to those who worked with him in the studio, he is just a big enthusiastic kid.

Radio theater was to be his first real crack at radio—and he wanted to make good! All the way through rehearsals there was a line which he kept muffing. When he came to the line during his air performance, he got it off perfectly. He turned to the director in the control booth and gave him a triumphant salute.

JOAN CRAWFORD, in common with Helen Hayes, Claudette Colbert and several other actresses, likes to broadcast in her stocking feet. It makes her seem smaller and eases the nervous tension.

Altogether, appearing on the air in Within the Law, was difficult for Joan. She was married on the morning she started her rehearsals. But she worked right through from Friday to Monday without sparing [Continued on page 84]

At the moment, Irene Dunne is the talk of Hollywood because of her performance with Robert Taylor in The Magnificent Obsession, yet she dislikes the consequences of fame

IRENE DUNNE—the Magnificent Lady

She doesn't like the title, but this story reveals the traits of character that make her a beloved star

By Clark Warren

THERE is one thing about being a movie star that Irene Dunne cordially dislikes—the consequences of fame. She doesn't mind signing autographs, and of course she gets a very human thrill out of being admired by legions of theater-goers. But there are other things, for instance . . .

How would you like to look at a vicious gun aimed squarely in your direction?

Irene Dunne has had that experience, and it would not have happened had she been a nobody. It was late at night and the car had just been put away. She was accosted in the driveway by two thugs, backed against the wall by the menacing sheen of blue steel. All available cash went to the bandits. Strangely, they did not ask for her jewels before gliding away in the darkness. Thrilled? Not exactly. She was more frightened than anything else. Frightened partly with the realization that here was a consequence of fame.

How would you like to be rudely stared at everywhere you go? It happens to all of filmdom's favorites. Some of them, like Irene Dunne, never become accustomed to it, and privacy becomes the dearest thing in life.

How would you like to have your home ransacked? Or your clothes torn by eager crowds trying to get a glimpse of you? More consequences of fame, and a film star has to face them every hour of her life!

Irene Dunne has tried to ignore the more unpleasant things in Hollywood. She has found happiness of a kind here, and fame scarcely without asking. She has maintained a placid sort of dignity. As a result, she is often called the First Lady of the screen. (Miss Dunne is just a little tired of her reputation as a "lady." She would just as soon her interviewers would forget the appellation, and likewise overlook her obviously ideal marriage to Dr. Francis Griffin, a New York dentist, who prefers to remain in the background.)

DON'T think that she is forever dignified. She is as human and amiable a person as you could ever want. The other day she was entertaining some visitors in her dressing room. One of them had a severe cold, and thereby started a lot of fun.

"I know a grand cure for colds if they haven't gone too far," Miss Dunne announced. "Want to try it out?" The patient nodded assent.

So the star disappeared into the kitchen and returned presently with quite an assortment: A glass half filled with hot water, another with cold water, juice from a lemon, some bicarbonate of soda, and perhaps a few other odds and ends.

"Now as soon as it starts fizzing, grab the hot glass and drink it down, then follow with the

Star Portraits

WHICH IS HEPBURN?

- The answer obviously is that both portraits on this page were posed by the star of Sylvia Scarlett. On the screen, Katharine Hepburn can be a beautiful pagan or a fragile, lovely young Madonna. Similarly, in private life she can be a gracious lady or a fun-loving, typically Hollywood actress who brawls with cameramen because she bet one of them a thousand dollars that her picture couldn't be taken during her trip to New York. Whatever she is, or decides to be, there is no denying that the screen boasts of no personality more fascinating

—Portrait by Hurrell

JEAN HARLOW

- Ten years ago, she was but a pretty school girl in Kansas City, with no thought of becoming an actress. Five years ago, she became an overnight sensation in Hell's Angels Today, there are few more popular actresses, and none who could have played more perfectly her rôle in Wife versus Secretary. Despite her lovely appearance as a "brownette," and her expressed wish to have done forever with platinum hair, admirers sent a deluge of letters in defense of the latter when last month's guest editor, Ginger Rogers, asked whether they preferred the dark or the dazzling silver for Jean's tresses. Pertinent points about Jean Harlow include the fact that she wed for the first time at sixteen; that she is the siren of sirens on the screen, but the "good fellow" type of girl in real life; that her diet seldom includes meat; that she has an ambition to write

CLAUDETTE COLBERT

- Camera artist William Walling spoke the truth when he stated that this portrait is the loveliest he ever snapped of Claudette Colbert. That is a strong statement in view of the fact that Claudette never takes a poor picture, and is rated as the most easily photographed star in Hollywood. At the right, she may be seen with an architect, studying the plans of her new home in Holmby Hills. Now completed, the snow white mansion is one of Hollywood's show places, and just the place for Claudette to begin a new chapter in her life as Mrs. Joel J. Pressman. Previously, she has lived in rented houses and apartments, and the fun of planning her new home has been almost as much a thrill as her second honeymoon, the first being with Norman Foster, from whom she was divorced last year. Foster has since wed Sally Blane, but the two remained friends. Thus, life goes on for Claudette in new channels, but on the screen she remains the same, a universally loved comedienne —Portrait by William Walling, Jr.

SHIRLEY TEMPLE

● As genuine as a flawless diamond, Shirley defies the laws of gravity which send child stars up and down the ladder of popularity with amazing swiftness. The Littlest Rebel, her current picture, is breaking records everywhere, and the same should be true of Captain January, in which she appears with Guy Kibbee (photo at the left). From the movies and various commercial products which carry her name, Shirley now earns in excess of $5,000 weekly, and there is not a man, woman or child who begrudges her this wealth. No star has more completely earned her money. Miraculously, Shirley is as natural as the day the movies found her, the only apparent change being the improvement in her dancing and acting. She learns her lines more rapidly than any veteran star and to date has not registered one iota of that thing called temperament. Your editor thinks the above picture is the loveliest he has ever seen of Hollywood's Crown Princess, who is the heir apparent to many happy picture events still to come

The Man Who Is NELSON EDDY

By Harry Lang

A frank story which clearly disproves the many false rumors which have spread about the hero of Rose Marie

Jeanette MacDonald knows how gallant Nelson Eddy can be, even when not before the camera. But Eddy has a private romance which he never has revealed

Horn-rimmed glasses hide the identity of Nelson Eddy off-screen, but cannot disguise his appeal. Unlike many singers, he is strong as an athlete, an expert rider, a practical joker, and with all his talent perhaps the most democratic star in Hollywood

YOU have never heard the yarn about how Nelson Eddy deflated that pompous, know-it-all newspaperman from the East. . . .

It was on location with the Rose Marie company, 'way up a mile high in the Sierra mountains, at Lake Tahoe on the border line between California and Nevada. Down a bit from the lake is a dell called Echo Valley—for the sufficient reason that a man's shout comes back to him in four successive echoes there.

That's where this happened. There stood Nelson Eddy and this self-important scribe, visiting the place to see how a movie company acted "on location."

"You know," said Eddy, seriously, "that this place has the most remarkable, the most amazing echo that you can find anywhere in the world?"

The other drew himself up. "Tush, tush," he tush-tushed; "I've been in the Alps, my dear Mr. Eddy, and I've heard echoes there. And besides, I've been in El Escorial near Madrid, where they have the famous echoing gallery."

"Yes, yes," interrupted Eddy; "but this echo here is different. I know you've travelled all over, but the famous echoes you have heard merely repeat back the original words, don't they? Well—this echo here has intelligence. It learns things.

"Are you twitting me?" demanded the pompous visitor.

"Perish the thought!" remonstrated Eddy. "Here, let me prove it to you. For the past many days, I've been singing the song Rose Marie here. At first, the echo merely gave back the song as I sang it. But bye and bye, it learned the song—and now when I start it, the echo carries it right on for me. . . ! Listen!"

Nelse strode to a jutting rock, faced a far rock wall, and let loose that gorgeous, tremendous voice of his in the opening bars of the song—

"ROSE MARIE, I LOVE YOU—"

He turned to the newspaperman. "Now, wait—and listen," he said. A moment passed. Then, from the far rock came the echo—

"—I'm always dreaming of you!" And from there on, the echo sang the rest of the well-known chorus, while the newspaperman stared pop-eyed in astonishment!

"My heavens!" exclaimed the scribe; "this is wonderful. Let me try it." He strode to the rock point, too, and yelled the first words of that famous nursery-rhyme—

"LITTLE TOMMY TUCKER—"

Then he waited. In a moment, clear and sharp, came the echo's voice. "Hello there, you're a sucker!"—and with that, while Eddy bellowed in roaring laughter beside the newspaperman, the head and shoulders of a stranger lifted over a rock in the distance. It was Bill Steinkamp, one of the sound men on the company. He had been the "echo," and Nelse and he had rigged up this gag on the know-it-all. The visitor left the location that afternoon, and hasn't been heard from in Hollywood since. [Continued on page 50]

"Don't Be Afraid of a Broken Heart!"

Merle Oberon's message, based on her own unusual experiences, will strike home in the heart of every woman

"WHO'S afraid!" Two challenge-ridden words . . . Merle Oberon stopped, then, and looked away toward the sea on that misty, silver-grey day when we went walking along the Palisades at Santa Monica. She wore tweeds, heather-hued like her eyes, and woolen stockings and brogans. Her brown hair was rough in the wind and her cheeks pink. She was young and buoyant and very, very lovely. And gallant, somehow.

We had been talking about love that day. A casual conversation at first, but it was serious now.

"Love makes you vulnerable," I said.

Quickly, Merle caught up the words. "Yes, but who's afraid? I am not afraid!"

"Not even of a broken heart?"

"Not even of a broken heart. If a woman has courage she will come through such an experience more of a person than she was before it happened!"

We walked on, then, down the long, winding slope of the Roosevelt highway to the beach below. The wet, strangely warm fog came in closer and the gulls wheeled above or dropped to the waves, there to ride quietly, like bits of driftwood.

Above: Stripped of her glamour, Merle plays a remarkably frank, down-to-earth characterization in These Three

By Marian Rhea

"I never have believed that in all of life there can be just one love for each of us and to lose this is to lose love"

Striking Facts About MERLE OBERON'S Newest Picture

These Three, the screen version of The Children's Hour, a stage play purchased at a cost of $100,000 by Producer Sam Goldwyn, cost approximately $1,000,000 to film. The problem of possible censorship caused the change of title and changes in the plot, yet the screen version remains a vital drama. No expense has been spared in making the picture. The cost of one day's filming on location reached $12,000, and for the sake of realism Goldwyn did away with the usual "false front" idea for sets, practically all of the buildings which are seen in the picture being built of good sound brick, stone and wood. The story concerns two girls who run a school in a New England farm house. A young doctor comes to town, falls in love with one of the girls and the film takes on its dramatic aspect when an old lady who originally befriended the young teachers turns against them because of vicious lies told by her granddaughter. Joel McCrea has the leading male rôle.

It was a day for confidences, a day for introspection. We spread out the thick, soft auto robe we had brought and sat down on the sand.

Merle spoke. "I've thought a lot about love, as what girl hasn't? When I was little, I dreamed of a Prince Charming who would carry me away on a snowy white steed to a fine castle. As I grew a little older, my Prince Charming changed to a dream lover who, in my romantic imagination, would care for me so much that he would scarcely dare to breathe my name, worshiping me until I gave sign of my own affection. . . ."

The attractive Samuel Goldwyn star whom you'll soon be seeing in These Three — laughed a little, reminiscently. "Girls are romantic things, aren't they? Still, I wouldn't trade those dreams of mine for a king's ransom, today.

"Of course, as time went on, my ideals changed and developed and now that I am a woman grown, I have a definite philosophy of love—but romance is still a part of it."

I interrupted. "A workable philosophy?"

"I think so," she said, simply.

"A philosophy that will save you from a broken heart?"

"No. A philosophy that will help me to be a wiser, better, more truly happy girl for having had a broken heart. You see, I think a broken heart is worth having if"—with a smile at my startled surprise—"you can 'take it.' If not—" she shrugged, eloquently, and left the sentence unfinished.

"You know," she went on after an instant's silence, "I am reminded of two women, both friends of mine, each of whom has been hurt by a man she loved. And the way those two women have reacted to this tragedy has been to me a lesson I shall never forget.

"THIS happened to both about a year ago. Today, each is a changed woman, but while one has been licked by tragedy, the other has triumphed over it. For one, life seems to have ended. She is so unsporting about it all! She never stops talking about it. Honestly, her conversation when you meet her is like that of the proverbial pest who insists upon talking about her operation.

"But the other is different. The man she loved was a cad, too. He wrecked her pride and broke her heart. But you'd never know this from anything she says. She doesn't talk about it at all, in fact. Yet you can tell she has gained, not lost, from the experience. There is a new kindness in her, a new thoughtfulness, and new depth. [Continued on page 60]

CARY GRANT Reforms

In Sylvia Scarlett, with Katharine Hepburn, he enters a new field . . . and plans to stick to it!

By Carol Craig

IN Wings in the Dark, Cary Grant was an aviator who went blind—so realistically blind that he wrenched hearts loose from their moorings. In his latest picture—Sylvia Scarlett, starring Katharine Hepburn—he is something entirely different, a fast-talking Cockney, a likable small-time smuggler who turns showman. And he is so convincingly Cockney that he will be suspected of having been born without his "h's"—which he wasn't. Next, in the English picture, The Curious Quest, he will play a chap who has too much money and doesn't know what to do with it all.

"Now, there's a rôle that ought to be different," he says with enthusiasm, adding, with mock dismay, "Having too much money is one situation I'll never face in real life—yet I'm supposed to live the rôle!"

He won't admit that his search for a reputation as a character actor is a curious quest. He won't subscribe to the notion, held by thousands upon thousands of female movie-goers, that he is a "natural" as a screen lover. Pin him down—tell him that his looks are the handsome, romantic kind—and he will try to put up an argument about that, too.

In short, he isn't fooling. He's serious about this business of becoming-a-many-sided-actor.

"Yes," he says, "I'm a reformed Romeo. I didn't want to be one in the first place, you know. That was Hollywood's idea, not mine. Character rôles are more varied, more fun, more satisfying. Straight leads are always the same; they never get you anywhere—and they aren't so lasting. I happen to like my profession and I want to stay in it. That's why I want to do more character acting. Character actors have a habit of staying around.

"Now, don't get me wrong. I'm not saying that a man can't act if he has to play straight leads. He can, and he usually does . . . more than most people realize. But people get tired of seeing him doing the same old things, in picture after picture. Pretty soon, they turn thumbs down on him and take to some other fellow whose looks they like. That's human nature. But you never saw them turn thumbs down on Lon Chaney, did you? The public likes suspense, and Chaney gave it to them. They never knew what kind of rôle he might do next.

"I'd like to be a younger Chaney, without the make-up tricks. You know, a perfectly normal face can register innumerable flashes and flickers of character. Vary those flashes and you can vary the characters you portray. Especially if you change your voice, the kind of clothes you wear, your haircuts, your body motions."

WHEN Cary Grant is at work on a picture, most of his evenings are spent right at home, studying the next day's assignment. And that brings up an interesting point:

"By studying I don't mean just memorizing lines. That's the easiest part of preparing for a scene. Remembering all of the mechanical details is the tough part. Especially, the lighting. Before we ever walk into camera range on a scene, we know that we've got to take a certain number of steps to reach a certain mark that is faintly outlined on the floor. And if we miss that mark, the scene has to be shot over—for if we miss it, we are out of focus and the lighting isn't correct. We have to remember to hold our heads a certain way or we'll have ugly shadows right where we don't want them. We have to remember to keep our hands down in close-up shots. Suppose, unconsciously, I run my hand through my hair in a close shot. The chances are that I am putting a long black shadow under Joe Doakes' nose, if Joe is standing beside me—and my elbow hides some Travis Banton costume worn by a girl in the background. . . . On the stage, an actor can do anything with his hands that may be natural to him. But a screen actor has very little

BETTE DAVIS Gives Lessons In Acting

By Linda Heath

Leslie Howard with Bette Davis in The Petrified Forest

THERE is no such thing as a "natural born actress"—or actor. That's what any well-trained, experienced actor will tell you, anyway. Mothers, of course, will tell you something different, for it seems a tradition that most of them think their children are "natural born Thespians."

Just as a pianist falls short of greatness when he plays by ear with stiff, uneasy fingers, so does an actor depend on projecting emotion by the very thing that pianist also needs: technique. Technique—what is it? Why, the rules, or manner of artistic performance. And no one, it follows, can be artistic without knowing the rules, talent or no talent.

Let's take the case of Bette Davis, Warner Brothers star, as a good one in point. If any mother ever came close to truth when remarking that her daughter was a "natural born actress," it must have been Mrs. Ruth Davis, Bette's mother. A young woman who can give such immortal performances as hers in Of Human Bondage, Dangerous, and The Petrified Forest, must have talent bordering on genius. But could Bette Davis have given those performances without training, without technique? And does she have that knowledge? Let's examine her background a moment.

As far back as her high school days, Bette Davis was both studying dramatics and playing in the school theatricals. Upon graduation from Newton, Massachusetts, high school and Cushing Academy, Bette went to New York, and enrolled in the John Murray Anderson dramatic school, where she won a scholarship and high honors. Still more training in Provincetown stage plays followed before she was ready for Broadway—and several Broadway plays finished the preparation for the screen. And even then Bette's apprenticeship was not ended, for she played bits and minor rôles for many months before at last she scored.

Undoubtedly, Bette Davis knows her technique.

What, then, are some of its expressions? How do you know technique when you see it?

Quite a stumper, that, for the average actor. Technique, perhaps, is something like personality—you can't define it, but you know whether it's there or not, all right. There are, however, a few "Dos" and "Don'ts" that may be easily expressed, and Bette Davis, following her final fadeout in her latest picture The Petrified Forest, took time to illustrate, in the

Explaining The Photos—

1. Bette Davis shows the "stage" way of lighting a cigarette. The man is careful not to hide her face.
2. Showing how, on the stage, a scene always is played to the balcony.
3. Posture — in standing, one foot should bear the weight. When there is nothing to do with the hands, such as holding a cigarette, they are better clasped lightly together.
4. An interesting point. A yell or scream should be uttered with the body held upright—not in a forward position.
5. In walking, a good actress never will slouch, but definitely approaches her objective. Learning "to walk" on the stage and screen is difficult.

Cotton application of good skin tonic

Next comes use of a liquid powder base

THERE is no one beauty asset so important, it seems to me, as a skin that has a look of cleanness and freshness about it.

Lovely hair, hands, waistlines and eyelashes charm me, it is true, but I become quite rapturous over a fresh, dewy looking complexion.

And I happen to know, from years of questioning them closely about their beauty preferences, that men feel the same way. Not even a superbly-turned ankle can compete with a clear skin for a man's favor—and we all know what fools they are for a pretty ankle!

Although I have witnessed miracles performed by Hollywood make-up, I have yet to see any real improvement made in a dingy, blemished skin by the heavy application of cosmetics. This type of concealment just doesn't work!

Many girls think they are cleansing their skins completely when they really aren't . . . They would shudder at the implication that they were lax in cleanliness; yet their skins are mute witnesses to their incorrect cleansing methods . . .

This is especially true of the oily type of skin. I want to warn those of you with over-oily skins that you can do much toward lessening the oil output by close attention to your diet. Cut down on rich, greasy foods, for they are oil-producing. Eat lots of fresh fruits and vegetables. Fruit juice is grand for your complexion, too.

Filming a Great DRAMA

An adventure on the set of The Prisoner of Shark Island

Warner Baxter, in the rôle of the doctor who unknowingly aided the escape of Lincoln's assassin, plays one of the screen's most dramatic moments as he hears his terrible sentence after being tried by a hysterical court

Despite its stark realism, The Prisoner of Shark Island is the story of a great love, with Gloria Stuart as the wife who sacrifices everything to help her husband escape from the horrors of military prison

By Bill Ulman

"THERE it is!" muttered the Captain. Far across the blinding reflection of a flat, pale sea rose the walls of the Fort, sheer from the turgid waters of the Caribbean. Scores of miles from the nearest inhabited land, it lay there like a vast, wallowing sea-beast—anxious to devour but too slothful to make the effort.

The Government Light-House Tender Ivy upon which we were riding the Spanish Main put in at the ramshackle, decaying stub of a pier. There was no rush to be the first ashore. Clearly visible from the deck was the stone-graven name over the maw of the Fort—Arcadia. The irony of that name struck us later as we staggered about in the crushing heat of the parade grounds, alone with the echoes that made us feel like squeaking mice. We didn't like it, but we were there on business; we had to photograph the God-forsaken place for the country's screens. The name of the deserted fort had been changed to Fort Jefferson but no one was on the burning sand and rock of the island of Dry Tortugas with sufficient energy to chip the new name over the portcullis.

We were relieved to see the last of that hell-hole, but we all understood clearly the full significance of that casual phrase, "—your name will be Mudd!"

Nearly three years later, SCREEN BOOK asked me to go out to Twentieth Century-Fox and talk to Warner Baxter and John Ford, star and director of The Prisoner Of Shark Island, respectively. I went out on the stage where they were working and found myself once again amid all the nameless horror of Fort Jefferson. Three tiers of dark galleries rose from the parade grounds, deep in dry-rot shadows.

The picture employing this grim and forbidding background—America's first true Devil's Island—concerns itself with the bitter persecution of a hapless country doctor whose name was Mudd—in more ways than one. The harrowing fury of the Civil War was just over. President Lincoln went to a play. A maniacal actor assassinated him and escaped from the theater with a broken leg. Far south of Washington he could ride no further and was taken to the home of Doctor Mudd for treatment saying that he had fallen from his horse. The good doctor set the leg and Actor Booth was on his way. Mudd, of course, was quite innocent of any complicity in the assassination, but he was afterward convicted to life imprisonment. The Unknown Side of RONALD COLMAN

By Harmony Haynes

EVER since the summer of 1922, when Ronald Colman was introduced to motion picture audiences as the tender, faithful lover of Lillian Gish in the silent version of The White Sister, he has been looked upon by the entire world as the beau ideal of the screen. And so he is—but in his private life, he is the bachelor ideal, living in simple comfort, without a woman on the place!

In his pictures he is ever a gallant with the ladies—in his private world he is a man among men. Accepted generally as an Englishman, he is in reality, a Scotchman and has inherited from his ancestry that stubborn Scotch will, so often called "hard-headedness." He is long in making up his mind but once it is made up, nothing in the world can change it.

Born to luxury and reduced to poverty at the age of sixteen, he has learned the value of a dollar and none of the Scotch jokes about thrift are funny to him. Although he has been earning a large salary for the past fifteen years, he has not yet forgotten that he landed in America with $57.00, three clean collars and two letters of introduction. The money was gone and the collars all soiled before the letters did him any good. Colman's servants are all men—there's the cook, the secretary, the gardener and the house boy. He employs no valet and no chauffeur. He needs no "man" as he terms it because he doesn't like to dress and anyone fussing about his collar buttons would only annoy him.

On the screen, he is associated with smart clothes, uniforms and tails being his long suit. Off the screen, he prefers comfort to style and dodges all the "dress" affairs he possibly can. Hollywood hostesses have learned that if they wish Mr. Colman to accept their invitations they must be informal.

HE LIKES to travel and takes trips whenever he can, but seldom does he go first class. He climbs into his car and drives all over the United States visiting any spot that may interest him and stopping at odd places along the route.

He does this for two reasons—first he likes the careless, vagabond life—and second, he is less apt to be stampeded by fans. He has tried various forms of disguise, such as cutting off his moustache or wearing goggles but

Warner Baxter with Alice Faye in one of the best of all movie musicals

KING OF BURLESQUE

THE magic hand of Darryl Zanuck again turns out another screen masterpiece in this breezy musical which features Warner Baxter in the rôle of a show producer who climbs from burlesque to Broadway success, only to lose all when he weds a woman who thinks more of money than she does of love. Alice Faye deftly plays the rôle of the blonde darling who always has loved Baxter and who in the end secretly contrives to save him from himself. Comedy situations are in the masterful hands of Jack Oakie, as Baxter's stooge, Gregory Ratoff and Herbert Mundin. Dixie Dunbar steals a great portion of the show with her whirlwind dancing. The songs are catchy and the plot never lags. It can't be denied that this is top notch entertainment. — Produced by Twentieth Century-Fox.

AS A stage play, Ceiling Zero was a hit; as a movie it will prove to be one of the season's most talked of pictures. This dramatic story of the hazards of commercial aviation has Jimmy Cagney and Pat O'Brien in leading rôles. Cagney plays his familiar rôle as the fickle Romeo who runs into rough weather when another flier takes his place and is killed in a crack-up. Blaming himself for the pilot's death, Cagney takes a plane up to test an ice-resisting invention and plunges to his own doom, a hero. June Travis, in her first big rôle, is unusually good. Effective, too, are members of the supporting cast, which includes Stuart Erwin, Garry Owen and Isabel Jewell. There has never been a better air drama.—Produced by Warner Brothers.

IF YOU are interested in the sweeter things of life, there is much to applaud in this nice little picture which concerns a girl who inherits from her mother a great love for the theater. Anne Shirley, as the girl, finally gets her chance despite the opposition of her grandfather, and appears in Virtue's Reward, the same play in which her mother had starred years before. Innocently, she is unaware that her theatrical efforts are mere burlesque and that she only amuses the audience. When she discovers the true situation, she returns to the farm. Phillips Holmes plays the boy who can't bring himself to shatter her illusions, and Erik Rhodes delivers his usual fine performance. An excellent family picture.—Produced by Radio Pictures.

IN THE rôle of the French girl who turns boy to help her father escape the consequences of his thievery, Katharine Hepburn gives a performance that is outstanding both for its dramatic and comedy values. Cary Grant, however, escapes with the largest portion of the picture's honors as the cockney swindler who becomes an actor. Edmund Gwenn is also realistic as the selfish father who comes to no good end after a hectic romance with a house maid. The picture is a bit slow in spots, but has individual fine performances to offset the feeling that it is somewhat too long. Admirers of Katharine Hepburn will be particularly satisfied with her fine work; others may not be so enthusiastic.—Produced by Radio Pictures.

FRANK REVIEWS

MODERN TIMES

ANY event for which one waits for long with great expectation is liable to be an anti-climax. So it is with Chaplin's new effort. That it is a film worthy of top rating is unquestionable; that it is a splendid comedy no one can deny, but, despite Charlie's rugged, silent individualism, there is the feeling that he might have done better had he talked. One scene in which he plays a singing waiter who, because he can't remember the words, indulges in a meaningless mixture of hog latin and foreign words is proof enough that Chaplin would be even more the great comedian should he find voice. The story is his usual formula about the downtrodden waif whose troubles multiply as he attempts to aid a penniless girl. Paulette Goddard is an adequate leading lady. Chester Conklin and Hank Mann stand out in supporting comic rôles.—Produced for United Artists.

Freddie Bartholomew and Victor McLaglen dare each other to fight

ALL this simply couldn't have happened, yet the story of the hardboiled gent who continually looks for trouble and finds it when he kidnaps a king is exciting. Victor McLaglen is the kidnaper and Freddie Bartholomew the young king who is captured and recaptured in a series of thrilling scenes filled with comedy and suspense. Outstanding in the picture is a young man by the name of Michael Whalen who has a great deal of charm and a fine flair for comedy. Gloria Stuart is startlingly lovely, and the supporting cast does a good job. Although this is light entertainment, it is just one more jewel in the crown of Darryl Zanuck, who is rightfully considered the screen's foremost genius. You won't be wasting time on Professional Soldier! Produced by Twentieth Century-Fox.

Conrad Veidt, in the rôle of Christ returned to earth, with Rene Clare

THE PASSING OF THE THIRD FLOOR BACK

A BEAUTIFULLY filmed story with a moral, the plot of this picture concerns Christ's return to earth as a man. He comes into the lives of a group of commonplace people residing in a boarding house, replacing cruelty with kindness and straightening out disordered lives. The play is ably interpreted by Conrad Veidt, Anna Lee, Frank Cellier and Rene Ray. Done with a natural touch, this picture has no "preachy" atmosphere; it is remarkably powerful in dramatic quality and one of the finest English pictures ever to reach the American screen. Conrad Veidt's vivid, sensitive performance is one of the new year's finest entertainment highlights.—Produced by G-B.

Villain Joseph Calleia in the act of still pursuing the lovely Jean Harlow

A COLORFUL, hearty story in which Jean Harlow, queen of the tuna fish canneries, weds Spencer Tracy, king of the tuna fishermen. Tracy, a trouble-maker, loses his job, runs out on Jean and turns hobo. In an effort to save the erring husband, Jean runs afoul of the law and lands in prison where her baby is born. There is the usual happy ending, but plenty of fireworks before the fadeout. Also in the picture are Una Merkel, J. Farrell MacDonald, Mickey Rooney and Vince Barnett. Jean Harlow does one of the best jobs of her career. Joseph Calleia stands out as the menace. For an interesting sidelight on the film, see Una Merkel's Minute Interview on page 75.—Produced by Metro.

Colin Clive appears astonished at Dolores Del Rio's startling gown

THE WIDOW FROM MONTE CARLO

★★½

ANOTHER of the month's light comedy offerings, this pleasant screen story of a young widow who can't forget a kiss she receives from a fast worker, is diverting. Despite a thin plot, the cast goes skating on to many amusing moments, due mainly to the fine work of Louise Fazenda, comical tough guy Warren Hymer and the sad-faced Herbert Mundin. Warren William plays the male lead with his usual finesse, being the man who bobs up in the life of Miss Del Rio more often than a guilty conscience. The cast also includes Colin Clive, E. E. Clive and Viva Tattersall. A nice picture to while away the time, but not too important.—Produced by Warner Brothers.

Millions of women combat all 3 with Luxor Moisture-Proof Powder

● Ugly nose shine! Dirty yawning pores! Floury streaks! Don't tolerate them. Combat "conspicuous nose" trouble once and for all. Change to Luxor, the face powder that 6,000,000 women use to combat skin-moisture.

Because every face gives off skin moisture. That's a natural function of the skin, especially around the nose where glands are highly active and where skin moisture waits in each pore opening to mix with face powder. To cause shine, to clog pores, to make floury blotches—to make your nose conspicuous.

So change at once to Luxor. It's so moisture-proof that it won't even mix with water in a glass. Try it and see for yourself. Then try it on your face. Notice the fine moisture-proof protection it gives the skin—effective, attractive, lasting.

Luxor's many smart new shades are flattering with a natural effect. They are carefully blended to enhance skin tones. Luxor powder bears the Seal of Good Housekeeping because it is so pure and does everything we say.

That Man Who Is Nelson Eddy

And that, I may as well tell you, is only one of the many stories that could be told about Nelson Eddy, the clown, rather than Nelson Eddy, the dry-as-dust, serious-as-death, glorified gramophone which he's generally misbelieved to be.

For it's true, that thanks to his intense devotion to and his steady application to his music, there has risen around Nelson Eddy a reputation that has virtually dehumanized him. Read or hear about Nelson Eddy and you read or hear about nothing but his singing, his voice, his opera. Little by little you forget that he's also a regular guy, and a swell one at that.

AS A matter of fact, although singing is his one over-powering interest in life, there are so many other facets to the man's character that he's easily one of the most interesting men in Hollywood, completely aside from his voice. His tendency to clown, to play practical jokes, is one of the most revealing, human things about him.

The whole Rose Marie company was the butt of his very first gag on that Tahoe location trip. They'd arrived there late, gone to bed dead tired, looking forward to a late sleep in the morning.

Exactly at five a. m., the still dawn air of the lake was shattered by a great voice bellowing the Indian Love Call. Startled heads lifted from crushed pillows; sleepy technicians muttered assorted damns; Jeanette MacDonald stirred in her lacy pajamas and wondered who was on the warpath. A bunch of the boys got up and investigated—and found Nelson Eddy sticking his head out of his hotel window into the icy air, throwing the full power of his lungs into the song.

They had breakfast that morning at six, not eleven. But the company got their laugh back at Nelson later on. That was when Nelse learned to mount a horse.

His instructor was Inspector W. G. Grennan, imported from the Canadian Northwest Mounted Police by Metro to give complete verity to the Rose Marie scenes.

"Now you vault lightly into the saddle, like this, Mr. Eddy," directed Grennan, and light as a feather, he swung across his horse and into the seat.

"Cinch," muttered Eddy to himself, taking the proper beginning stance beside his mount. "Now—UP!" directed Grennan. Eddy gave a prodigious leap and soared into the air with the greatest of ease. "Cinch," he muttered to himself in mid-air, as he prepared to light downily in the saddle, as Grennan had.

But something had gone wrong. He had miscalculated. He had done not well, but too well. His leap carried him right over the horse's back, and he landed like a sack of potatoes on the other side. The company tittered. Grennan grinned. The horse laughed out loud.

And now comes a phase of Eddy's character that is one of his facets, too. He might have demanded a double do his stuff on the horse. But not Eddy. "I," he muttered, "will show you!" So he went back to the other side, and vaulted again. This time, with the methodical deliberation that marks him, he calculated carefully and well—and came down in the saddle with, if not neatness, at least accuracy. The rest of that day, he kept at it. By nightfall he could vault into his saddle with the same aplomb with which his instructor achieved it.

And that—his unwillingness to be licked, and his calm deliberation at achieving anything he wants to do—marks Nelson Eddy, too.

ARE you beginning to get a better picture now of Eddy than the painfully serious one that's been built up around him? A picture of a fellow who's human enough to collect autographs and yet so shy that he didn't dare ask Jeanette MacDonald for hers until after he'd gone through passionate love scenes with her? A fellow who plays jokes on his best friends, and draws funny cartoons of them—hangover of his days in the art department of a Philadelphia newspaper? A fellow who sings at the top of his voice in the bathtub and despite knowing thirty-two opera rôles in English, French, Italian, Spanish, Russian and Yiddish, yet prefers the old folk-song Songs My Mother Taught Me—simply because his own mother did sing them to him as a youngster? A fellow who has somehow attained the reputation of being a virtual "woman-hater," and who is yet so gallant that not once during the Rose Marie location stay did the five stock women in the company lack for fresh flowers at their dinner tables, thanks to his foresight?

Because that's the kind of fellow Eddy really is—a human, regular guy who won't call a boy to carry his costumes on the lot, like most stars; who won't call a car to carry him from set to dressing room, like most stars, but walks instead, hailing all and sundry with a cheerful "Hi-ya" as he passes.

Of course, a lot of those he hails don't recognize him. For the Nelson Eddy of off-screen doesn't look like the Nelson Eddy of Rose Marie. It's a sort of reverse—Harold Lloyd process. Whereas Lloyd isn't easily recognized off-screen because he doesn't wear glasses like in character, just so is Nelson Eddy often unrecognized because off-screen he does wear big horn-rimmed glasses.

And so there you are—and I hope you've got a new picture of Nelse Eddy that makes him human, instead of just a voice with legs on it, and who works, works, works, works all the time and never plays. For that's wrong—oh, yes, he has worked, and still does. But even in this hard-working guy, there's the same lazy streak that's in all of us. If you don't believe it, I'll tell you the secret of what they found in his hotel room at Lake Tahoe—

They found that Nelse Eddy had gotten some rope and pulleys and rigged up a complicated system whereby he could raise and lower his hotel window without getting out of bed!

"Aw, it was on accounta the cold!" Eddy explains.

JUST LIKE OLD TIMES – NOW MY SKIN IS CLEAR AGAIN

Don't let Adolescent Pimples keep YOUR boy friend away

PIMPLES are all too common in the years that follow the beginning of adolescence—from about 13 to the age of 25, or even longer. Important glands develop and final growth takes place during this time. This causes disturbances throughout the body. The skin becomes oversensitive. Waste poisons in the blood irritate this sensitive skin, causing pimples.

Clear up these adolescent pimples—with Fleischmann's Yeast. This fresh yeast clears the skin irritants out of your blood. Pimples go. Your skin is fresh and smooth again . . .

Eat Fleischmann's Yeast 3 times a day, before meals—plain, or in a little water—until your skin clears. Start today!

With Clark Gable in Wife versus Secretary, Jean Harlow wears the type of frock every working girl will find interesting. Jean believes a successful secretary should dress, not only to be attractive to her boss, but to his customers there is a twin sweater set of yellow, worn with a plain grey wool skirt. Three tailored dresses, two of crêpe and one of sheer wool. And a tweed coat trimmed with an inexpensive short fur. The coat can be worn with any of the foregoing outfits. The sweaters can be worn with the suit or the pull-over sweater can be worn as a blouse to go with the suit while the linen blouse is being laundered. In other words the wardrobe is both practical and elastic. The one real extravagance which this secretary allows herself is an evening gown. She has only one. It is of white satin, very simply made. Her evening wrap is of the same material.

"IF YOU are the type of girl who wears a suit well," says Dolores Del Rio, who, to my way of thinking is one of the best dressed girls in Hollywood, "your clothes problem is comparatively simple. A lightweight suit and a heavy one can take you almost through the year. And blouses and sweaters afford an infinite variety of change."

I had lunch with Dolores one day recently and she was wearing a suit which I am sure every girl would adore to own. It was of black corded wool, very plain and tailored. The skirt had two side fastenings, like slacks, and the coat was single-breasted with very wide lapels. With this suit Dolores wore a white silk blouse with four tailored pockets and a turnover collar. At the throat she wore a modernistic pin of black jet with bars of brilliants. You see Dolores happens to be a very feminine type of person and she feels that a severely tailored suit demands a rather soft feminine type of blouse rather than a crisply tailored one. She feels, too, that a pin at the throat is more feminine and flattering than a talored bow. You will notice also that her blouse has crystal buttons.

Her hat was quite the maddest thing I've seen in months, but oh so chic. Do you remember the little boats you made out of a folded sheet of paper when you were a kid? Well, the hat was almost a dead-ringer for one of those paper boats. It was made out of a stiff, shiny black silk and she wore it far back on her head. Any girl who is clever with her fingers could, I think, duplicate it.

Dolores told me that the first time she wore this hat she and her husband, Cedric Gibbons, went to the Chinese theater. Because the hat was so tiny Dolores didn't remove it. But somebody, coming into the seat just behind her, knocked it off with his elbow. Cedric turned to the gentleman and said, quite indignantly: "You knocked the lady's hat off." And then he noticed that the gentleman with the awkward elbow was none other than Harold Lloyd. There were apologies all around and then Harold and Cedric got down on their knees to search for the missing hat. Can't you imagine the surprise of those seated nearby to discover Harold Lloyd groveling at their feet?

I want you also to notice Dolores' cute little square-toed shoes. They are of black alligator and have a T-strap and a low, square heel. Something tells me a lot of you girls are going to want to know more about those shoes.

I've had numerous letters asking about mid-season evening frocks. The newest after-dark gowns are lighted with rhinestones, spangles, golden threads or shining crystal. I saw Marian Marsh the other evening wearing a very smart formal of white taffeta. It was very plain except for the bodice which sparkled with rhinestones. Carole Lombard has just taken over the job of planning parties for the ultra-smart Mayfair Club. For their first formal party, Carole has issued an edict that all the girls must wear white which gives you a tip on color style.

And here's something ducky in the way of a scarf to drape nonchalantly over your shoulders when you find yourself parked in a draft. Get a long scarf although a newcomer to the screen, is a veteran actress, having made her first appearance on the stage at the age of six weeks. She comes from a theatrical family. Her father, Roy E. Hilliard, is a famous stage director, and her mother is Hazel Hilliard, a former musical comedy prima donna and dramatic stock actress.

Harriet played her first speaking rôle when she was three years old.

"It was when I was appearing with Margaret Anglin in Green Stockings that I gave my first display of temperament," she recalls with a smile. "They tell me I wouldn't let her carry me on the stage because my face hadn't been made up."

At five Harriet left the stage and didn't return until she was fifteen, at which time she was co-starred on the Keith Orpheum vaudeville circuit with Ken Murray and Bert Lahr. Later, she appeared as a solo dancer.

"It was always my ambition," she laughed, "to be the greatest dancer in all the world. I guess that's why I turned out to be a featured vocalist for Ozzie.

"I met Ozzie one day, and he was looking for a girl to sing with his band. I told him that I'd never studied singing, but I'd like the job. He listened to my voice, decided that it would be all right, showed me how to deliver songs and I've been with his orchestra ever since. I was singing with him here at the 'Cocoanut Grove' when I was approached by the studio about making pictures. I had never even considered making a picture. . . .

"ANY debut rôle would have frightened me, because I know so little about acting, and such a chance as I'm being given in Follow the Fleet just downright scares, as well as thrills me. Of course I have to make good, not only for the sake of my own pride, but for the sake of those who had faith enough in me to give me this opportunity."

Harriet is five feet five, weighs one hundred and ten pounds, has blue grey eyes, and blonde hair, although she's wearing a dark wig in her first picture.

Miss Hilliard was born in Des Moines, Iowa, on July eighteenth, and is now in her early twenties. She was educated in Kansas City, Mo., at St. Agnes Academy for Girls. Sports do not appeal to her, probably because she's never had the time to devote to them, she says. She likes to swim, however, and recommends it to keep fit. Harriet never diets, but just uses common sense in eating . . . has an uncanny memory for names and never forgets a face.

And it's a safe bet, according to the prediction of the studio executives who have seen her work in Follow the Fleet, that few fans will be able to forget either her name or face after the release of this picture.

NOXZEMA Skin Cream

Nurses tell of amazing benefits with "Wonder Cream"

If your skin is marred by Large Pores—Blackheads—Pimples or any other Skin Irritation from external causes, here's good news! Thousands of women are successfully turning to famous Noxzema Medicated Skin Cream as an aid to healing and refining the skin—over 12,000,000 jars now used yearly.

Noxzema was first prescribed by doctors for relief of burns, eczema and similar skin troubles. Nurses discovered how wonderful it is for Chapped Hands and Poor Complexions.

HOW TO USE—Make this simple test. Apply Noxzema at night after removing make-up. Wash off in the morning with warm water. Then apply cold water or ice. Follow this with a light application of Noxzema as a protective foundation for powder.

Do this for ten days and note the difference—see how much softer and finer your skin is—how much clearer. Noxzema is astringent, helps reduce large pores to exquisite fineness. Its gentle medication soothes most skin irritations and aids Nature in more quickly healing many disfiguring skin flaws.

SPECIAL TRIAL OFFER—Get a jar of Noxzema at any drug or department store. If your dealer can't supply you, send 15c for a generous 25c jar to the Noxzema Chemical Company, Department 63, Baltimore, Md.

New—NOXZEMA'S CLEANSING and NIGHT CREAM

A new and better way to deep-pore cleanse your skin—a heavier cream for softening and toning. Wonderful for Dry, Flaky Skin. It's called Noxzema's Combination Cleansing and NightCream. Ask your druggist for inexpensive trial jar. If he can't supply you mail 25¢ to Noxzema Chemical Company, Baltimore, Md.

A MAN in your KITCHEN!

By Grace Ellis

It's "Diamond Jim" Edward Arnold, with his own pet recipe for a grand green salad

Cooking Service

The dressing has to be just so. Edward Arnold knows how to make it!

Now he rubs the bowl with a bit of garlic. It does much to improve the flavor

Put in the vegetables. Sprinkle with the dressing from bottom to top

"A GREAT GUY, a colorful character, and the best amateur cook in the cinema capital," we overheard someone say of Edward Arnold.

So we asked him to prove it. The result is his famous green salad.

Arnold was working on Sutter's Gold, packing to go on location, when the salad project was mentioned. But he isn't only a great guy—this lusty portrayer of Diamond Jim. He's a fascinating and affable and most obliging fellow.

To watch him mix his own favorite brand of French Dressing, was in itself, as good as a movie. I was interested to learn that previous to his screen career, Mr. Arnold served as expert salesman for a high-grade firm of food packers. And it speaks well for their particular brand of Pure Olive Oil, and Cider Vinegar, that no other brand is allowed in the Arnold salad bowl. (The brand name of the oil and vinegar used in making the salad pictured, will be sent upon receipt of a stamped, addressed envelope.)

Ethel, Edward Arnold's cook, prepares the vegetables first. The damp greens are packed in a tray and covered with ice cubes

If you want a salad which rates a course of its own, watch Mr. Arnold's methods, follow his recipe, and treat yourself to a fine dish.

FAVORITE FOOD OF A GREAT FAVORITE!

Edward Arnold's favorite dishes are Clam Chowder and Barbecued Pork Chops. Recipes for both are FREE for the asking to all readers who send a stamped, self-addressed envelope with their letters to Grace Ellis. Other recipes offered are:

GREEN SALAD
(Edward Arnold Style)

Select a variety of vegetables—radishes, cucumbers, endive, lettuce hearts, romaine, etc. Wash thoroughly. Drain on a towel. Peel and slice cucumbers, sprinkle with salt and place in a bowl with plenty of ice cubes. Make radishes into roses by slashing into tops so as to make thin narrow strips that will stand out, when chilled, like petals. Place radishes and greens in refrigerator tray, cover with ice cubes and stand in refrigerator until very cold and crisp.

Rub salad bowl with clove of garlic. Cut dry crisp greens on a towel into convenient pieces. Add greens, cucumbers and radishes to bowl. Sprinkle liberally with favorite French Dressing. Toss with salad fork and spoon to coat with dressing. Serve with crackers and Pineapple Cheese. And there you have a dish that is both nourishing and kind to your waistline!

Edward Arnold attacks the finished product. He eats a lot of it now to keep his weight down for his rôle in Sutter's Gold

● "Oo-hoo, Mother! Come right away—Sister's getting all fixed for a big cry. And you know how catching it is! If she cries, I'm going to, too—'cause she's my own twin and I feel so sorry!"

She is more considerate than she was before. She is a bigger person. Even a happier person, I think, because she has come through with flying colors.

"It seems to me the knowledge that one has found the courage to 'take it' the way that plucky girl has done must be consolation in itself. . . ."

Merle paused and watched the waves in their endless buffeting of the hard, grey sand.

She seemed to be considering something. Then—

"A man broke my heart—once," she said, quietly.

"And you're glad, now?"

"Yes, I am. I think I am a wiser, better girl because it happened. At least, I hope so. . . .

"He was married," she went on, "but I didn't know it. I was young, only seventeen, and I lived in a world of wonderful dreams for almost two months. He was older than I and to me—ardent, romantic soul that I was—he was perfect. Handsome, debonair, authoritative, sophisticated. How flattered I was that he had chosen me to love!

"Then, one day, someone told me he was married. . . ."

She stopped again, remembering, her eyes on the fog-furred horizon. Pain shadowed her lovely, thoughtful face.

"Disillusionment is always hard, and that was my first," she said. "I wanted to cry out to everyone that it wasn't fair! I wanted to throw myself at his feet and beg him to tell me it wasn't true! I wanted to do something tragic, desperate. . . .

"But—I didn't. Pride helped, perhaps, and perhaps some innate sense of fitness showed me that some things just aren't done. . . . Anyway, the days passed, somehow. I made myself go out with other men, though at first it was a sorry business. I was beginning to get somewhere in pictures and that helped. The pain of it all grew easier, slowly at first, but surely. And at last, I realized it was all over. I was happy again!

"YOU know, nature — God — whatever power made us, does that for us. . . . Just as a wound of the body heals, at last, so does a wound of heart and spirit—unless, in foolish cowardice, we keep probing it.

"Now, as I look back on those tragic days, I am glad they came—and passed. For with the healing of a broken heart comes a new self-respect, a new sense of power that only a battle won can give."

"You don't think disappointment in love fosters an inferiority complex, then?" I put the question tentatively.

"Decidedly not!" Merle's blue-green eyes flashed in displeasure. "At least, it shouldn't! This talk of an inferiority complex irritates me! The person who believes he or she has an inferiority complex is usually a person who is selfish and self-centered! An introvert. . . .

"Why should hurt from a man one loves suddenly make one think she is no longer attractive, worthy, desirable? That doesn't make sense! Every women has something beautiful and fine to give to the man she loves. Because one man has either changed his mind about her or fooled her needn't mean she is no longer worthy of love or desirable.

"You see," Merle went on, seriously, "I have never believed that in all of life there can be just one love for each of us and that to lose this is to lose all of love. I think such a theory is wrong. Nature is too wise, too canny, too interested in the perpetuation of life to have arranged things like that.

"Now don't misunderstand me. . . . I am not advocating myriad love affairs. The girl or man who flits from romance to romance loses something fine and thrilling. Where there is no depth in love, there can be no heights.

"I mean only that if you or I or anyone in love finds the man of our choice unworthy or that he no longer cares, or if we lose him in death, even, this does not mean that our lives are hopelessly, permanently blighted. I believe that if we throw up our chins and say: 'I shall not be beaten by this thing' that some day, some way, the hurt will be healed and we shall find new happiness."

TWILIGHT was coming in from the sea, by now, but Merle talked on, full of her theme.

"Yes," she said, "if I were giving advice to any young girl, I should say: 'Don't,' my dear, 'be afraid to love, and don't be afraid of the hurt that love can bring you.'

"I should say: 'You'll be hurt—yes. It is true that love makes you vulnerable; that the girl in love wears no armor against the wounds her beloved can deal her if he chooses.'

"I remember a line from Shakespeare—Hamlet, I think, that reads: 'Where little fears grow great, great love grows there.' And I think that is correct. To the girl wholly, deeply in love, 'little fears' do 'grow great.' She is so keenly sensitive that ordinarily inconsequential disturbances distress her. But even that state is finer, sweeter, than a superficial affection in a heart afraid to let go.

"You see, although the love you find may break your heart, the break can be mended. Time can mend it. Courage can mend it. And you can turn the intensity of your disappointment to character building.

"So—" Merle seemed, now, to be talking to a phantom girl who had come to her, seeking counsel, "don't be stingy with love. If you have chosen the right kind of man, he will care more for you because you care for him. It is only the wrong kind with whom you must play a game—with whom you must maintain an artificial attitude of semi-indifference because 'it is more feminine to do so.' Where love is real and fine, the more you give the more you have. And if, despite your sincerity, despite your wholehearted giving of yourself to the thrall of love, the man you have chosen fails you, he is not worthy, after all, and is better lost.

"Then, if you have courage—if you are the kind of a girl who can 'take it'—you will pick up the broken threads of your life and go on, gallantly, facing the future a finer, bigger person because you've had a broken heart. . . .

"So, don't be afraid, will you?"

Filming a Great Drama

THE Prisoner of Shark Island is not just an interesting and fascinating way of spending a couple of hours; it is a historic document crammed with irony and action as subtly terrifying as the stone bastions of the Fort itself. It seems, heaven forbid! that there were grafting politicians as well as Indians in the United States nearly a hundred years ago. They decided that an excellent way to spend money was to build a Fort on a useless coral key over a hundred miles away from the mainland of Florida, at a cost in excess of two hundred millions. The purpose? Why, of course! To bottle up the entire Gulf of Mexico! What with? Great cannon—whose maximum range in those days was less than a single mile. Naturally it was not long before the Fort was found to be the most appalling mistake in our history, so a much embarrassed War Department tried to justify its existence by making a military prison out of it.

And here it was that Doctor Mudd was sent to eke away his life, the most reviled of prisoners. Naturally, there is no water on a coral isle less than half a mile across. Water had to be brought in boats all the way from Florida or caught in cisterns during the short rainy season. . . . And, of course, the open cisterns soon became fouled . . . and the heat came down, day after remorseless day.

But even on a barren atoll, man brings with him his own evils, and the scorching sun burns away most of the good. A plague of mosquitoes and black flies came from nowhere and settled in slimy-walled cisterns and buzzed thence to men's eyes, ears and nostrils. A nice place to spend a few quiet days?

Had I been in Fort Jefferson I believe I would have welcomed even the horror of the plague that soon followed the mosquitoes—Yellow Jack. Anything would have been better than the unending monotony of heat and woolen uniforms, even death. And for those that survived, there was at least work to break the dull emptiness of existing.

IT WAS then that a prematurely old and broken man was called forth from his vermin-infested cell to treat the sick, to treat the very guards who had made his life a loathsome thing. Prisoner or no prisoner, Mudd was a doctor and they needed him and being a splendid man, he answered the call wholeheartedly. Mutiny broke out among the terrified black troops and at one time Mudd was in complete charge of the Fort—his prison.

During that violent siege by a then unknown disease it was impossible to get outside help. Even Government vessels laden with supplies refused to put in to the island when they saw the grim yellow flag flying from the staff. You'll see a stirring scene in this picture when Warner Baxter mounts the top gallery of the Fort whereon are mounted the huge columbiads. A supply ship is hove to a quarter mile up wind and signals that it is returning to Florida until the plague is over. Baxter uses every device at his disposal to get the stubborn captain to send in those vitally

Kidneys Must Purify Blood

To Bring Vitality, Clear Skin and Youthful Looks

Women Need Help More Often Than Men

The only way your body can clean out Acids and poisonous wastes from your blood, is through 9 million tiny, delicate Kidney tubes or filters. If, because of functional troubles, your Kidneys get tired or slow down in their work, these poisons remain in the system and make your eyes look dull and your skin coarse and dry, and at the same time you find yourself all Tired-Out, Nervous, and unable to keep up with the speed of modern life.

Functional Kidney troubles also may cause much more serious and disagreeable symptoms, such as Getting Up Nights, Leg Pains, Backache, Circles Under Eyes, Dizziness, Rheumatic Pains, Acidity, Burning, Smarting, and Itching.

Any Doctor can tell you that the speed of modern life and present day foods throw an extra heavy load on the Kidneys, and that most people need help from time to time if they are to feel their best and preserve their youthful appearance. Fortunately, for sufferers, it is easy to help functional Kidney Troubles with the Doctor's guaranteed prescription Cystex, which now is available at all drug stores under a positive guarantee to satisfy completely or cost nothing.

Doctors Praise Cystex

Dr. T. J. Rastelli

Doctor T. J. Rastelli, famous Doctor, Surgeon, and Scientist, of London, says: "Cystex is one of the finest remedies I have ever known in my medical practice. Any Doctor will recommend it for its definite benefit in the treatment of many functional Kidney and Bladder disorders. It is safe and harmless." And Dr. C. Z. Rendelle, another widely known Physician and Medical Examiner, of San Francisco, recently said: "Since the Kidneys purify the blood, the poisons collect in these organs and must be promptly flushed from the system, otherwise they re-enter the blood stream and create a toxic condition. I can truthfully recommend the use of Cystex."

World-Wide Success

Cystex is not an experiment, but is a proven success in 31 different countries throughout the world. It is prepared with scientific accuracy in accordance with the strict and rigid standards of the United States Dispensatory and the United States Pharmacopoeia, and being designed especially to act in the Kidneys and Bladder is swift and safe in action. Most users report a remarkable improvement in 48 hours and complete satisfaction in 8 days.

Guaranteed To Work

Because of its unusual success, Cystex is offered under an unlimited guarantee to do the work to your complete satisfaction in 8 days, or money back on return of empty package. Under this unlimited guarantee you can put Cystex to the test and see exactly what it can do in your particular case. You must feel younger, stronger, and better than you have in a long time—you must feel that Cystex has done the work to your complete satisfaction or you merely return the empty package and it costs you nothing. You are the sole judge of your own satisfaction. Cystex costs only 3c a dose at druggists, and as the guarantee protects you fully, you should not take chances with cheap, inferior, or irritating drugs, or delay. Ask your druggist for guaranteed Cystex (pronounced Siss-Tex) today.

needed medical supplies, fresh food and water, but the sailors are adamant in their fear of contamination. As the boat prepares to sail away with its precious cargo, the peace-loving Doctor is driven to desperation and orders the Fort's gunners to fire on the ship.

Cowed by the blast of heavy shot, the captain compromises by placing the stores aboard a raft to drift in to shore.

You'll see another scene that you'll be a long time in forgetting, when Warner Baxter and an old, faithful negro servant who had purposely joined the Fort Jefferson garrison, attempt to escape. Gloria Stuart, as Mudd's wife, pawns everything she owns to finance a sloop and make the plans for the jail break. But Rankin, the remorseless sergeant of the guard, surprises them in their effort to leave the Fort. Buck is killed, but Mudd is too valuable a man to shoot offhand. The guard is instructed to maim him. Despite their efforts Mudd reaches the deep moat between the fort and the sea-wall—and the sloop is in sight, a small boat already on its way to pick him up.

To his horror Mudd sees that the moat is filled with half-starved sharks, prisoners like himself, but there for the sole purpose as guards. Despite the sight of them, he dives in, the soldiers shooting at him, still trying to maim rather than kill, until Rankin sees that their own bullets are actually helping Mudd by driving the sharks away. With cruel forethought he gives the order to cease firing. But despite the bullets and sharks, Mudd reaches the sloop only to have it shot out from under him by the Fort's batteries.

There is no question at all that a new Warner Baxter will be seen on the screen in 1936. No longer will he be the shallow, swashbuckling Cisco Kid, nor will he be clad in a silver ornamented sombrero. Baxter is stepping out as an actor and proving himself far more versatile than I, for one, would have credited. As the mild but courageous Doctor whose name became a part of the language typifying the worst possible breaks, Baxter gives a deep, keen performance.

But Warner, Harry Carey, the Fort's commandant, and a new portrayer of psychopathic rôles by the name of Carradine, have a background to work against that is the finest tribute to both director and art department that I've seen in many a moon. They've not just rebuilt the brick and mortar of a forgotten fort in Hollywood—they've built into that masonry the horrid ghosts that keen their shrill wails across the glittering tropic waters to a neighboring sandy spit named Dead Man's Cave, where sun-bleached skeletons of the soldiers still lay.

And that, thank God, is all that is left of the accursed abode of The Prisoner of Shark Island.

CURIOUS FACTS

Did you know that the Dionne quintuplets, appearing in The Country Doctor, were paid over $450 per minute for the time they spent before the camera? And that this isn't too much, considering the fact that these five famous babes are directly responsible for bringing more than $3,000,000 in tourist trade to Canada?

The Unknown Side of Ronald Colman

usually he is found out and his fun spoiled.

He often has said, "I wish I could take my face off and leave it at home then maybe I could see the world as others are privileged to see it."

Another favorite way of traveling is by tramp steamer. For days, weeks, maybe months, he'll hang around the docks and watch the tramp steamers come and go. When he finds a crew that he likes, bent on a cruise that appeals to his fancy, he's off on a trip without any of the usual fuss. A year ago he went all the way around the world on a tramp steamer. He met Richard Barthelmess in Shanghai and they traveled up the Yangtze River into the interior of warring China.

It was on that world cruise that he declares he had a "dirty trick" pulled on him. He was tired from his travels and decided to rest up a day or so at a good hotel. He checked in, had a nice hot bath, ordered his dinner sent up and then lay down to read. The dinner did not arrive. He waited and waited—then finally the manager called his room and asked, "Mr. Colman, aren't you coming down to your dinner?" Colman, ever polite, explained that he had no intentions of coming down to the dining room, that his dinner was to be served in his own room.

The manager finally confessed. He had advertised, upon short notice, that Ronald Colman was a guest at his hotel and that all who wished to see him might do so by attending the "dinner reception" at his hotel at two dollars a plate.

"They are all impatiently waiting to receive you. Mr. Colman, you cannot disappoint them."

Colman knew he had been tricked but he also knew that the manager was right, he simply could not disappoint several hundred people who were the innocent victims of the trick.

He dressed and went down to dinner. He made a gracious speech of gratitude and autographed menus until his arm ached. He chatted and talked and laughed and answered a thousand questions. He bade them all a pleasant goodnight. Then he went back to his room, packed and left the hotel immediately.

Had the manager given him the dinner as a friendly gesture, Colman would have appreciated it even though he does not care for such public display.

How can he be such a perfect lover on the screen when apparently, judging from his private life, he doesn't like women?

Nothing could be farther from the truth. Ronald Colman almost worships women. His attitude toward them is very old-fashioned—mid-Victorian. They are the rare flowers that perfume and beautify the earth and must be treated as such. All his gallantry of the screen, he carries out in private life. Whenever he is in the presence of a lady, that lady has all of his attention. He is extremely solicitous of her welfare. He caters to her whims and fancies and delights in so doing.

His men friends may tell him that in this day and age women are quite capable of looking after themselves and their reward for such explanation is a blank stare from the gallant Colman.

Always and ever—the beau ideal!

A beauty bath like unbelievable magic!

The whole world is diligently striving to educate women to develop greater personal charm and beauty — and the now recognized outstanding beauty secret is the Linit Bath, for its results are immediate, and it is amazingly economical.

Just imagine stepping out of your bath and after drying, finding that your skin is soft and satiny smooth as a rose petal.

Prove to yourself this claim made for the Linit Bath, by making this simple test on your hands. Dissolve some Linit in your basin water, wash your hands as usual and, after drying, feel your skin. It will be soft and smooth as the rarest old velvet. This is also the immediate result obtained when Linit is used in your tub water, for the Linit Bath accomplishes the same thing for the entire body.

And remember, the Linit Beauty Bath does away with the damp or semi-dry feeling of the skin that usually follows an ordinary bath. Linit leaves on the skin an exceedingly fine porous coating of powder which absorbs perspiration without clogging the pores, makes dusting with bath talcum unnecessary and imparts to the body an exquisite sense of personal daintiness.

Don't overlook the directions on the Linit package—recommending Linit for starching. Linit makes even ordinary cotton fabrics look and feel like linen.

freedom of motion, especially close to the camera. All on account of that little problem of lighting.

"And timing—that's another important thing. You see some poor straight lead come into a room, sit down on a divan, light a cigarette, and say to his wife, 'Darling, I've had a difficult day. I think I'll go to bed early'—and you think to yourself, 'So they call that guy an actor!' What you don't realize is that he has done a perfect bit of timing. He sits down on the divan, takes a tin of cigarettes from a side table. He opens it, takes out a cigarette. 'Darling,' he says—and closes the tin. It makes a little click, but that click comes between 'darling' and 'I've had a difficult day.' He lights the cigarette and finishes, 'I think I'll go to bed early.' The scratch of his match, or the sputter of his lighter, comes between his first remark and his second.

The microphone catches only one thing at a time and everything he says is crystal-clear—because he watches his timing.

"And, incidentally, he remembers to hold his head up and light his cigarette up in the air, so that the camera angles are correct. Normally, he might light it down by his chest—but the camera won't let him do that. I've seen stage actors go to pieces, having to remember all those things at once for a movie scene. But those things make life interesting in Hollywood."

CARY has had this enthusiasm for acting for a long time—ever since his boyhood days in Bristol, England. It all started with his "hanging around" the local theater, fooling with the electrical equipment.

"I got chummy with the actors, liked them and the life they led, and one day they gave me a 'bit' to do in a play. When they moved on to another town, I went with them. I forgot to tell my father I was going—and it took him about two weeks to locate me. He brought me home and was going to make me go back to school, but I talked him out of it after a while and rejoined the troupe. . . .

"Finally I came to America, with a troupe of pantomimists. You've probably never seen any; they're strange to America—as we soon discovered. But I stayed when the others went home. I practically starved, it being my luck to be in one stage 'flop' after another. That's how I happened to go into musical comedy. I discovered that if a musical comedy were put on, it usually stayed on a while. That's where the movies found me. And I'm still glad they did."

If there is any possibility of a Mrs. Grant soon sharing that seaside abode with him, he is not admitting it. And he is inclined to be non-committal about what the eventual lady of his choice may be like. He says: "Will she be an actress? Not necessarily—but preferably. I'd like her to know what my work is all about and be able to criticize it. She won't have the peacock kind of poise. She'll be natural. Athletic, maybe—I don't demand it. I do a lot of boxing, but I don't intend to box with my wife. She will be as willing to travel second-class as first—and she'll like my flivver or walk. She won't have to know how to cook. She can learn cookery later, if necessary."

And here is one actor from the stage who does not bemoan the fact that Hollywood talks about little but movies, movies, movies.

"Why shouldn't it talk about movies?" Cary asks, reasonably. "What's wrong with that? When you're in a hospital, what kind of talk do you hear? Hospital talk. When you're in a group of writers, what do you hear? Writing talk. Firemen talk about fires, business men talk about business, wives talk about husbands—so why shouldn't actors and actresses talk about acting?

"It's not egotism breaking out. Very few are ever pleased with themselves. They're all trying to improve—and they're trading ideas on how to do it."

What do you think of Cary Grant—reformed Romeo?

Stardom for the Quints!

Peterson, attired in crisp white sterilized uniform seemed to be just another of their nurses. There is a question as to which one will steal the show. Marie, who was still crawling when the picture was shot, may be outstanding for that very reason, and too, perhaps, because she seems to be the one to whom the others look as a leader.

A few of the picture highlights show how naturally the babies acted and the fact that at no time were they "tricked" into being cute. During a scene in which the five were eating, Yvonne displayed a bit of temper, shouting lustily and banging her chair with a spoon. As the cameras continued to grind, Hersholt turned to Yvonne and said, "Now lady, behave yourself." Immediately Yvonne ceased her wailing and laughed as though she had played a good joke on the actor-doctor.

DOROTHY PETERSON, who has the leading feminine rôle in The Country Doctor, if you don't count the babies themselves, admits that she has never had a more wonderful experience. "I miss those babies," she said recently during the shooting of other scenes which took place in Hollywood Studio. "I love them. Marie is the tiniest. Yvonne is the largest and a regular little adventurer. Cecile smiles the most and Annette is the most mischievous. Emilie is serious as can be, but every bit as darling as her sisters."

It is Dr. Dafoe himself who sets at rest any fears that picture-acting may have arrested the healthy progress of the quintuplets in the important business of growing up. He expressed entire satisfaction with the work of the film company and about the babies says, "They have all shown weight gains and distinct general improvement. They have also gained financially and, although I saw my only movie, Sunshine Susie, several years ago and therefore may not be a good judge, I am sure the quintuplets have performed admirably for their director, Mr. Henry King, and will not disappoint their admirers."

The only accident to occur during the entire picture took place after a morning's work was over. Jean Hersholt, an amateur camera enthusiast, took his camera to North Bay to shoot some snow scenes. He slipped on the ice, fell into a culvert and had to stay away from work for two days.

Audiences who see The Country Doctor may be assured that here, for the first time, are movie stars who have never been voice-tested. Their voices, however, are not disguised by microphone tricks and sound exactly as they did when their "da-da-da's" were uttered.

Perhaps at a later date the quintuplets may make another movie, in which they will actually speak, but that will not be for a long time. The reason is that they are learning to speak French first, it being the language used by their mother. English will come later, and Hollywood will simply have to wait until they learn their A B C's.

COME TO OUR
Hollywood Party

YOU'VE always wanted to see Hollywood, and here's the chance of a lifetime! Plan now to join the second Annual Movieland Tour for the most thrilling vacation trip that can be imagined!

You read about last year's trip in the movie magazines. How the entire party was entertained at a big cocktail party at the home of Raquel Torres . . . dancing at Cocoanut Grove . . . visited Universal studios and saw sound sets in action . . . met Irene Dunne on the set where she was filming "Magnificent Obsession."

The tours this year will be even more thrilling. Plans are under way for parties at the homes of Movieland's most famous stars. Parties at the Ambassador's Cocoanut Grove . . . in the Blossom Room of the Hollywood Roosevelt . . . dinner and entertainment with the stars at the famous Brass Rail . . . visits to the homes of movie folks in Beverly Hills. The gates of 20th Century-Fox and Universal studios will be thrown open, you'll see pictures in the process of "shooting."

This is the kind of vacation money alone could never buy. Fawcett Movie Magazines, sponsoring these Tours, make it possible for you to see and do things no ordinary traveler could hope for. Sightseeing jaunts on the way West will show us some of the most gorgeous scenery America has to offer. We'll travel in luxurious style on private trains. Parties strictly limited to 200 persons—just one big happy houseparty. And the entire two weeks' trip costs very little. You pay a flat sum which includes everything—transportation, meals, hotels, entertainment; all details of travel looked after for you.

Jean Parker's Private Diary

again. She danced with him. She thought he danced divinely.

When she walked onto the gangplank of the boat, there he stood, arms filled with roses. His grin told her—he wasn't a gangster. She'd get even! So she ran up and kissed him in front of the crowd. Then she learned he was the editor of a big New York newspaper, whom producer Cohn had asked to give one more thrill to Hollywood's youngster, visiting for the first time, the world's largest city.

I WISH there were space to give you her diary from shipboard. She explored the engine-rooms; the kitchens. One midnight, she felt hungry and decided on a "hot-dog." She discovered an English waiter on an English steamer had never heard of that American delicacy. It took her thirty minutes to explain; she finally drew a picture. The fun she had helping comedian Eugene Pallette award the prizes for the ship's games! She was so atingle she finally locked herself in her room for a whole day to write and read and think. "I needed to be alone to understand how so many wonderful things could happen!"

July 11th: "Rather sad, somehow, that this is our last night. I walked a long time on deck as I stood on the stern, drenched in both fog and moonlight. I had a strange experience. The sea was calm and where the ship cut through formed itself into a huge mound of black jelly, with a great swirl of white lace at the side. The horns, as always, were weird. All this disturbed quiet memories, making me feel quite individual in my gloom."

The quiet memories—which are not so quiet—were of Pancho, the girlhood friend whom Jean adored throughout high school and her first years in pictures. Last spring, they separated. Jean was too young to marry. To spoil her career at eighteen? Jean didn't understand; Pancho did. When "they" explained to him, he just slipped out of her life, as any gentleman would in a fairy story. But the records in her diary show she has not forgotten.

July 12th: "Our arrival at Southampton. We passed through the whole British fleet—the King's review of the fleet being just two days away. We whizzed through the beautiful English countryside on a funny little train. It is like coming upon a great treasure—my adored, fat, chalk cottages with barns to match. And London! It is a great sea of twinkly chimney pots and church spires. It is vast but doesn't impress one as being so. I just learned, this minute, I'm to play in Robert Sherwood's The Glourie Ghost (screen title: The Ghost Goes West) opposite my only favorite actor, Robert Donat. This is the last I ever expected!"

July 17th: "The London Tower! I shall never forget this as long as I live. It was bleak and rainy outside, intensifying the gloom of the Tower. I tingled as I walked through those dim corridors and dungeons—it had a peculiar odor—and I deeply resented people being there—even ravens lurked around the beheading blocks."

July 21st: "Spent the day with John Bentjeman, a frightfully nice film critic with a glorious sense of humor, and his wife, Penelope, on their little English farm at Uffington. Had great fun touring the lovely neighboring country by horse and buggy. How lovely the English twilight is with the church chimes and the sweet scent of flowers. I made a wish on the eye of the white Roman horse on the hill—went to evening services at Uffington. I ogled the little choir boys and quite unintentionally disrupted the usual service."

July 22nd: "Today, I met Mr. Robert Donat out at the beautiful location spot, Denham village. I have a feeling he was as shy as I was!"

August 2nd: "Since tomorrow is an English Bank holiday, I do not work so I went out, all grand, to see The Ballet Russe. I cannot conceive such perfection and was so thrilled I actually wept through part of it. I promised myself this night that I shall study dancing when I return because I feel I shall never be happy until I at least try."

JEAN'S first ambition was to become a dancer. She refused to go into pictures for many weeks because she wanted to become a great dancer, or artist, rather than an actress!

August 3rd and 4th: "Here I am in Paris! Jessie and I decided on the spur of the moment to fly here this morning. I awakened to the most beautiful church chimes—went to Versailles. It was truly magnificent but somehow made me feel quite sad. I do wish Paris had a king. How glorious and alive it must have been when there was a king at Versailles. I rather wish I hadn't seen it in its loneliness. At tea, the Prince of Wales was seated at the table nearest us. I like him lots. He seems very modest and unassuming."

August 7th: "Today I began my scenes with Mr. Donat. I didn't dream I should play opposite him quite so soon. I'm glad today is over—what an awful time I had. I've never been so shy and awkward—feeling much like a small child. In my efforts to conceal this, I managed to say always the wrong thing—else I was tongue-tied—even to forgetting my lines! He's very genuine—has a marvellous sense of humor and is everything I imagined him to be."

August 10th: "Today was too lovely! At tea time, I was gorgeously surprised (on the set) with a lovely English birthday cake—all white with tiny, lighted candles on top! Rene Clair, my beloved director, presented it to me with a kiss on each cheek. Also great armfuls of red roses! Well, ever since I began working with Mr. Clair, I've been struck dumb with hero worship and I'm afraid his thoughtfulness and kindness were too much for me—I nearly put the little candles out with my joy-tears."

August 11th: "Sunday. My nineteenth birthday. I humbly begin another chapter of my eventful life. Thus far, I have learned three invaluable things. First, and most essential to happiness, 'The Golden Rule.' Secondly, that 'people judge you by your own valuation,' and third, my text that I learned from my dear friend, Constance Collier—this

I keep in my heart always." (She refuses to tell anybody!)

"Tonight, my heart is overflowing and I guess I feel a bit philosophical. What wonderful things you can command if you try to be devotedly sincere and honest . . . We went to Sokes Poges, where Sir Thomas Gray wrote his beautiful Elegy Within A Country Churchyard. I sat for a long time under the very old Yew tree where it was created. We also went to Chalfont St. Ailes and thrilled at Milton's Cottage, where he wrote the greater part of Paradise Lost. It seems incredible that he sold his first copy for ten pounds (fifty dollars)."

August 21st: "Today, I saw a great many of the cut rushes from the picture —I'd never in my life been so heartsick and disappointed. I know I have never yet been pleased with anything I've done on the screen but it's maddening to sit there looking at the person who is myself—absolutely myself. I think I shall never, never get over the awful embarrassment of those brazen close-ups. I don't really know what I expected—I'm well aware I'm not beautiful or even pretty—but that truly doesn't bother me because I learned long ago that sincerity is far more important—but something shrivels inside me when I realize I am what I create on the screen and all eyes can see the creator. I've never felt this way before but I've never played a straight part before and probably will never get a chance to play another. A straight lead has me licked!"

August 22nd: "I feel a bit sheepish about what I wrote last night. I went on the set this morning determined to forget about myself. Just before lunch, Mr. Donat and I were rehearsing a rather amusing scene when I felt someone looking at me and turned around to find Ruth Biery—I can't describe how grand it was to see a familiar face—and one who believes in me as no one ever did. I got a terrible scolding from her for being a bit discouraged. She told me Mr. Clair and Mr. Donat are well pleased with my work. I was so happy I wanted to cry so I did—I'm afraid the new studio, the new country and actually working with people I've admired so long has been almost too great a strain —but watch me now! Ruth reminded me she knew me when nothing mattered —of how happy I was in just preparing myself and dreaming of the wonderful things I hoped to achieve. This has done something to me inside."

AND I had to promise to leave this in her diary before she would let me copy it, the day before I sailed. I wish I could give it all to you but there is not space. I will tell you, however, I am going to keep it always for, you see, I did know little Jean when she was just little Mae Green, a high school youngster. And she didn't pay attention to things around her, then. She would stand behind great piles of dirty dishes, automatically washing and wiping, while she looked through the window at the sun-tipped California mountains and dream of the day when she would be a great dancer or a great painter and travel to Europe. She forgot dishes; she forgot she was working her way through school; she forgot she had only a couple of dresses. She was the little dream-girl, so much like a Cinderella that you just knew she would be whisked out of that kitchen and away to love, excitement, romance, success—and Europe!

Do you know anybody who deserves this tag?

MEN avoid her. Girls refuse to bother with her.

"A careless, untidy person who is unpleasant to be with"—that's the way they think of the girl who carries the ugly odor of underarm perspiration on her person and clothing.

Too bad. For she misses so many good times. Her real friends would like to tell her what the trouble is, but after all, they feel, the girl of today should be alert to the danger of underarm odor in herself.

She should know that the underarms need special daily care. Soap and water alone are not enough.

And the modern girl knows the quick, easy way to give this care. Mum!

Half a minute, when you're dressing, is all you need to use Mum. Or use it after dressing, any time. For Mum is harmless to clothing.

It's soothing to the skin, too. You can use it right after shaving the underarms.

And you should know this—that Mum prevents every trace of perspiration odor without affecting perspiration itself.

Don't label yourself as "the girl who needs Mum." Use it regularly every day and you'll be safe! Bristol-Myers, Inc., 630 Fifth Ave., New York.

MUM

USE MUM ON SANITARY NAPKINS, TOO and you'll never have a moment's worry about this source of unpleasantness.

Cashmere Bouquet Toilet Soap faintly scents and cleanses your skin

Colonial Dames All-purpose Cream contains 2,000 units of Vitamin D

Above: For applying lotions and powder, use convenient Couettes made by Johnson and Johnson

Below: Campana's Dreskin invigorates the skin

Above: Rose and white is the color scheme of Lady Esther's attractive rouges and lip-sticks

Don't use soap and water alone or cleansing cream alone. Use both! First apply a penetrating liquefying cream that spreads quickly and easily, rubbing it on the skin lightly with an upward-outward motion, allow it to remain on for a minute and then remove it with tissues. It is especially important that you use disposable tissues rather than used towels, when you have an oily skin, for this type of skin is generally susceptible to infection from contact with grime.

In cleansing your skin with soap and water, be sure that the soap is bland and pure and that the water is as soft (non-alkaline) as possible and quite warm. The action of the soap and warm water will remove all vestiges of cream from the skin as well as traces of natural oil and grime.

You'll find a complexion brush a real aid, especially if your oily skin has, as most of them do, a tendency toward large pores and blackheads. A brush with stiff bristles could definitely harm the texture of even a thick epidermis; but there are several excellent complexion brushes on the market with flexible bristles that afford a beneficial "massage." After you have scrubbed your face thoroughly, rinse it, first in warm, then cool, then cold water, to close the pores gradually. Then to check facial oil, apply an astringent or skin tonic liberally, using a piece of cotton to smooth it on evenly. Let this liquid dry on the skin, to increase its effectiveness, then use a powder base. A liquid powder or cake powder is considered more suitable for an oily skin than a heavy cream, which might add to the oiliness.

Apply your powder next, using a medium weight. Formerly it was the fashion to use extremely heavy powders on an oily skin, to absorb the natural oil as it poured out on the skin surface. But this practice is frowned on now, because it was found that very heavy powder had a tendency to clog the pores. Don't use too much face powder, either, if your skin is oily.

Dry rouge comes next. After—not before—your powder base and rouge. It should be fine-grained and easy to blend.

On page 44, Miss Burgess is illustrating a beauty practice that is a real aid toward keeping your skin clear and fresh. She's using a liquid cleanser and invigorator as a quick clean-up. Recommended for the office, especially, where you can't resort to cream and soap and water.

Even though your skin is oily, you need a good tissue or lubricating cream, particularly around the eyes, where lines are apt to form unless you ward them off with a nightly application of a rich cream or oil. Pat the cream in gently around the eyes, forehead, mouth and throat, leave it on for a few minutes and then remove with tissues.

Most of the corrective preparations for oily skin mentioned in the foregoing routine are represented in the group of photos shown here. For instance, there is a pure, bland soap—Colgate's Cashmere Bouquet—formerly in the twenty-five class, now reduced to ten cents a cake. Cashmere Bouquet comes wrapped first in a layer of oiled paper, then a cardboard carton, and finally the attractive outer cover of glazed paper you see in the photo. All this—so that the soap will retain its enchanting fragrance (a blend of seventeen scents) after it reaches your bath room.

In the second photo you see a box of Johnson & Johnson Couettes—squares of cotton, cut and packed conveniently for dressing table use. There are four dozen pads in this pretty pink and blue carton which sells for only ten cents. Couettes have a dozen uses—as powder puffs, for applying all types of lotions, for removing creams (moisten Couettes for this task), for manicuring, for blending powder and rouge smoothly, for removing excess eye make-up.

If you are searching for a three-purpose liquid—one to act as an astringent, a stimulant and a cleanser—you should try Campana's Dreskin. This pale green liquid in its simple green and white container, does all these things with finesse. Dreskin feels so refreshing and exhilarating on the skin that it would be a treat to use it, even if it didn't perform all those services for your complexion!

In December I gave you a partial picture of the new Lady Esther Rouges and Lipsticks—but here I have an entire set assembled. Reading from left to right in the photo are: the fifty-five cent lipstick and rouge compact, the twenty cent and the ten cent. With the exception of the 10 cent rouge compact, which is gold metal, all of these new Lady Esther containers are done in rose and white enamel, to harmonize with the rose and white jars of cream.

That is Colonial Dames All-Purpose Cream in the fifth photo—the jar, a pretty rose, black and white affair, with an official looking stamp pasted on it. The stamp tells you that the cream is irradiated with 2,000 units of certified Vitamin D. Because Vitamin D is the "Sunshine Vitamin" and of recognized value in skin care, these 2,000 certified units are not to be taken lightly! This combination cleanser and tissue cream is made with almond oil and has a faint, creamy tint. It is quick-melting and penetrating and extremely pleasant to use. The price is $1 a jar.

I must tell you about another Colonial Dames preparation which I am most enthusiastic about . . . It's a powder base called Colonial Dames Beautifier. And honestly named, for it gives your skin a smooth smartly-dull finish that is lovely. It's grand for anyone with oily skin that persists in shining through face powder. I've tested this Beautifier on several people, and they all report that it keeps their skin freshly made up even after six or eight hours of partying! It is a sort of cake powder and to use it, you moisten a small sponge, rub it across the surface of the beautifier and then smooth this amount on the skin. It's so easy to do. Scarcely streaks at all as you apply it, and when it does, you can blot out the streak with cleansing tissues before it dries. Besides giving your skin a mat-like foundation for powder, it also has pleasant mild astringent properties. It, too, costs $1.

DOCTORS NOW KNOW THOUSANDS NEEDN'T BE SKINNY

THOUSANDS GAIN 10 TO 25 LBS. QUICK—WITH NEW 3-WAY TREATMENT

AMAZING gains in weight are reported all over the country with this sensational new 3-way discovery. Even if you never could gain an ounce before, remember thousands have put on solid, naturally attractive flesh this new, easy way—in just a few weeks!

And not only has this new triple-acting treatment brought normal, good-looking pounds, but also naturally clear skin, freedom from indigestion and constipation, glorious new pep.

New body-building discovery

Scientists recently discovered that thousands of people are thin and rundown for the single reason that they do not get enough digestion-strengthening Vitamin B and blood-enriching iron in their daily food. Now the richest known source of body-building Vitamin B is cultured ale yeast. By a new process the finest imported cultured ale yeast is now concentrated 7 times, making it 7 times more powerful. Then it is combined with 3 kinds of blood-building iron in pleasant little tablets known as Ironized Yeast tablets.

If you, too, need these vital elements to build you up, get these new triple-acting Ironized Yeast tablets from your druggist today. Then, day after day as you take them, watch flat chest develop and skinny limbs round out to natural attractiveness. Constipation and indigestion from the same cause vanish, skin clears to normal beauty, new health comes—you're a new person.

Try it—guaranteed

No matter how skinny and rundown you may be from lack of sufficient Vitamin B and iron, these new 3-way Ironized Yeast tablets should build you up in just a few weeks, as they have thousands of others. If not delighted with the benefits of the very first package, your money instantly refunded.

Only don't be deceived by the many cheaply prepared "Yeast and Iron" tablets sold in imitation of Ironized Yeast. These cheap counterfeits usually contain only the lowest grade of ordinary yeast and iron, and cannot possibly give the same results. Be sure you get the genuine Ironized Yeast. Look for "IY" stamped on each tablet.

Special FREE offer!

To start you building up your health right away, we make this absolutely FREE offer. Purchase a package of Ironized Yeast tablets at once, cut out the seal on the box and mail it to us with a clipping of this paragraph. We will send you a fascinating new book on health, "New Facts About Your Body." Remember, results guaranteed with the very first package—or money refunded. At all druggists. Behind the Mystery of Myrna Loy

Spencer Tracy, working with her in Whipsaw, couldn't at first figure her out. He'd just come from the Riffraff set, where he and Jean Harlow had spent their leisure moments making life merry for themselves and the rest of the gang. Here was a girl who finished her scene and retired into a corner to study her script. There must be something wrong with one of them. For a day or two he prowled about, bewildered. Then he marched himself to the aforesaid corner. "What's the matter with me?" he demanded. "Have I got leprosy or something?"

She smiled. "I've been wondering when you were going to come over and pay me a little attention."

THAT was all Tracy needed. Twenty-four hours later they were on ribbing terms. "He'd keep contrasting me with Jean," explained Miss Loy, laughter bubbling in her voice, "telling me what fun he'd had with her, what a good sport she was and what a prima donna I was. And about twenty times a day he'd remind me of Jean's victrola and how it cheered them up to have music provided on the set. So in self-defense I finally took the hint."

A glimpse of the child, Myrna Williams, who without changing in essentials grew into Myrna Loy, the actress, will perhaps explain her more clearly than anything else. She was born on a Montana ranch, of a gay, generous-hearted father and a mother who gave up for love what might been a brilliant musical career. They were people of means and intelligence and culture and, more important, they were happy people. If Myrna learned to live within herself, it was due neither to repressions nor complexes, but because she had no playmates of her own age and because a naturally fertile imagination was stimulated and satisfied by the beauty surrounding her.

Alone, or with a dog at her heels, she rode bareback among the mountain ranges under the scudding clouds, peopling the world with creatures of her own fancy and feeling the need of no other companionship. "I liked having friends nobody else could see," she said with the smile that lingers in her eyes even when it barely touches her lips. "Maybe that's the Welsh and Swedish in me. You know how they believe in the other world. Even now that I'm grown up, if someone were to tell me that the little people were around, I shouldn't doubt it." She was laughing at herself, yet she meant what she said in the way that any poet or dreamer might mean it.

As nature fed her imagination by day, music fed it by night when, in her father's arms, she would listen entranced to her mother's playing. "That," she explained, "was when I passed through the usual martyr or self-sacrifice period, deciding I'd be a nun or a nurse and spend my life doing good to others. Then I started studying dancing and grew so violently attached to the theater that I didn't really see how I could bear to be anything but an actress. I was dreadfully ashamed of myself. It wasn't nearly so noble as being a nurse, but it was attractive. Well, the world and the flesh won out, but it took me a long time to reconcile myself to the idea that I wasn't going to be noble."

Her brother was born when she was six, and the following winter was spent at La Jolla, memorable to Myrna because it gave her her first overwhelming glimpse of the sea which she learned to love as dearly as her native hills. Characteristically, the solitary child found a companion, not among other children, but in an old man who owned an aquarium and took her with him on his expeditions in search of specimens.

"He'd hold my hand," she recalls, "and lead me down what seemed hundreds of steps, and in the little coves below, we'd catch lobsters and eels and gather all kinds of sea weeds. He'd teach me their scientific names—I loved the sound of them—and then we'd hunt for polished shells, which he'd string into necklaces and bracelets for me. It was pretty exciting, because the tide would come pounding back at four, and I think I realized the danger, though it never occurred to me to be frightened.

"A few years later," she went on, a new kind of stillness creeping into her always quiet voice, "this happy family was plunged into darkness."

THE flu epidemic struck Helena as it struck the rest of the world. Her mother and brother came down with it first. They were getting better when Myrna awoke one night to find that she wasn't in bed where she belonged. Running a high fever, she had been walking in her sleep, and her only memory of the days that followed was of her father sitting constantly at her bedside. In Helena, as elsewhere, there weren't enough nurses to go round. So Mr. Williams took care of his daughter, relieved only by a visiting nurse who ran in at night to pack her in ice.

The crisis came and passed, and hardly had they begun to rejoice in her recovery when her father was taken ill—or rather, went to bed, since he'd been ill for days but hadn't had time to do anything about it. By that time the disease had made tragic inroads. To the sensitive child who idolized him, the house with its freight of doom became unbearable, and those who watched her stealing about with white, strained face and dread-haunted eyes sent her in pity to stay at the home of friends.

On the third day, as she wandered, a forlorn little ghost, from room to room, something happened. What she couldn't tell. "Only everything stopped, and I knew that my father was dead." Not knowing how she'd got there, she found herself in the storeroom. "Why don't I go down and ask somebody to phone?" she wondered vaguely. Then the phone rang, restoring her to conscious thought. Hoping against hope that it wasn't true, she went down to her friends. But it was true.

In a sense, her childhood ended there—with her first poignant knowledge of grief, her first burden of responsibility. Her mother, who'd never in all her life had anything to worry about, rose gallantly to the situation. But Myrna kept locked in her memory a message her father had sent her before he died. "I expect you to carry on." To her that meant one thing—she must take care of her mother and little brother.

Paul Lukas, one of the strongest men in Hollywood, can lift a man sitting in a chair from the floor to a table with one arm! . . . Stunt men in Hollywood are paid $50 for a fall down one flight of stairs, with $35 for each additional flight—imagine what the stunt man for Groucho Marx received in A Night at the Opera when he rolled down that circular staircase. . . . Three years ago not one movie-goer would pay a dime to see a child actress by the name of Shirley Temple. Now her films earn as much as $30,000 a week in large theaters. . . . If Will Rogers had not turned down the part later played by Wallace Beery in Ah Wilderness, he might be alive today. The picture started shooting just as he left on his fatal air hop to Alaska.

She accepted the charge literally. Through the days and years that followed, it formed the backbone of her purpose. Unable to stand the house of their happiness, they sold it and moved to California. Enough money had been left for Myrna's education. Her mother was determined she should have that, and sent her to a private school. When the authorities learned that she intended to dance or act for a living, eyebrows went up. "My dear—ladies don't do these things—it wouldn't look well for the school."

She had her mother's courage and her father's humor and the stamina of her pioneer forebears and they helped her through minor triumphs and major defeats; through the grueling drudgery of chorus dancing; through the sight of her first test, made by Valentino and Natacha Rambova, which was to have unbarred the gates of paradise but succeeded only in reducing the testee to floods of tears. "Because," she assured me solemnly, "you've rarely seen anything like it outside a Keystone comedy."

BUT the Valentino test, of which she'd been so ashamed, brought her a bit and eventually a contract and started her on that long series of rôles which popularized the indoor sport called American into Half-Caste. "Have you seen that Chinese girl, Myrna Loy?" "Oh, she's only half Chinese. Her mother's white." "Pardon me, I know for a fact that she comes straight from Siam and doesn't know a word of English."

"But there were always the smart ones," laughed the girl from Siam, "who wrote me to drop my fake pidgin English in the lake, and 'who did I think I was fooling anyway?'"

As a melodramatic menace, she had her following—mostly lukewarm. As a lady of rare charm and distinction, wise and witty and warmhearted—the kind of lady Nick Charles adored—she's brought a goodly share of the world's population to her feet. And she's done it fairly.

GRAND PRIZE LETTER

By M. Dewey Doan

WHO gives the best performance in Top Hat? Fred Astaire, because . . . Top Hat is Fred Astaire. This musical "comedy of errors," from the opening scene to the mad syncopated fadeout is wholly motivated by the tempo he maintains throughout. His clever acting, smooth irony, subtle drollery, sly humor, his look askance—support his talent every instant.

His remarkable rhythm revealed in his dancing, alone or with his co-star, Ginger Rogers, held me entranced; the recitative songs with their delightful tunes, the catchy dialogue and artistic stage effects placed Top Hat, to my mind, the season's hit, and Astaire "Tops!"

The Secret of Her BEAUTIFUL COMPLEXION and her popularity

A CLEAR, naturally lovely skin—radiant health—sparkling eyes! These are the things that attract and hold men.

Nature intended you to have these natural charms. If you don't have them, something is wrong; but perhaps nothing more serious than the ordinary fault of sluggish elimination. The system becomes clogged with poisonous wastes which often cause dull or broken-out skin, loss of energy, headache run-down condition.

Thousands of women find relief for these troubles in Stuart's Calcium Wafers. These marvelous little wafers gently help the system eliminate waste products. In a very few days you should feel and see a change. Your skin clearer! Your eyes brighter! Your energy renewed! Stuart's Calcium Wafers are 10c and 60c at all drug stores. Try them—results should delight you!

FREE trial package. Send name and address on postcard to F. A. Stuart Co., Dept. A-106, Marshall, Michigan.

of chiffon to match your gown and tack little rosebuds—or any small flat flower—all over it. Or maybe you'd like Anne Shirley's idea which is a little velvet choker with big velvet petals attached to it. Any girl could make one and it makes a nice topper to a low cut evening frock.

FOR their personal wardrobes (and that is what the majority of you write me you want to hear about) many of the stars are now acquiring Palm Springs togs. Lettie Lee has done a very good looking sharkskin outfit for Ann Rutherford. It has a slim white skirt with side pleats and one big pouch pocket. The bodice of the frock is black sheer with short sleeves striped in red, yellow and white. The outfit has a sleeveless jacket which fastens down the front with three big white buttons and blouses slightly at the waist. Ann wears black shoes with this to match the black of the blouse.

And I must tell you about Madge Evans new overall outfit. They're labeled beach wear but Madge wears hers around the house and when she's dashing about in her car. The overalls are knitted which gives them a grand fit and they have gay little imitation silver buttons on the pockets and straps. The plaid shirt of navy blue and red is knitted too. They only cost about five dollars and they are brand, brand new. Madge has a pair of navy blue linen sandals to wear with the overalls.

Madge, of course, has a weakness for sport things. I saw her the other day in a new vagabond type felt hat with a leather dog collar for a band. She had one of those doggy little fobs to match the collar.

And while we're in the gadget department I know you will be interested to know that the latest craze to hit Hollywood is zodiac jewelry. It comes in clips or pins or bracelets. The jewelry is made of wood with the signs of the zodiac carved or painted thereon. Of course there's a zodiacal sign for each month of the year and the trick is to wear the sign that corresponds with your birth date. And while I don't vouch for this, Una Merkel and Mary Carlisle and Maureen O'Sullivan and all of the girls who have purchased this jewelry insist that their luck has absolutely changed for the better since they've been wearing it. In other words, it works like the proverbial rabbit's foot. And it only costs a dollar, if you want to experiment.

And now before I say goodbye for this month, I want to thank you for many, many letters. It's fun to help you with your clothes problems. And remember always, the smart girl is the one who plans before she buys.

HOW A QUICK, EASY WAY TO LEARN MUSIC

changed my name from "Miss" to "Mrs."

LESS than a year ago I was friendless, lonely, unhappy. Then came the amazing event that changed my whole life.

It was at Jane Smith's party. I found myself sitting alone as usual. I had nothing to offer—no musical ability at all. Mary Nelson came over to talk to me. She was a wonderful pianist and the life of every party. "I wish I could play like you, Mary," I said. Imagine my surprise when Mary told me she had never had a teacher in her life.

Then Mary told me about the wonderful method perfected by the U. S. School of Music. No teacher, no weary scales, no tiresome hours of practise. You learn real music right from the start. That very night I sent for the Free Book and Demonstration lesson.

I never dreamed that playing the piano was so simple. Although I never had any "talent" I was playing my favorite pieces almost before I knew it. Then came the night that proved the turning point in my whole life. I went to a party and this time I had something to offer. My friends were amazed when I sat down at the piano and played song after song. Before the evening was over I was invited to three parties, and it wasn't long before I met Tom, who shortly afterwards asked me to be his wife.

HOLLYWOOD HOME HINTS

by JANE CARROLL

Marion Talley, popular opera star who is now a member of the film colony, has a special thermometer to help her keep tab on the temperature

MARION TALLEY proves to the readers of SCREEN BOOK, that California has about the world's best weather. However, even though she thinks the weather in Southern California is simply grand, she is highly interested in the temperature of her apartment. A cold might ruin her voice for keeps and, after all, her voice is her fortune, for she is a Grand Opera star. She takes great comfort in the accuracy of her little Rochester Thermometer. It is her best insurance against colds and should be yours, if you don't already have protection like this. There is room and a reason for a Rochester in every home.

LET me tell you something we saw in the kitchen of a very famous star's home: It was a bar of good old-fashioned Fels-Naptha soap. Here are her words on the subject, "My laundress told me about it and she says that it contains lots of naptha and good clean golden soap. Ever since we have started using it around here, I have noticed a great change in the quality of the wash. My things come in from the line just twice as clean and fresh smelling as they ever have before and the old tell-tale grey is banished forever."

HONESTLY, you should see Molly O'Day's new baby girl. She is, without doubt, one of the cutest yet to be born to a film star. She's just a chubby little bundle of sunshine and Molly watches her diet and weight so closely to keep her that way. However, those new scales that Molly has take care of the weight situation very well and entertains baby at the same time. She has one of those new Counselor baby scales that plays Rock-A-Bye Baby as soon as the baby is put on the scales.

cold glass," Miss Dunne instructed the victim.

Dipping into the bicarb, she tossed a spoonful and more into the hot glass. Maybe there was too much water, or too much soda—or something. At any rate, the fizzing turned into proportions of a minor volcano. Foam shot into the air, down across her white furniture, ending up on the green carpet like a vagrant spray from the ocean.

The guest was appalled. He stood there transfixed, undecided whether to run for the mop or grab the glass.

"Drink it, drink it!" shouted the surprised actress as the foam diminished and the potency of her "cocktail" receded.

He drank. And may it be recorded here that the following morning his cold was all gone, so help us!

When she decided to build a home in Holmby Hills, down near the Pacific Ocean, Irene Dunne conceived plans herself. And it wasn't an oversight that she failed to include a bedroom for herself!

"I've always had a theory that bedrooms should be more than sleeping rooms," says Miss Dunne. "They ought to be just about like the modern kitchen—informal gathering places for whatever of the family there is at home.

"So my wing of the house meets those specifications exactly. It's more of a sitting room than a bedroom. There's a sort of powder room over on one side. And there's room for a desk, along with several comfortable chairs. And the bed? Oh, it's not in the bedroom at all! It's in a little alcove to one side, with glass doors between. There's not even room for a chair in that little nook. How's that for a bright idea?"

NOW it looks like the basement will be another attraction. You see, most California homes are built for mild weather. Thin walls, and doubtful heating systems. Well, Irene Dunne won't belittle the southland's sunshine, but she has her own opinion of drafty houses, even in Tahiti.

So there is going to be a marvelous heating system, with all the air conditioning gadgets and what-nots. The basement will be spic and span, with the furnace clean enough to have silver bows tied around its waist. When young couples go over the plans with her, all the husbands are deeply interested in the cellar. And that's given her another idea. It looks now like there will be plush seats or something down below, where the amateur engineers can sit and gloat over the swell heating plant.

Irene Dunne hasn't gone in much for parties in Hollywood. But she is looking forward to the completion of her home because it will mark a new phase in her very quiet existence when she is away from her husband. Here she will have small groups of friends in for a pleasant evening. And it won't be all sophisticated talk, either. They will play parlor games, try a few hands at bridge, and reminisce about old times in New York.

Irene Dunne was born in Louisville, where mint julips are a fact and every self-respecting Southerner is a colonel. Her father was Capt. Joseph J. Dunne, builder of boats plying the Ohio River. The good Captain had his heart set on his beautiful daughter being a real lady. So her childhood was overbounding in exclusive academies and excellent manners at home. She still shows some of the Southern traits that are rightfully hers. And she doesn't care to have us go into the obvious fact that her father certainly made a lady out of her.

Perhaps it is that quality of good breeding that attracts men among her following. Even the camera registers the brilliant mind behind her quiet beauty. And you cannot be with her for five minutes without realizing that here is a brilliant conversationalist who could easily make you self-conscious if she tried! But Irene Dunne is not of that sort.

Her all-around ability in every day life is one of the marvels of Hollywood. She is not of an athletic type, yet she is one of the few Hole-in-One club members in the colony! Golfing is her favorite diversion. She likes table tennis, too, and plays a bang-up game.

Although she has been in Hollywood only a few years, she has been "tops" from the very first picture, Cimarron. With Magnificent Obsession just completed, Miss Dunne is getting the thrill of her life doing Show Boat on the same lot. That's the stage play that brought her her greatest fame on Broadway. The critics are expecting big things from both of the pictures because they believe, even as you and I, that Irene Dunne can handle any assignment no matter how big, and do it perfectly.

MINUTE INTERVIEW

UNA MERKEL

"WHAT was the most unusual thing about Riffraff? Well, outside of Jean Harlow's grand work, I'd say it was the prison scenes with the baby. On the screen only one baby appears, but there were actually four! Because a baby can be photographed only for a few brief minutes, two sets of twins were used to play the part of one child. In each set of twins there was one child who was cheerful and another who cried easily. So, when you see the scenes with the baby, you'll know that when the baby laughs, it's one child and when it cries it's another. I don't think anyone can detect where one baby is exchanged for another—they look so much alike!"

CURIOUS FACTS

Although critics and box office ratings show that Greta Garbo and Marlene Dietrich are not as popular in this country as they once were, both are still the greatest money-makers in Europe . . . Franchot Tone gave Joan Crawford a crystal watch for Christmas, and she gave him a new bedroom! . . . The Country Doctor, starring the Dionne Quintuplets, will have the greatest première ever staged in movie history, opening simultaneously in three hundred theaters on March 20th.

If you feel tired, nervous and out of sorts

—there is usually a definite reason for this

Now let's reason sensibly

DON'T try to get well in a day . . . this is asking too much of Nature. Remember, she has certain natural processes that just cannot be hurried.

But there is a certain scientific way you can assist by starting those digestive juices in the stomach to flowing more freely and at the same time supply a balanced mineral deficiency the body needs.

Therefore, if you are pale, tired and run-down . . . a frequent sign that your blood-cells are weak—then do try in the simple, easy way so many millions approve—by starting a course of S.S.S. Blood Tonic.

You may have the will-power to be "up and doing" but unless your blood is in top notch form you are not fully yourself and you may remark, "I wonder why I tire so easily."

Much more could be said—a trial will thoroughly convince you that this way, in the absence of any organic trouble, will start you on the road of feeling like yourself again. You should soon enjoy again the satisfaction of appetizing food . . . sound sleep . . . steady nerves . . . a good complexion . . . and renewed strength.

S.S.S. is sold by all drug stores in two sizes. The $2 economy size is twice as large as the $1.25 regular size and is sufficient for two weeks treatment. Begin on the uproad today.

asked me where he could find a student to run the hotel switchboard, between school hours. That was my cue—and did I take it! I worked my way through another year of college as a 'hello boy.' "

No one knows where the "actin' bug" entered the family line, least of all Donald. All he knew was that he'd spent a lot of time studying dramatics, and had to get a job as soon as school closed. His mother, living in Long Beach, California, wrote that a stock company was being formed there, so Donald bought a ticket and was on his way.

"I had only a dollar and a half in my pocket after paying bus fare," said Woods, waving away the cigarette I offered him. "But I splurged—on a small elegant chicken dinner. Then, wearing my usual college clothes, cords and jacket and a tan shirt, I started off for the theater."

Able to flash a convincing grin after doing away with the big meal, Donald captured the manager in the lobby and gave a whirlwind sales-talk about the long list of plays he'd done. Of course they were only school plays, but he conveniently forgot that detail in the heat of his enthusiasm. He was hired on the spot!

"If you'd worn a pair of spats and carried a cane, it would have been no go," the manager told Donald afterwards. "What he didn't know," laughed the actor, "is that I'd never owned a pair in my life."

HAVING saved about fifty dollars by the time the show closed fifteen weeks later, Woods knew that if he wanted to stick with the theater, he'd have to secure a job in some other town where a stock company was in operation. That called for prompt action and a real splurge. So—he got married!

"I guess we were about the most young and romantic pair that ever bought a ring," grinned Donald. "So we went down to old Mexico, where the ceremony was read by a sad-eyed Mexican with a gray beard. Returning from a two-day honeymoon, we had just five dollars left. So I bought my brand new wife a brand new hat!"

On that same night a telegram arrived, calling the actor to work in a stock company in Memphis. The leading lady in the Long Beach show had recommended him for the part.

When the actor's wife, née the Baroness Josephine Van der Horck, joined her husband in Waco, Texas, weeks later, he greeted her at the station with the news that the show was "swell" but they weren't paying any salaries.

"So we spent the only forty-five cents I had, for a taxi ride to the hotel five blocks away, signed the bill for dinner and a good crowd at the theater that night resulted in my getting a long overdue check.

"Another time we pulled into Los Angeles at the end of a stock tour with a hundred and ten dollars. The hundred went for the month's rent of a smart little apartment, and the ten provided a welcome home dinner for ourselves and some friends.

"By the time coffee and dessert arrived," said Donald, reaching for a huge chocolate bon-bon on the table at his side, "my manager was on the phone. He asked me to come right over to San Gabriel to take the lead in John Steven McGroarty's play Osceola. The leading man had broken his leg, the agent said, and I was expected to learn the part and be ready to 'go on' the following evening."

With Josephine supplying him with steaming cups of coffee to keep him awake, Donald studied all night. There was one rehearsal in the afternoon. He went into the evening show and played it through perfectly. Enthusiastic over the actor's accomplishment, McGroarty insisted that Woods remain with the company for the rest of the season.

"If I'd saved that money instead of spending it for the apartment and dinner, I probably wouldn't have had the nerve to try 'getting up in the part' in less than twenty-four hours. By deliberately putting myself on the spot, I had to make good."

ONE Christmas Eve Donald found himself in New York with but eighteen dollars and no work. He had just finished a number of radio broadcasts and was in the middle of a "lull."

"By this time I had a definite superstition that spending my last dime would help me get a job. So I invited sixteen friends to a Christmas celebration and invested the bank roll in refreshments and eats. I bought a few 'gag' presents from the ten cent store."

The party proved to be one of those happy affairs that last until dawn. One of the guests had to sing on an early Christmas program. Donald accompanied him to the radio station, and bumped into a man who literally begged him to do a series of electrical transcriptions for a recording company. Woods accepted and got a hundred dollars on the spot to bind the deal.

All of these "pinch-hitting" escapades had given the actor a lot of self-reliance and valuable experience.

"I wanted to be ready for that final big splurge into Hollywood and the movies, when the time was ripe." Donald shifted in his chair and reached for another bon-bon.

"Max Arnow, casting director for Warner Brothers, saw me in Counselor at Law and asked me to come to Hollywood for a screen test.

You'll remember him in Merry Wives of Reno, Fog Over Frisco, opposite Irene Dunne in Sweet Adeline, Florentine Dagger, Charlie Chan's Courage, Case of the Curious Bride, and his most current films, We're in the Money, Tale of Two Cities with Ronald Colman, and Frisco Kid with Jimmy Cagney.

"People obsessed with fear of being broke," he believes, "those who hang desperately to their last few dollars, are often so scared that they're unable to take advantage of opportunity when it does come their way. Splurging," said Woods seriously, "has always helped me convince myself that I wasn't afraid.

"If a man spends his last dollar, or deliberately sits himself on a red-hot griddle, it's certain he'll get into action in a hurry. And maybe," concluded Donald, "maybe that's the reason I'm sitting in a patio today, instead of on a park bench."

aroused gendarmerie and then falls in love with him in a Spanish villa presided over by a jealous fellow crook, you're hardly in for what might be called a quiet evening at the movies.

Gary, of course, always has been and always will be the same old "Coop" with the same easy charm and smile, but Marlene has become a new person. When I first knew her she was completely unpredictable and apt to be moody. But not now. She's suddenly emerged and with the new openness has appeared an almost unsuspected and swell sense of humor. Gone is the day of tiptoes and whispers on the carefully-guarded Dietrich set. Wise-cracks snap through the air and there's a feeling of camaraderie that ought to be mentioned here in view of all the guff that's been printed heretofore about her unapproachableness. You'll like this new Marlene. And Gary will always be aces up. Add Borzage to that combination and you've got Desire—in a big way!

THE GREAT ZIEGFELD

Hollywood's Astonishing Extravaganza

GLORIOUS girls in breath-taking costumes, huge, scintillant revolving sets, disappearing columns ornamented by living statues, lions crouched between the flashing feet of exquisite ballet girls and a host of the original Ziegfeld stars . . . it sounds rather like a circus ballyhoo, but it's there. And, more important, it's Ziegfeld!

As Bill Powell, who plays the part of the magnificent impresario, told me, the story is not just a biography any more than his own work is an impersonation. They have succeeded in portraying for the screen what Florenz Ziegfeld meant in the world of lights, music, glorified girls and everything that spells Broadway.

In doing that, one of the strangest things in the history of the theater has occurred. A famous actress, Myrna Loy, is faced with the task of playing the rôle of an equally famous actress in real life, Billie Burke, Flo's widow. Throughout the building of this monument in celluloid, Billie Burke has been on the set. She helped to pick Bill Powell as her late husband and Myrna as herself. She has worked with both of them with gallant humor and understanding on those trivia of action and mannerism that so keenly delineate a character—

Skinny, Weak Rundown Nervous..!

How NATURAL IODINE Builds Worn-Out, Pale, Sickly Folks Into Strong, Red-Blooded Men and Women!

Kelpamalt, New Mineral Concentrate from the Sea, Rich in NATURAL PLANT IODINE, Feeds Starved Glands—Must Build Rich, Red Blood, Put on Lbs. of Solid, "Stay-There" Flesh, Give Steady Nerves and Day-Long Energy in First Week or Trial is Free!

Here's new hope and encouragement for thousands of even naturally skinny, weak, worn out, haggard-looking men and women whose energy and strength have been sapped by overwork and worry, who are nervous, irritable, always half sick and ailing. Science says the principal cause of these rundown conditions is "GLANDS STARVING FOR IODINE." When these glands don't work properly, all the food in the world can't help you. It just isn't turned into flesh. The result is, you stay skinny, pale, tired-out and rundown.

The most important gland—the one which actually controls body weight and strength—needs a definite ration of iodine all the time—NATURAL ASSIMILABLE IODINE not to be confused with chemical iodides which often prove toxic. Only when the system gets an adequate supply of iodine can you regulate metabolism—the body's process of converting digested food into firm flesh, new strength and energy.

To get NATURAL IODINE in convenient, concentrated and assimilable form, take Kelpamalt—now recognized as the world's richest source of this precious substance. It contains 1,300 times more iodine than oysters, once considered the best source. 6 tablets alone contain more NATURAL IODINE than 480 lbs. of spinach or 1,387 lbs. of lettuce.

Try Kelpamalt for a single week and notice the difference. See flattering extra pounds of "stay-there" flesh appear in place of scrawny hollows. Notice how much better you feel, and if you don't gain at least 5 lbs. in one week, the trial is free. 100 jumbo size Kelpamalt tablets—four to five times the size of ordinary tablets—cost but a few cents a day to use. Get Kelpamalt today. Kelpamalt costs but little at all good drug stores. If your dealer has not yet received his supply, send $1.00 for special introductory size bottle of 65 tablets to the address below.

SPECIAL FREE OFFER

Write today for fascinating instructive 50-page book on How to Add Weight Quickly. Mineral contents of Food and their effects on the human body. New facts about NATURAL IODINE, Standard weight and measurement charts. Daily menus for weight building. Absolutely free. No obligation. Kelpamalt Co., Dept. 680, 27-33 West 20th St., New York City.

the roll and droop of Flo's cigar, the restless tapping of his fingers, the things he would have done and those he wouldn't.

From Broadway, road-shows, cabarets and retirement have flocked the troupers that rode the crest of stardom under the Ziegfeld banner—Ann Pennington does her buck-and-wing, Harriet Hoctor again rises to the tips of her unbelievable toes, Gilda Grey does her shimmy that shook the world to the tune of 'Neath the South-Sea Moon played by a chorus of ukuleles, and Fanny Brice re-emerges to do her fan dance clad in long, woolen underwear and to sing My Man and Fiddle in the Middle of Your Yiddle. Even many of the sets are duplicates of those designed for Ziegfeld and the story was written by his own playwright, William Anthony McGuire.

Is it any wonder that everyone in the picture feels the atmosphere of "Flo?" Is it any wonder that even the impervious, suave Bill Powell has seemed somewhat to soften without losing any of his easy flash? For example, Ziegfeld was noted for his kindness to the people who worked for him regardless of prominence. He invariably called off rehearsals at four in the afternoon for sandwiches, cokes or whatever they wanted and footed the bills personally. When the picture went into production in Culver City, visitors noticed that all activity ceased at four P. M. Everyone in the company went over to a secluded corner of the big sound stage where Bill had had placed a refreshment stand—which he paid for personally.

"Well," he grinned when we ribbed him a little about it, "If Ziegfeld can do it, why not Powell?"

But underneath the airy persiflage there was a feeling that went deeper than the well known smoothness of The Thin Man. As the guiding genius of the spectacular Ziegfeld extravaganzas a la M-G-M (and, believe me, they lose none of their rhythmic glamour in the transition), Bill, despite his protests, has unconsciously fallen heir to at least the hem of that mantle. For example, let us reprint here a telegram sent to Bill after his first day's work in front of the camera: SEEING YOU TODAY AS FLO DID STRANGE THINGS TO MY HEART—BILLIE BURKE. And that, my friends, is The Great Ziegfeld!

"Between scenes Shirley delighted to play with the puzzled lobsters who never before had been played with by a star."—Scene from Captain January

FOLLOW THE FLEET

Another Field Day for Rogers and Astaire

AS SOON as I finish this department, I'm going to hock my typewriter and join the Navy. The things that can happen to gobs—dancing with Ginger Rogers, for instance! Of course, not everyone can dance the way Fred Astaire does, but they seemed to be having an awful lot of fun out on the Follow the Fleet set at RKO.

It seems as though Fred and Ginger had been a dance team before she refused to middle-aisle and Fred had joined the Navy with Randy Scott. They meet in a dance hall in San Francisco and introduce Randy to Harriet Hilliard, Ginger's prudish sister who is on the high road to frustration. She falls for Randy and it's a happy foursome until Fred inadvertently gets Ginger fired. They bicker and dance through several scenes until Fred finally lands in the brig with Randy, but not until he has straightened out the complicated series of events that arise from Ginger getting fired—and a glass of bicarbonate of soda.

He's really upset when Ginger loses her job, especially because she won't have anything to do with him afterwards. As is the way of a man with a sore maid, he gets some flowers and takes Beppo, his mascot monkey, along to grease the way. Beppo is the ace scene-stealer of Follow the Fleet. He was just supposed to come in the door well ahead of Fred, hand the flowers to Ginger and quietly fade away. But Beppo didn't see it that way.

Everything was okay as far as it went, but when Ginger reads the card and sees who sent the flowers and then slams them to the floor, it offended Beppo's sense of propriety and he picked them up again, refusing to be separated. It looked like a good piece of monkey-business so Fred and Ginger worked it into the action, but Beppo wasn't finished yet. He chirruped and squawled and fussed around until they let him get up on the piano with the flowers, seize the faded jonquils already in the vase, toss them indiscriminately away and substitute Fred's roses, paper and all. After that he seemed mildly satisfied. Fred and Ginger might fight but he, the great Beppo, had done his duty as he saw it.

Of course, all this new action that Beppo had insisted on made changes necessary in the rest of the scene. But Fred and Ginger, always ready to humor a fellow player, went through the extra rehearsals necessary. Now to Beppo that was kind of silly. I mean, after all, he'd done it once. Why keep on handing flowers to a lady only to have them thrown to the floor? Why keep sticking roses in a vase if some property man was going to grin a few minutes later and take them out again? It just didn't make sense and Beppo was getting annoyed at the whole thing.

Finally, the fourth time they'd walked through it and were preparing for the actual take, Beppo swung sulkily from Fred's hand and jammed the roses into the vase with an unmistakable air of finality. He turned, surveyed them coldly, let out a squawk and leapt off the set. No diva has ever quit with greater agility. People started running around making noises calculated to make monkeys come back where they belonged and get off the cat-walk high in the stage rafters. Electricians and grips climbed around after Beppo. A casual visitor to the set would have thought he'd run into a whole tribe of Tarzans at a picnic. Beppo's trainer pleaded with him in voluble Italian to no avail. Fred Astaire sent out and bought peanuts. The monk almost fell for that one, but finally decided to stick to the isolationist policy. Ginger cooed in a manner that would have had me swinging through the air with loud, glad cries, but not Beppo. He's made of sterner stuff than me. He was darned if he'd put those roses in the vase again for all the peanuts in California and no matter who cooed at him. For all I know, Beppo is still up there muttering to himself—sort of the Phantom of Stage Eight

KLONDIKE LOU

Mae West Readies a Grand Surprise

BETWEEN two evils, baby, I pick the one I never tried before!"

Thus spoke Mae West in her boudoir in Fanny Radler's rooming house in Nome, Alaska. The guy she spoke to was a friendly sea-captain who frequently answers to the name of Victor McLaglen. In fact, he was so friendly that when they got to her room she had to push him away with a gentle reminder.

"Say, big boy," she murmured as only Mae can murmur, "I thought you were going to protect me, not wrestle with me!"

Klondike Lou was a lady, but she got jammed up on a little accidental murder down in San Francisco. She left town with a swift but deadly swing of the hips and boarded Vic's Alaska-bound vessel. He knew she was wanted, but then, he was human, too, so he took her to Nome, sweet Nome. When Mae hit the gold bearing males of the far north, the rush was on for fair. In fact, they tell me, for fairer and warmer. With the gleam of pay-dirt in her eye she espied Phil Reed, the U. S. Marshal of Nome, and thereafter follows the dual romance—McLaglen or Reed? Because, of course, Reed knows she's being looked for in California and he should run her in. But how's a guy going to run Mae in anywhere when she turns on the heat?

Mae has two new songs that lay the miners in rows up in far-off Nome and I wouldn't be surprised if they did the same thing all the way from Weepautucket, Maine, to Ybor, Calif. One of them, by Gene Austin, is sung with great sympatico—Poor Little Bar-Fly. Another one that convinced the miners that life is real and life is earnest, and that only the strong survive, is a little ditty entitled, I'm an Occidental Woman in an Oriental Mood for Love!

"It just didn't make sense, and Beppo was annoyed with the whole thing."—Fred Astaire and Beppo, the monkey, on the set of Follow the Fleet

To give you an idea of what Mae figures an Oriental mood to be, there was the scene where McLaglen is making love to her in a manner that would have Man-Mountain Dean green with envy. Vic is no handful, himself, and when he goes about convincing a lady the very rafters shiver. Six foot four of brawn, muscle and aroused masculinity, Vic had Mae in his arms. It was a situation that would have given any lady cause to pause and take stock of adjacent lethal weapons. But not our Mae! However, I did notice a distinct tremor in Mae's voice during the filming of the scene and felt that at last she'd met her match. At the end of the action I was shocked to see that the tremor was due to laughter.

With McLaglen visibly shaken on the stage, she walked off with a cool chuckle, "My golly, but you're cute!"

CAPTAIN JANUARY

An Advance Peek At Shirley's Newest

GONE are the frills and furbelows of The Littlest Rebel and with it the archness of past generations, but you'll still find Shirley Temple becurled and—well, Shirley Temple—if you happen to wander out on the Twentieth Century-Fox lot. Part of Shirley's new background consists of overalls instead of lace panties, carved driftwood dolls instead of elaborate French importations, lobsters for poodles and lighthouses for old southun mansions, suh!

Guy Kibbee in the title rôle of Captain January is an old, beached salt whose two joys in life are his lighthouse and Shirley—unless you count in his frequent, friendly-enemy fights with Slim Summerville, the government's lighthouse inspector. Shirley had come in with a bad storm during which her family was lost at sea. In a trice she was the local favorite of all the old salts who taught her nautical terms and The Sailor's Horn-Pipe. Everything is clear sailing until a new and unpleasant female truant officer is seen, hull-under but rigging belligerent, on the horizon. It's just one darned difficulty after another from then until Shirley's aunt and uncle are located in Boston, the truant officer

LAXATIVES? I NEVER NEED THEM ANY MORE!

Don't Be a Slave to CATHARTICS

Try This Improved Pasteurized Yeast That's EASY TO EAT

IF you take laxatives to keep "regular," you know from experience that drugs and cathartics give only temporary relief from constipation. Such remedies merely cause a drastic purging action. They do not correct the cause of your condition.

Doctors now know that in many cases the real cause of constipation is a shortage of the vitamin B complex. This precious factor is sadly deficient in the typical everyday diet. In many foods it is entirely lacking. When this factor is added to the diet in sufficient amounts, constipation goes. Elimination again becomes regular and complete.

Yeast Foam Tablets are pure pasteurized yeast and yeast is the richest known food source of vitamins B and G. They should stimulate your weakened intestinal nerves and muscles and quickly restore your eliminative system to normal, healthy function.

With the true cause of your constipation corrected, you will be rid of the evil cathartic habit. Your energy will revive. Headaches will go. Your skin will be clearer and fresher.

Don't confuse Yeast Foam Tablets with ordinary yeast. These tablets cannot ferment in the body. Pasteurization makes this yeast utterly safe for everyone to eat. It has a pleasant, nut-like taste that you will really enjoy. And it contains nothing to put on fat.

All druggists sell Yeast Foam Tablets. The 10-day bottle costs only 50c. Get one today. Refuse substitutes.

THE STORY OF LOUIS PASTEUR—★★★★—Paul Muni in a powerful portrayal of Pasteur, the French doctor, who struggled against great odds in his battle against disease and death.—Warner.

DANGEROUS—★★★★—Bette Davis in an unsympathetic rôle as a self-centered actress who leads Franchot Tone astray. Davis does a perfect dramatic job.—Warner.

FIRST A GIRL—★★★—Jessie Matthews in a delightful comedy about a girl who is forced to disguise herself as a man for the sake of her career.—GB.

MISTER HOBO—★★★—George Arliss in the rôle of a kindly tramp who upsets the financial wizards of France and straightens out the problems of young love.—GB.

A TALE OF TWO CITIES—★★★★—Dickens' masterful story of the French revolution translated to the screen perfectly by Ronald Colman, Elizabeth Allan, Blanche Yurka, Basil Rathbone and Donald Woods.—Metro.

THE BRIDE COMES HOME—★★★★—Hilarious comedy romance with Claudette Colbert who gets off to a fighting start with her young husband, played by Fred MacMurray.—Paramount.

THE LITTLEST REBEL—★★★—Another grand Shirley Temple picture, with Shirley as the little Southern girl who saves her father from death by appealing to Lincoln.—Twentieth Century-Fox.

AH WILDERNESS—★★★★—A simple yet powerful story of the life of an average family in the early 1900's. Perfectly played by Lionel Barrymore, Wallace Beery, Cecilia Parker and Eric Linden.—Metro.

I DREAM TOO MUCH—★★★—Lily Pons lifts her glorious voice in song for the screen. Henry Fonda has a leading rôle.—Radio.

A NIGHT AT THE OPERA—★★★★—The dizzy Marx Brothers return to the screen after a long absence in one of the funniest pictures ever filmed. Groucho racketeers in opera, with Kitty Carlisle and Allan Jones as foils for his crazy antics.—Metro.

MUTINY ON THE BOUNTY—★★★★—A bloody page from the annals of British naval history, so perfectly filmed that it cannot help but be chosen the best picture of the year. The cast includes Charles Laughton, Clark Gable and Franchot Tone.—Metro.

ROSE OF THE RANCHO — ★★★★ — Gladys Swarthout makes her début opposite John Boles in a splendid picture which recounts the adventures of early California families in their battles against the land-grabbers. Miss Swarthout's songs are a sparkling contribution to the finer things the screen has to offer. —Paramount.

Other New Films

LAST OF THE PAGANS—★★★★—Lotus Long and Ray Wise in a superb story about enemy tribes of natives whose cruelties endanger a beautiful love. A distinctly unusual and worthwhile picture.—Metro.

COLLEGIATE—★★★—Silly but greatly entertaining comedy with Jack Oakie as the playboy who inherits a girl's school. A fine cast, including Joe Penner, Ned Sparks, Frances Langford and Betty Grable.—Paramount.

THREE LIVE GHOSTS—★★★—Taking place in London after the Armistice, this is an entertaining comedy dealing with the humorous experiences of three returning soldiers. They had been listed as dead. But they were very much alive! Richard Arlen and Beryl Mercer play the principal rôles very capably.—M-G-M.

TWO IN THE DARK—★★★—A man suffering from amnesia meets a girl in a park and later to his consternation discovers that he is involved in a mystery and suspected of murder. Fine plot, with Walter Abel, Margot Grahame and Wallace Ford in leading rôles.—Radio.

HITCH HIKE LADY—★★★½—The story of a lovable old lady who starts hitch-hiking her way to visit a son residing at Rancho San Quentin, not knowing that he really is in prison. A really grand comedy, with Alison Skipworth, Mae Clark, Arthur Treacher and Warren Hymer.—Republic.

THE BOHEMIAN GIRL—★★★★—A remarkably fine film version of the famous operetta, with Laurel and Hardy as the chief fun-makers. Others in the cast include Antonio Moreno and the late Thelma Todd.—Hal Roach.

CAPTAIN BLOOD—★★★★—A great adventure film, with Errol Flynn as the dynamic British exile who escapes and becomes a pirate. To help make the picture thrilling and well-acted there is a grand cast including Olivia de Havilland, Lionel Atwell, David Torrence, Guy Kibbee, Basil Rathbone and Ross Alexander.—Warner.

THE GHOST GOES WEST—★★★½—Robert Donat has never appeared more pleasing on the screen than he does here. Playing the dual rôle of a Scottish youth of today and of the ghost of that youth's eighteenth century ancestor, Donat produces a riot of mirth and laughter. As the Scottish youth, he sells his ancient castle to an American who wants it transported across the ocean to Florida. With the castle comes the ancestral ghost, too. Wires are sent to New York, telling them of the ghost's coming. Finally, in Florida, the ghost passes. You'll enjoy this film.—United Artists.

FANG AND CLAW —★★★—This is the third of Frank (Bring-'em-back-alive) Buck's pictures. It differs from the others in that it shows less of the brutality among animals in their struggle for survival. But it's excellent entertainment and very well photographed. Thrilling captures of tigers and pythons are shown. —RKO.

WE'RE ONLY HUMAN—★★½—Here's an entertaining picture that tells the story of a man whose greatest fear was to be afraid, and of the woman who makes it possible for him to conquer that fear. Preston Foster and Jane Wyatt head the cast.—RKO, foiled and Kibbee hired as captain of the family's yacht.

Of all the people on the production, there is no question but that Shirley had the best time. She didn't have to be careful of her clothes or act like a perfect lady straight out of Godey's well known book. Suffice it to say that she practically ran Guy Kibbee bow-legged in the scenes wherein they had to climb the long winding stairs of the lighthouse. To Shirley it was a snap, but Kibbee has since been known to walk blocks to avoid a set of steps. He fervently utters prayers of thanks to Allah for the presence of the script writer who put a "rest-step" half way up the climb upon which he and Shirley could pause and chat a bit.

One thing about Shirley—she's adaptable! She really enjoyed the process of going nautical but nice and would wander into the commissary at noon with a string of contracted whaling boat terms like "bo's'n," "t'gall'nt-s'l" and "fo'c's'le" that had everybody so apostrophe conscious you couldn't understand a word they were saying.

In the story there's a scene where Shirley finds out that Kibbee needs some money in a hurry. Nothing loathe to turn a pretty penny, she embarks upon the venture of selling lobsters from house to house. Now Shirley, despite rumor to the contrary, is really a swell little gal with a normal child's imagination and penchant for trouble. It seems that when they came upon this scene she insisted on live lobsters rather than the defunct ones the studio wanted her valuable little fingers to handle. They exclaimed among themselves, "Ha! The child wants realism!" So, with a hey-nonny-nonny, they wired Chesapeake Bay and had a few live ones sent out by air. It developed that they were all wrong about Shirley's ideas on realism, however. Between scenes, Shirley delighted to play with the puzzled lobsters who never before had been played with by a star. The game was simple. It consisted of plucking forth a lobster, grasped firmly across the back out of harm's way, and hoisting him from his natural element. The second step is to advance cautiously from the rear upon unsuspecting and preferably recumbent members of the cast and crew. Next, you simply present the lobster within striking distance. The lobster, still mystified, instinctively performs an act for which a thoughtful Mother Nature equipped him with claws.

And a hearty laugh is had by all.

Bette Davis Gives Lessons in Acting

photographs accompanying this story, just what they are.

THE dramatic student learns, early in his training, the great variety of emotions and meanings that may be expressed by posture. A droop, sadness or defeat; chin up, courage. Things like that. But there are many more subtle implications, that an amateur might miss. Things as easy to muff as standing squarely on both feet, instead of shifting the weight onto one! For the proper "dramatic stance," you learn, holds the weight mostly on one foot, not both.

Do you know how to light a cigarette for a lady—an acting lady, anyway? So that your hand doesn't cover her face, of course! And the lady, herself, will hold her cigarette in graceful fingers, well below the chin. That's so facial expression won't be lost.

Then there's the little business of sitting down? Easy, you say? You've been doing it all your life? Then did you know that when a scene calls for lounging in a low chair, you play it profile, not directly to the audience, so that your long, conspicuous legs won't detract from the scene? And that action with a newspaper also is done in profile, so as not to hide your features? And that, seated facing the audience, you'll look better (if you're a lady) with one foot slightly forward, slightly pointed outward, and gracefully arched—rather than crossing your feet or knees? Oh, you didn't?

Very well, then, we'll go on to the hands. Now, most people's hands seem a little large and a little awkward and very much in the way, at times. And they show it. But for an actor, that's fatal. So he must learn what to do with them. The rule is that they should never be flung about carelessly, for that detracts from the objects or emotion on which interest must be concentrated. When there's nothing else to do with them, it's a good idea to clasp them lightly in front of you. Keep them away from your mouth—away from your face, and make them "mean something."

GESTURES as a rule should be free and easy (unless of course you're portraying a niggardly person who would be sparing even in gesture!) A gesture that starts only from the elbow is usually awkward.

Here, briefly, are a few of the other rules Bette Davis poses to illustrate the importance of technique:

When working with a prop, such as a lamp, do not stoop, but keep an upright position.

In an intense scene, a yell will be more effective if the body is held upright and not in a forward position.

When doing a scene in a legitimate theater, it should be played to the balcony, so that those people can get a good view of the action.

When walking, do not slouch, but directly and definitely approach your objective. On the other hand, your walk should not be forced (unless, of course, that walk best fits the character you are portraying. To denote certain types

Without Calomel—And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Your whole system is poisoned and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

Laxatives are only makeshifts. A mere bowel movement doesn't get at the cause. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." Harmless, gentle, yet amazing in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name. Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c at all drug stores. © 1935. C.M.Co.

childhood of many wicked, cruel, and in many instances brutal things that were inflicted on the helpless South. These narratives were told and re-told with flaming hatred in the hearts of my elders. Now, having children of my own, I have sworn never to repeat these stories or truths to the little ones intrusted to me. Yet, tonight, after seeing So Red the Rose. I have had to re-live through all the flaming hatred and anger that should have been buried. Why, in the name of a United Nation, are such pictures allowed? Why do we not let the terrible wounds of 1861-64 heal? Then again, some of the players were Northern. Many of the South detect this at once and resent it. In the name of Peace, why not bury the past and teach the people to—"Pledge allegiance to the flag of the United States of America and to the republic for which it stands, one Nation indivisible, with Liberty and Justice for all."—Mrs Henry Odum, 620 Emory St., Covington, Ga.

Anxious to present fairly all opinions of readers, this letter is the frank reaction of one movie-goer to So Red the Rose. Other letters have recommended the film for its portrayal of the true Southern spirit.

A Courageous Actress

BETTE DAVIS deserves all the praise we can give her for her grand acting in Bordertown, Of Human Bondage and Front Page Woman. All these pictures were tops. I'll admit she won't be another Helen Hayes from the character standpoint, but I firmly believe she is capable of being as great an actress in the type of character she plays. She has courage, ambition and the ability to scale the heights. I am looking forward to The Petrified Forest, which I know will be one of the season's best pictures.—Anna May Wade, 302 West 15th St., Traverse City, Mich.

Lucky Movie Fan

YOU know, I think I am one of the luckiest girls. You see, I live in Honolulu and am able to see almost all the movie stars who visit here. Once I went to a swimming meet and sat almost next to Carole Lombard and William Powell. I watched Joel McCrea and Dolores Del Rio work in The Bird of Paradise, and I must say I was astounded at the amount of make-up the masculine Joel had to use. I've seen Janet Gaynor many times. She loves Honolulu, and Honolulu loves her. Ann Harding is another frequent visitor and she has numerous friends here. Then there is that darling of darlings, Shirley Temple, who caused everyone here to go wild. People sat on the beach all day long just in hope that they might catch a glimpse of her. I sat in the same section with Nancy Carroll at a football game. I saw Ruby Keeler and Al Jolson sun tanning on the beach at Waikiki. I attended a personal appearance of Edward Arnold at the local Army theater. Don't you agree with me that this living in Hawaii must be very exciting?—*Audrey Waidlick, 239 Lewers St., Honolulu, T. that are above or below average, or normal, these rules are often reversed to get effective characterization.

When seated, an upright position, and a straight spine should be maintained.

Do not actually lean against the stage furniture, but hold the weight of the body on both feet and merely rest lightly against the object.

And—when your back has been turned to the audience, and the scene calls for a turn about, it must be done gently, gracefully—not with a sudden jerk.

There you are. Or, more correctly, there you have just the merest start . . . the faintest suggestion . . . of what is meant by technique! Master that—and you still may never make an actor, or an actress! For . . .

"Technique is simply the best means to an end," says Bette Davis. "You can have all the technique in the world, and still not be a good actress.

"After all, rules are dead things, calculated to make you do the thing to be done in the best, most effective, or telling way. It's talent that really counts. To be an actress you have to have both . . . and technique is only the start!"

herself. Never an objection came from Joan. But her husband, Franchot Tone, kept the wires hot protesting that Joan was working too hard. Finally the anxious husband was persuaded by breaking Radio Theater's rule against audiences. He was a one man gallery.

No one would have known, to hear her recent broadcast, that Claudette Colbert was tortured with sinus trouble. She was so ill that early script rehearsals were held in her hotel room with Claudette confined to her bed. But when the time came to go on, Claudette was there, on the job.

Only once has a star actually failed to keep a date with the microphone. That was when Margaret Sullavan was scheduled to do Peg O' My Heart, and just two hours before curtain time, her condition became so grave that her physician absolutely forbade her to go on.

The producers thought fast. Helen Hayes was up at Nyack, New York. They got Helen on the phone and pleaded with her to save the situation. Helen was reluctant. She had never done an Irish dialect before. But eventually she was persuaded.

Her husband, Charlie MacArthur, drove her to New York, brushing her up on the Irish dialect he had learned from cops in the days when he was a reporter in Chicago.

They arrived just in time for a hurried reading of the script—without a rehearsal. Helen gave a grand performance.

Incidentally, this impromptu appearance marked a turning point in her career. For it was because of the response to that, and to a later Lux Theater broadcast that Helen decided to abandon Hollywood and devote her attention to radio.

To Dick Barthelmess and Lillian Gish, who came together again to do Way Down East in a radio version of the immortal classic which they had once done for D. W. Griffith, radio was a cinch in comparison to the old days of the silent films.

"It doesn't seem right," Lillian said, "rehearsing a few hours a day four or five days, in a warm, comfortable studio, when I think of the hardships we went through in making the silent film.

"The whole shooting took nineteen weeks. For days, that winter out at Mamaroneck, we had a standing call to report—outdoors—whenever there was a snowstorm!

"But the two weeks up in Vermont were the worst. We worked every day from sunup to sundown, out on the river, with the temperature below zero. There were very few of us who didn't have frosted toes and fingers. That wasn't acting—it was an endurance contest! Give me radio, every time!"

When Jimmy Cagney played on the Lux show, he was so fascinated with the sound effects gadgets that he could hardly keep his mind on his work. He had to know just which gadget made what noise—and why.

OF ALL the stars who have appeared before the mike, Leslie Howard was the most nonchalant.

He came east under the most disconcerting of circumstances. To begin with,

MOVIE SCRIPT WINNER

Mrs. Oleta Aubrey, 816 Tradesmens Bank Bldg., Oklahoma City, Okla., is winner of the original movie script of the picture A Thousand Dollars a Minute. Her winner letter is as follows:

"If I had a thousand dollars a minute, I would pay all my debts, establish my family in a lovely home, and then I'd shower food, clothing and luxuries on the ill and helpless—the intelligent people forced into relief. The everlasting thrill of seeing millions of tired faces light with new hope would repay me. Prosperity would be here!"

The Best GRAY HAIR Remedy is Made at Home
You can now make at home a better gray hair remedy than you can buy, by following this simple recipe: To half pint of water add one ounce bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and one-fourth ounce of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it yourself at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained.
Barbo imparts color to streaked, faded or gray hair, makes it soft and glossy and takes years off your looks. It will not color scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.

News Notes

Thelma Todd

- Despite belief that Thelma Todd's death was but a tragic accident, many in Hollywood insist that the discovery of the gay comédienne's body in her car apparently killed by carbon monoxide poisoning was in truth a diabolically clever murder plot. Because she had been threatened by extortionists, it is pointed out that her death was a warning from the underworld to other stars that they may suffer similar fates if they refuse the demands of extortionists.

- Claudette Colbert weds Dr. Joel J. Pressman, Los Angeles Physician, on Christmas eve at Yuma, Arizona. Her former husband was Norman Foster.

- Cary Grant's father dies in Bristol, England . . . Clark Gable purchases new Duesenberg roadster costing $16,000 . . . Irene Dunne is building a new home . . . Victor Jory severely injured in auto accident, but recovering swiftly . . . Alice White's home robbed of $5,000 in wearing apparel . . . Rumored romance between Rochelle Hudson and Harry Richman just a rumor . . . Barbara Stanwyck severely burns her hand while appearing in a campfire scene for A Message to Garcia . . . Katherine De Mille slightly injured in making a parachute jump during the filming of The Adventures of Jimmy Allen.

his plane was forced down in the desert. It was an unpleasant experience—but more important to the actor—it cut short his rehearsal time.

At the airport, Howard was met by officials who expected him to report to the theater at once for a rehearsal of a stage play.

While Howard was being torn this way and that, the Lux group quietly put his bags in their car. Howard followed his bags, and there he was in the studio.

Perfectly unruffled, casually and calmly, Howard went right into his script reading, and never batted an eye.

IN The Old Soak, Wally Beery's shirt was open at the neck, his spectacles were halfway down his nose, and his suspenders dangled. Looking the part made it easier for him to play it.

And Paul Muni, who went on in Counsellor-at-Law, asked to have a coat rack placed beside the microphone. Part of his entrance business in the play had been to come in, take off his coat, and hang it up. And he did just the same thing for his radio version, although his audience didn't know it.

Similarly, each star requires special handling.

Paul Muni was startled, during his first rehearsal, to hear a voice bellow at him out of the loud speaker, "Muni—you're terrible!"

During the early days of the radio, the stars shied away from acting before the microphone. It seemed to them a terrifying experience.

But those who have tried it and enjoyed it, have returned to Hollywood to spread the good word. And now their increasing interest in playing to the huge radio audience assures a steady flow of name stars eastward in the weeks to come.

Hollywood Home Hints

ANITA PAGE has discovered a very attractive way to serve informal dinners and luncheons. She advises that you investigate the Roylace line of paper napkins and table coverings, before you plan your next party. There is nothing quite as attractive as the new patterns and designs they now have to offer.

EDWARD ARNOLD has more ideas about cooking and cookery than you can shake a stick at. Mrs. Arnold told us that Eddie always takes complete charge of the kitchen when ever she wants things just right for a dinner party. He would be terribly insulted if anyone went away from his house hungry. For Eddie knows how to cook things so they taste their best. Proper flavoring and seasoning are his two secrets, and that is the sole purpose of Angostura Bitters—to properly flavor your favorite dishes.

HERE are a few suggestions for the use of salt as offered by the makers of Worcester Salt: To smooth irons that have become rusty, sticky, or rough, simply rub a little Worcester Salt on the surface of the iron with a piece of crinkled paper.

IF YOU are overweight in the least, why not try Hollywood's way of slenderizing? Hollywood's way of keeping slim is to eat plenty of salads. Here is a tip about salads that you should remember if you plan to diet in that manner: A salad may keep you thin, but the wrong kind of dressing can make you fat. Our suggestion for a non-fattening dressing is the thin, French-type made from pure Pompeian Olive Oil.

DID you ever try Liquid Veneer on furniture? If you are at all interested in keeping its original lustre and fine finish, it is our advice that you try a bottle of it next time you clean house. Liquid Veneer is the one polish that will stand up to the "white glove" test.

HERE is a waffle iron with a signal light to warn you that the waffle has received its share of cooking and that the iron is ready for more batter. This new idea is incorporated into the new Proctor Waffle Iron. All in the world you have to do is set its "color" indicator for waffles baked to the lighter or darker brown you prefer. When the waffle is done, the current shuts off automatically and the signal light in the lid winks out.

AND next time you are down town shopping, drop in at your favorite store and ask to see the new Kensington Line of table ware. Their secret is an aluminum alloy which will not tarnish or stain. Kensington metal is free from finger printing yet is hard enough to withstand normal wear and scuffing.

Bing Crosby Plans His Future

children? Their education and everything?"

Our favorite crooner seems to have thought of that, too. There are three insurance policies, maturing when they are sixteen, to amply provide for their education—through college—but that's all.

"When a child learns that his parents are always ready and willing to gratify his every whim," Bing explains, "his chances of developing into a self-reliant, useful citizen are definitely diminished. I came from a family of seven children, and while my father made a good living and enough to furnish all of us a good home, good wholesome food and high school educations, anything beyond that was strictly for us to get out and scratch.

"Such a program I would consider a good one for my boys.

"Their insurance policies guarantee them only an education. Other than that and a good home, I don't propose anything they can't earn.

"I've seen too many examples of spoiled and pampered lads who were totally unprepared for adversity to want my children brought up that way."

I dropped around to talk to Larry Crosby. I really was quite upset at all this.

"What about 'Bing Crosby, Inc.'?" I inquired, referring to the organization created for the sole purpose of handling Bing's affairs.

"Well," he said, smiling in his quiet way, "I guess it means that Everett and I will be looking for jobs in about three years. There won't be any more 'Bing Crosby, Inc.' when 'The Groaner' retires."

For the past few years, Larry has had charge of Bing's radio activities, while Everett has acted as his manager. It's all been done in a very business-like and efficient manner, too.

The first thing the Crosbys will do, however, before the head of the house settles down to a life of old clothes, horse-raising, writing and golf, will be to take that long-awaited trip around the world. There are all sorts of out-of-the-way fishing spots Bing has been wanting to explore for a long time—tarpon fishing in Florida, and Zane Grey's favorite haunt in the South Seas.

"We just want to travel like two ordinary people," say Bing and Dixie. "There'll be no personal appearances and no fuss. We want to be just a couple of tourists on a holiday. We've both waited a long time for our trip, and we want to get the most out of it while we're young enough to enjoy it."

But I, for one, hate the whole idea. After all, there's only one Bing. I'm going right out and buy every Crosby record I can find, just to fill in the gaps—when Bing retires.

Today's Gossip

Ever since Mae has been in Hollywood she has had reserved for herself four ringside tickets at the Hollywood Legion Stadium for each Friday night and she is usually there accompanied by three males of her retinue. Jim Timony, her ex-business manager; Murray Feil, her present business manager; and the fourth, as at bridge, some last minute entry.

When Mae had completed Klondike Lou she was too busy to be at ringside and, as she attracts more attention at the fights than any other film celebrity, Mae decided on the next best thing. She sent her stand-in, Irene Holbrook, who resembles her closely, dolled the stand-in up with typical Mae West wardrobe, including jewelry, and the tourists gaped and argued all evening.

JULIE HAYDON, pretty and talented Hollywood screen and stage player who has not had any too many breaks is quite sure 1936 is going to be her lucky year. At least she says she is getting a good start.

Julie has been selected, contract signed and everything to play opposite Gary Cooper when The Light That Failed is made by Paramount.

Julie, daughter of the man who founded the Hollywood Magazine, never got a break in her own town until she went to New York and clicked in a stage play.

GROUCHO MARX tells it himself, so it must be true. A producer had made a program picture with a comedy slant and it was one-half of a double feature in a neighborhood theater near Hollywood. The other picture was A Night at the Opera. A scout of the producer saw the program and rushed to his chief the next day with the news that the picture got as many laughs as the Marx Brothers picture. So the producer dropped by the theater to talk with the manager about the phenomenon. The manager was not in but the assistant manager verified the report adding however:

"It gets a lot of laughs because half way through the picture they're still laughing at the Marx Brothers.

Sue Groucho if you don't believe it!

LARRY BURKE, is the happiest kid in Hollywood these days and his Santa Claus was none other than the Old Town Crier, Alexander Woollcott.

Larry is the boy who you will remember leaned up against a lamp post in The Informer and sang an Irish song during the wake inside. He had no program mention, no screen credit and after the picture every one seemed to have forgotten him.

Woollcott, on his visit to Hollywood, saw a projection room run of The Informer raved over it on his broadcast and insisted that John Ford, the director, bring Larry to meet him.

Ford did. Woollcott engaged him for his radio broadcast to sing In the Gloaming, paid him plenty for it, and Larry has been working in films ever since.

How PLUTO WATER Relieves

CONSTIPATION LIVER AND GALL BLADDER TROUBLES

Amazing Double-Action the Secret

1. Safely, Gently Relieves Constipation in One Hour or Less!
2. Stimulates Gall Bladder and Liver to Normal, "Free-Flowing" Action!

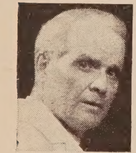
Constipation, liver and gall bladder troubles often come together. Millions suffer them daily—yet don't know why. Often, physicians say, it is not only because you're constipated but also because biliary drainage from liver and gall bladder is not normal. Hence, ordinary laxatives that act only on bowels to temporarily relieve constipation, still leave you feeling terrible. Pluto Water, however (with amazing double action), helps all these troubles at same time. First, gives a sure, gentle flush in an hour or less. Second, stimulates gall bladder and liver to normal, "free-flowing" action. So relief is quick—and thorough! You feel amazingly better in an hour. Soon feel normal!

DO AS DOCTORS DO



That's why for years, over 50,000 doctors have used or recommended Pluto. As Dr. E. L. S. of Ohio says: "I have found the use of Pluto in gall bladder cases to have remarkable results." So do as doctors do the next time you feel dull, listless from constipation, liver or gall bladder troubles. Take Pluto Water in the tasteless, non-habit-forming dose—1/5 Pluto in 4/5 glass hot water. Cleanse your system of health-destroying poisons this sure, quick way.

Two hundred million bottles of Pluto have been used—millions more each year. One of the most economical, most effective laxatives you can buy. Comes in 2 sizes—25c and 50c—at all drug stores. A beneficial saline mineral water from famous French Lick Springs.

TAKE AN ECONOMICAL TRIP TO HOLLYWOOD!

Visit the stars and studios on a tour especially arranged by SCREEN BOOK. See page 20 for details about the great Movieland Tour of 1936! Make your vacation this year a memorable one—and plan it now!

LESLIE HOWARD was selected to play Romeo to Norma Shearer's Juliet after months of tests with a half hundred trying for the rôle.

They do things more quickly in London, strange as it may seem.

In one day, Ned Sparks was selected to play the rôle of Romeo and Mary Brian the rôle of Julie in an English production. Don't go wrong on the spelling. The name of the English picture is Romeo and Julie. Fawncy Ned Sparks as Romeo!

HUGH HERBERT, that sad-faced comic, is willing to raise his right hand and make the customary pledge that this is the truth, the whole truth, etc., etc., etc.

During the filming of A Midsummer Night's Dream, a football pool was circulating around the lot and there was much talk about the season's best and so on.

One of the chorines, mildly interested, finally broke in with this:

"What gets me," she purred, "is why a guy who can write this story of Romeo and Juliet and everything is wasting his time playing football for Notre Dame. My boy friend told me that footballers don't get paid a nickel anyway. Is that guy a chump or is he, I ask you?"

Nobody answered.

Behind the Scenes With Modern Times

Long-time Charlie Chaplin admirers will remember that the comedian's favorite fadeout shows him walking hand in hand with his heroine into the sunset as in this scene from Modern Times

IN A Charlie Chaplin picture, the comedy maestro is always "Head Man." As director, author, cutter and designer, the success or failure of each film falls alone on his shoulders. Like previous Chaplin films, Modern Times was more than a year in the making and cost more than $1,000,000. As is usually the case, Chaplin is in love with his leading lady off-screen as well as on. In this case, however, Charlie's romance with the beautiful Paulette Goddard seems permanent, although both are reluctant to admit that they are married and have been for some time. Chaplin always employs hundreds of extras, entertaining them as well with songs, dances and comical little tunes of his own invention on the piano. For a particular scene, because Chaplin stages are not sound-proof, it was necessary to wait until traffic noises had died away at night before shooting. Charlie hired more than a hundred extras and a twenty-piece orchestra. As the shooting barely started, a sound man stopped everything. "Crickets!" he explained, and the hunt was on. For many minutes an army of spray guns searched the building for the pesky bugs, but to no avail. Shooting was postponed for the night, but the extras were paid in full—a typical Chaplin gesture. Residents of San Pedro, California will recognize much of the picture's background, for it was there that many scenes, including the dance hall and harbor sequences, were filmed.

With the Editor IN HOLLYWOOD

Taking a peek behind the scenes at pictures and personalities in the movie parade

Arline Judge—"It isn't the autograph hunter who must be a virile athlete, but the unfortunate huntee"

Will Rogers—"Be advised, then, that the studio is not making a bold attempt to hoodwink the public"

Lupe Velez — "That lovely little spitfire is domesticated to the point of buying hubby's clothes"

Gary Cooper — "Happily wed to a quiet, lovely girl of considerable social prominence"

PICKING up where Ginger Rogers left off last month, we feel more than a little jealous of her popularity as evidenced by the many congratulatory messages received by stars and admirers alike. All were of the opinion that Ginger's editorial was one of the finest things ever written about Hollywood. Particularly potent, we thought, was this comment from Ginger: "A thing I resent—and I think you do too—is what the actors themselves say about this place. They say it's 'mechanized' and 'no one can call his soul his own.' That seems pretty much like biting the hand that feeds you."

To apply this thought on another situation—a number of stars have been freely quoted on the possibility of leaving California for every imaginable place from Tahiti to England, all because of heavy income taxes. This being a free country, of course, they are at liberty to say anything they please about the tax burden. But when a star earning $300,000 a year complains about being poor as a result of taxes, he or she is certain not to draw much sympathy from the movie-goer who may earn only $3,000, but in proportion has much greater financial headaches. At least, the movie star doesn't have to worry about a $35 grocery bill that may be a month overdue.

● Readers are expressing a considerable amount of curiosity about a telegram sent by Mae West to Ginger Rogers and reproduced last month in SCREEN BOOK. Quite by accident, Ginger's photo obliterated a portion of the telegram, making it unreadable. For curious readers, we reprint Mae's amusing message: "I'VE HAD PLENTY OF EXPERIENCE BUT EDITING IS A LITTLE OUT OF MY LINE STOP THEY TELL ME YOU HAVE DONE A GREAT JOB EDITING SCREEN BOOK AND ARE GIVING THE MEN A BREAK STOP SAVE ME A COPY STOP I MEAN A COPY OF SCREEN BOOK BECAUSE I HAVE PLENTY OF MEN—MAE WEST."

● On one or two recent occasions, columnists and radio commentators have waxed indignant about a man who looks like Will Rogers, whom, they said, the studio intended to use in pictures to take Will's place. There is such a man, yes, but the studio never intended to star him on the screen in place of America's beloved humorist. What the studio does intend to do, however, is to have this man play the rôle of Will Rogers in The Great Ziegfeld—a rôle which would necessarily require a man who did look like Will. The man in question is Andrew A. Trimble of Cleveland, Ohio, and his resemblance to the late humorist is so startling that even Will himself was astounded when they met. If Will Rogers could have voice in selecting a man to relive a portion of his life, however brief, on the screen, he undoubtedly would choose Trimble. Be advised then, that the studio is not attempting to hoodwink the public and that the columnists and commentators who said so were grossly misinformed.

● Editorially speaking, we tread on dangerous ground when we consider the matter of autograph-hunting, which will soon replace bagatelle and ping pong as the most violent of American sports. It isn't the autograph hunter who must be the strong and virile athlete, but the huntee who, immediately on emerging from a theater or night club, is set upon by a flock of well-wishers who push and maul the victim until he finally escapes with major bruises and injuries, not the least of which is a bad case of writer's cramp. In the photo above, Arline Judge is having a comparatively pleasant time of it, but on other occasions the scene resembles nothing more than a race riot. The original autograph hunter, that sterling individual who pursued the signature of his favorite movie star motivated solely by a feeling of admiration, has disappeared more completely than the cigar store Indian. Autograph hunting fast becomes a senseless mania. Some day, just for a change, we hope to see fifty movie stars mob a typical autograph fiend and make him sign his name until he drops in his tracks.

● Love, sing the poets, is a wonderful thing, and pondering on the subject we recall the breathless days when Lupe Velez and Gary Cooper were feeding the flames of a colossal Hollywood romance. Hardly a day went by but that there was a new crop of headlines—but how things have changed! Johnny Weissmuller came into Lupe's life, and now that lovely little spitfire is domesticated to the point of buying hubby's clothes and cooking his meals, when she comes back from her frequent tremendously successful personal appearance jaunts. Gary Cooper, too, has changed. Happily wed to a quiet, lovely girl of considerable social prominence, he has lost his awkward manner and his cowboy-ish reputation. Now, he is a quiet, dignified man of the world and a surprisingly excellent actor.

It is rather nice that everything has worked out this way, and that Hollywood folk run like frightened deer when they suspect a headline in the wind. But one can't help but sigh occasionally for the days when Hollywood romance was like the fitful burning of a torch which, carried high by its giddy bearers, might suddenly flare up and set the whole town on fire.

WHAT A truly Amazing DIFFERENCE MAYBELLINE does MAKE..

Stylists and beauty authorities agree. An exciting, new world of thrilling adventure awaits eyes that are given the glamorous allure of long, dark, lustrous lashes . . . lashes that transform eyes into brilliant pools of irresistible fascination. And could this perfectly obvious truth be more aptly demonstrated than by the above picture?

But how can pale, scanty lashes acquire this magic charm? Easily. Maybelline will lend it to them instantly. Just a touch of this delightful cosmetic, swiftly applied with the dainty Maybelline brush, and the amazing result is achieved. Anyone can do it—and with perfect safety if genuine Maybelline is used. Maybelline has been proved utterly harmless throughout sixteen years of daily use by millions of women. It is accepted by the highest authorities. It contains no dye, yet is perfectly tearproof. And it is absolutely non-smarting. For beauty's sake and for safety's sake insist upon genuine Maybelline. Black, Brown or the new Blue 75c in a gold and scarlet metal vanity case at leading drug and department stores. Purse size 10c at all ten cent stores, where Maybelline Eye Shadow, Eyebrow Pencil, Eyelash Tonic Cream and the special Maybelline Eyebrow Brush are also obtainable in 10c sizes.

"I've found a simple beauty care that really works"

LORETTA YOUNG
Star of the 20th Century-Fox Production
"Lightning Strikes Twice"

"LUX Toilet Soap guards against Cosmetic Skin..."

"USE ROUGE AND POWDER? Like most girls, I do," says lovely Loretta Young. "But I never risk Cosmetic Skin."

Avoid dangerous pore choking Loretta Young's way. Use the soap with ACTIVE lather that goes deep into the pores—removes every trace of dust, dirt, stale cosmetics. Then you guard against Cosmetic Skin—dullness, tiny blemishes, enlarged pores.

Before you put on fresh make-up during the day—ALWAYS before you go to bed, use gentle Lux Toilet Soap. This simple care keeps skin lovely—as you want yours to be.

"Choose your Permanent Wave just as though YOU were a star"

says Perc Westmore, famed hairstylist and cosmetician of Warner Bros. Studios

"WHEN your job, your income and your happiness itself, all depend upon your beauty," says Mr. Westmore, "choosing a permanent wave becomes serious business. You can't 'try on' a permanent and once you've got it—it's yours until you can grow a new head of hair. No room for guessing. No time for experiments.

"I think if Duart Waves were to cost $100, screen stars would gladly pay the price to safeguard the loveliness of their hair and to insure a soft, lustrous wave of glorious natural beauty. Fortunately for them and for you, Duart Waves cost no more than ordinary waves. In every city from coast to coast, there are several shops where you can have your hair waved with Duart's Certified Waving Solution and Sealed Waving Pads, the identical materials used in our own Hollywood salons to wave the loveliest, most celebrated heads in the world.

"Choose DUART for your next wave just as though you were a star—it costs no more—yet think of the thrill of knowing your hair will have the same lovely feminine glamour everyone admires on the screen."

Copy a screen star's hairstyle if you like. The new 1936 Hollywood Coiffure Booklet will be sent you FREE with one ten-cent package of Duart's Hollywood Hair Rinse—not a dye—not a bleach—just adds sparkle and tint.

BING CROSBY is rated in the millionaire class, yet on a recent occasion his personal check could not be cashed in three attempts at the studio. It happened when Bing was getting ready to leave the studio for a broadcast and found himself with no cash. He wrote a check and sent his secretary to cash it. The banks were closed and the studio cashier was not in his office. The girl tried a restaurant across the street and a haberdasher's shop with no success. The explanation is that Bing signed the check with his real name. And his real legal name is not Bing.

PATRICIA ELLIS, "The Most Promising Young Actress of 1935," leads the "sprained ankle" parade at Warner Brothers. First Pat sprained her ankle, then Al Jolson sprained his. Now Bette Davis is laid up with a foot as big as her head as a result of an injury sustained on the set of The Petrified Forest.

ERROL FLYNN has profited greatly by reason of his fine performance in Captain Blood. The studio has torn up his old contract, giving him a brand new one with a big increase. His mail has jumped from five letters a week to five hundred. Among the letters are twenty-four marriage proposals none of which interest him, considering the fact that he is wed to Lili Damita.

What Starlet Next?

Patricia Ellis, seen above in the act of putting on make-up for her rôle in Snowed Under, won SCREEN BOOK'S title as The Most Promising Young Actress of 1935, and is fulfilling the confidence of her admirers. Which starlet will you nominate for the honor in 1936? For a list of a few of the eligible candidates, see page 62. Send your ballot today and do your bit to help along the career of some deserving young actress.

GRETA GARBO'S magic name was used by a smart fly-by-night promoter who opened up a bar here recently. To attract crowds, he put a little sign on the curb out in front of his new place with the following lettering on it: "This Space Reserved For Greta Garbo's Car." Even though Miss Garbo was in Europe, many people preferred to believe the little sign and thought that Garbo was really going to put in an appearance. The promoter, just to be in the clear, actually sent Miss Garbo an invitation to the opening of his new bar. Garbo couldn't squawk, the studio couldn't kick, and the promoter drew huge crowds in front of his place.

ERROL FLYNN has the following story to tell on himself: When Errol was down in the tropics working on a tramp steamer, it was his habit to engage in a

I LOST THAT DIZZY AND BILIOUS FEELING

TODAY I FEEL LIKE A MILLION!

AND HERE'S HOW I DID IT!

When I went to bed last night, I felt dizzy and bilious. So I tried the FEEN-A-MINT 3-minute way that I've been reading about. I just chewed delicious FEEN-A-MINT for 3 minutes, and today I feel like a million dollars. What a difference from the harsh, griping action of old-fashioned "all-at-once" cathartics! It's good for the children too. They love its fresh, minty chewing-gum taste. And don't forget—FEEN-A-MINT is not habit-forming. Ask your druggist for FEEN-A-MINT today—15c and 25c a box.

HOW REAL IS A MOVIE FIGHT?

Fred MacMurray and Henry Fonda stage a fight in The Trail of the Lonesome Pine that is the last word in realism. Both trained athletes, they threw caution to the winds and really fought. They knocked each other down, rolled on the ground, gouging and mauling, and had to be pried apart when the scene was over. It would be nice to say that they rose, smiling, and shook hands, but they didn't until several hours later after first aid nurses patched them up. Both had black eyes, cut lips and bruises from head to foot. Fonda's left leg was lacerated from knee to ankle.

poker game with the other "hands" in his spare moments. It seems that Errol was one of the few white men on the schooner, so, his poker mates were invariably Malays and Orientals. Errol and his few white companions could not figure why they consistently lost at the game of chance whenever a couple of Malays sat in on the game. After many beatings at the hands of the Orientals, it finally developed that they had been talking to one another in their native language and would withdraw their hands in favor of a more powerful hand held by one of their race. Each of the Orientals would have a share in the "pot." Errol caught them dividing their winnings one night and thus learned of their nefarious arrangement. Needless to say, he got his money back.

BING CROSBY was perhaps the greatest movie fan of any of the kids in his neighborhood when he was a youngster. In fact, he was such a fan that it was his habit to slip into the theater of a Saturday afternoon via fire escape. One afternoon while thus engaged, he was caught by the theater manager while in the act of letting in several of his buddies through the same entrance. After a pep talk from the manager, he told Bing that one of the little group must have paid his way in to open the door for the rest of the kids. When Bing admitted that he was the one who opened the door, the manager said, "O. K., then you are the guy who paid to get in. Come on in and see the rest of the show."

MAX FACTOR, Hollywood's beauty expert, says that never before have women's complexions and general make-up been so natural. When he made this statement, he pointed out that such girls as Harlow, Bette Davis, Natalie Moorhead and June Knight have let their hair go back to natural. "However," says Mr. Factor with a twinkle in his eye, "that makes no difference to the cosmetic business for the simple reason that women are buying twice as many complexion cleaners than ever before. Heretofore, they could cover some of their blemishes with make-up."

VICTOR JORY, who was recently laid up from an auto accident, got a great kick out of inventing riddles for his friends to solve when they dropped in to see how he was getting along. The cleverest one to be pulled of all of his was the one he put to Dick Arlen when he stopped by to see him. Jory thought he had Dick stumped when he asked him how far a dog could run into the woods. But Dick had him fooled with his answer, which was: "Only half way, then he starts running out."

ELAINE BARRIE'S presence in Hollywood is Filmland Mystery Number One. Several weeks ago, she arrived, registered at the ultra Beverly-Wilshire Hotel, and promptly became a target for the curiosity of every newspaper reporter in town.

Every studio executive has firmly denied negotiating for her services and to date she has not visited either a studio or an agent.

BRIGHT EYE DEAS
by Jane Heath

NINE women out of ten turn their backs to the light because they think it unflattering; but make this test; you'll never do it again!

First, make up your face. Then take your KURLASH and curl the lashes of one eye. Touch them with LASHTINT and put a little SHADETTE on the upper lid. Now take your hand mirror and seek the full light of your brightest window. You'll find that one side of your face seems infinitely better looking . . . softer, lovelier in coloring, with starry eye and sweeping lashes.

You'll know then why the loveliest women use KURLASH daily. ($1 at good stores.)

At the same window you'll have a chance to see how naturally LASHTINT darkens and beautifies your eyelashes . . . without looking "made-up" either! It comes in 4 shades, in a special sponge-fitted case to insure even applications. $1, also. And the same holds true of SHADETTE. Even in the daytime it isn't obvious—just glamourous. In 10 subtle new shades at just 75c each.

HOLLYWOOD'S "All-American"

W. C. Fields and Freddie Bartholomew in David Copperfield, the year's best motion picture

FOLLOWING the dictates of the public pulse, hundreds of critics the country over announce their selection of the best pictures of 1935 in the annual Film Daily poll. Strangely enough, few of the "Ten Best" pictures were of the modern variety, the public and critics alike preferring costume pictures, old classics and screen versions of popular novels.

The complete list of "Ten Best" is as follows: David Copperfield, Lives of a Bengal Lancer, The Informer, Naughty Marietta, Les Miserables, Ruggles of Red Gap, Top Hat, Broadway Melody of 1936, Roberta and Anna Karenina.

An unusual fact is noted in the discovery that the ten most popular actors and actresses for the most part did not have the double honor of being in the casts of the Ten Best Pictures. Only Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers are exceptions, and two of their pictures, Top Hat and Roberta won the laurel wreath from critics. On the other hand, Charles Laughton, whose splendid performances in Les Miserables and Ruggles of Red Gap was largely responsible for the acclaim they received, does not appear among the ten most popular players. It is a fact, however, that every picture in which he appears never fails to be an outstanding success.

What is your opinion of the "Ten Best?" If you agree or disagree, write your opinion to The Letter Page. See page 14.

Franchot Tone, Richard Cromwell and Gary Cooper in Lives of a Bengal Lancer, 1935's second best

Charles Laughton and Charlie Ruggles, the superb comics of Ruggles of Red Gap, one of the Ten Best

1. When Shirley Temple entered pictures two years ago, few suspected that today a national poll would crown her Hollywood's Number One Actress

2. Despite his tragic death late in 1935, Will Rogers still retained his position as the most popular actor in America. Curiously, polls also pay a similar tribute to Marie Dressler

3. In Number Three position, Clark Gable found himself still high in the hearts of movie-goers when the results of the annual poll of theater owners was announced to the public

4. Ginger Rogers and Fred Astaire together are climbing the ladder of popularity, but the annual poll distinctly shows that they are also near the top individually

5. Joan Crawford's popularity has been consistent for more than four years and before the close of 1936 she is destined to stand even higher in the ranks of feminine screen stars

6. Year after year Claudette Colbert occupies a high position. She didn't appear in one of the "Ten Best" pictures, but she is still "tops"

7. Female hearts continue to flutter around the box office and Dick Powell lands in the first ten. He also stands near the top in radio popularity polls, being one of few doubly honored

8. Good old Wallace Beery! In pictures longer than an elephant can remember, his selection on the "All-American" list is an indication that the American public is loyal

9. Stars go "down and around and around" in the hearts of the public, but comedian Joe E. Brown comes out here among the leaders when the final count is made

10. Two-fisted Jimmy Cagney, last of the "Big Ten," but by a very narrow margin of votes. After his grand work in Ceiling Zero he may rate even higher when 1936 votes are counted

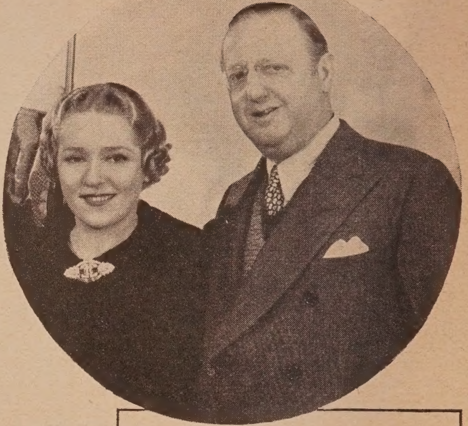
ENTER THE TRADEMARK CONTEST!

Mary Pickford and Jesse Lasky offer valuable cash prizes for one simple idea. Read the rules and enter today!



THE PRIZES

Grand Prize—$500.

Other Prizes—$100 each to trademark winners in Screen Book, Screen Play, Hollywood, Movie Classic and Motion Picture Magazines.

If the winner of the $100 prize offered in Screen Book also is awarded the $500 grand prize, he or she will collect $600.

Total amount of prizes offered—$1,000.

ONE thousand dollars to the readers of Fawcett Publications!

If you want money, here's your big chance.

To help Mary Pickford and Jesse L. Lasky find a trademark for their new company, Pickford-Lasky Productions, Inc., the five Fawcett Publications—Screen Play, SCREEN BOOK, Hollywood, Motion Picture and Movie Classic—have agreed to cooperate with them by asking their 3,000,000 readers to don their thinking caps and see what they can work out. Miss Pickford and Mr. Lasky will give the winners in this contest one thousand dollars in cash, to be divided into six prizes.

There will be a grand prize of $500.00, in addition to which each of the five magazines will offer an individual prize of $100.00 for the best suggestion from the readers of that particular magazine.

After each publication has decided upon a winner, then the trademark will be selected from among these suggestions and will be awarded the grand prize. Thus the person winning the contest receives a grand total of $600.00—the award of $100.00 as first prize from SCREEN BOOK, plus the grand prize of $500.00!

"There is no more interesting phase of modern merchandising than trademark psychology," says Jesse L. Lasky, president of Pickford-Lasky Productions, Inc. "Big business executives and their staff members give ceaseless thought to the subject, because they are convinced that the public is highly susceptible to striking designs, emblems and catch phrases or slogans.

"An arresting or effective design, accompanied by a terse statement, can be the means for fixing a product in the public's mind better and quicker than almost anything else.

"That is why Pickford-Lasky Productions is anxious to get an appropriate trademark. And we want the motion picture patrons who read the Fawcett Publications to help us find the right one.

"Of course we could go ahead and devise our own; but we believe that somewhere in the world—particularly among the three million readers of these magazines—is a person who can think out an even better trade-emblem for us than we could invent.

"All you have to do is to describe your idea as you see it; and then, if it 'gets' us, we will have the best artist available execute the design. It is the idea we want from you. We gladly pay the liberal prize money that is offered."

As Mr. Lasky points out, the right trademark and slogan which will help to establish in the public mind Pickford-Lasky Productions, will be invaluable to his company. "This is distinctly a sales-age," he says. "Practically all people must be spurred to make up their minds as to just what they want to buy."

In making this point, Mr. Lasky gave it as his opinion that "Eventually—why not now?" has probably influenced more buyers than any other sales-resistance overcomer in use.

"So many and varied products," he continued, "are

Romantic evidence of Mary Carlisle's affection for James Blakely exhibited as she leaves Hollywood for England to appear in a British picture

John Gilbert

ALTHOUGH his picture career ended several years before his death, John Gilbert's passing was mourned the world over by stars and movie-goers alike. One of Hollywood's most capable actors, his career was halted abruptly by talking pictures, which by a quirk of Fate did not allow the recording of a voice in keeping with his personality. Gilbert married four times—to Olivia Burwell in 1917, Leatrice Joy in 1923, and to Ina Claire and Virginia Bruce in 1929, the latter divorcing him in 1934. Although a singularly moody person and apparently unhappy in his private life, Gilbert was genuinely loved and respected by his many friends. The Big Parade is considered his best contribution to the screen.

HEARTBEATS: Clark Gable and Jean Parker deny romance rumors . . . The clause in Dick Powell's contract forbidding him to marry has been omitted from his new studio agreement. Dick hasn't done anything about it—yet . . . Paul Kelly and Dorothy Mackaye celebrate their fifth wedding anniversary . . . The Joe E. Browns have been wed for twenty years . . .

BLESSED EVENT: The Fred Astaires became parents of a 6½-pound boy. Mrs. Astaire is the former Phyllis Livingstone Potter, and the baby is to be named Fred, Jr. . . .

A Wonderful Picture

THE best picture of 1935 was undoubtedly The Informer. A picture with an indescribable quality that gripped you by the throat. The superb characterization of Victor McLaglen carried all the pathos and bathos of the whole tragedy of Ireland and her people. The exquisite artistry of the whole production was a triumph of picture-making, from the opening scene in the gray mist of the streets of "dear dhirty Dublin" with the song of the boyish street singer, to the final dramatic moment when the poor tortured soul staggers to the foot of the Crucified One and there yields his burden. The poor little bewildered tailor, dragged from his sick bed to give his evidence was a masterly performance, as was that of the rapscallious little Irishman, always at King Gypo's heels. A wonderful picture and a superb cast.—J. Monger, 26 Hemenway Street, Boston, Massachusetts.

Remarkable Facts About The Country Doctor and the World Copyright, 1936 NEA Service, Inc.

Behind the Scenes with the Quintuplets

By Clark Warren

NEVER in the history of Hollywood has there been a more remarkable picture than The Country Doctor. It is one of few pictures for which a location trip was sent out of the country to film its stars. It marks the first time anyone was paid so high a salary—$450 a minute for appearing before the camera a few minutes a day for less than one week.

The record of The Country Doctor is so filled with remarkable, hardly believable facts that under any other circumstances no one would believe a word of it.

But with the Dionne quintuplets—that's a different matter. In the first place, Marie, Cecile, Annette, Emilie and Yvonne still don't know that they have become Hollywood stars, and won't until they grow to school age and some fond adult, reminiscing over the past, thinks to have the picture shown them. They are as unaware of this as they are of the fact that the late beloved King George of England was their official guardian by an official government act of the Province of Ontario. They didn't know that the familiar, fatherly man who such a short time ago played with them, administered to their physical welfare and supervised their general well Above: Jean Hersholt and Dorothy Peterson with identical duplicates of the tiny chairs and shoes of the Quintuplets, which were used for sequences filmed in Hollywood. Below: The same performers, as doctor and nurse, rehearsing one of the scenes which was filmed in Canada

Dionne Miracle Babies

Although The Country Doctor stars the Quintuplets, the story of the courageous physician has other dramatic and interesting moments. The scene above shows Slim Summerville and Helen Jerome Eddy in a tense and emotional scene with a dying boy being was not their own Dr. Dafoe, but a Hollywood actor by the name of Jean Hersholt.

And being so unaware of it all, they are in the same class with the general public, which, on seeing The Country Doctor, will know as little about what portion of the film was made in Hollywood and which in Canada as it does about telling one quintuplet from the other. But there is a key to the solution of this Hollywood magic puzzle.

The fact is that only two members of the cast—Jean Hersholt and Dorothy Peterson, who play the rôles of doctor and nurse, were permitted to be photographed with the quintuplets. As a consequence, every foot of film showing any part of the famous babies is certain to have been filmed in Canada. However, so cleverly has the film been spliced that the story of the quintuplets and their brief lives seem to run through the whole screen play.

HELLO, ADDIE. ALL ALONE? THOUGHT FRANK WAS COMING TO SEE YOU TONIGHT
HE DID COME, BUT HE MADE SOME EXCUSE AND LEFT EARLY. HIS VISITS ARE GETTING SHORTER AND SHORTER....
SOON HE'LL STOP COMING ALTOGETHER JUST AS JACK HAS.... AND TOM.... AND OTHERS. I WISH I KNEW WHY
ADDIE, DEAR, ARE YOU CAREFUL ENOUGH ABOUT "B.O."? ONE CAN'T AFFORD TO TAKE CHANCES. I USE LIFEBUOY
"B.O." GONE—Addie engaged!
WHAT A GORGEOUS RING FRANK'S GIVEN YOU!
YOU CERTAINLY PLAYED CUPID'S FIRST ASSISTANT WHEN YOU GAVE ME THAT HINT ABOUT USING LIFEBUOY. I'LL NEVER BE ABLE TO THANK YOU ENOUGH!

ANOTHER KISS, DARLING. I CAN'T RESIST YOUR SOFT, SMOOTH SKIN
LISTEN TO MY BRAND-NEW HUSBAND RAVE ABOUT MY LIFEBUOY COMPLEXION!

DO YOU want a fresher, clearer complexion? Use Lifebuoy. It does two important things. Cleanses deeply to rid pores of beauty-robbing impurities, yet cleanses gently. Scientific "patch" tests on the skins of hundreds of women show Lifebuoy is more than 20 per cent milder than many so-called "beauty soaps."

What? "B. O." in Spring?

Yes, indeed! Houses are still heated and stuffy, clothing heavy—a grand invitation to "B.O." (body odor). Don't take unnecessary chances — bathe regularly with Lifebuoy. Its rich, penetrating lather purifies, deodorizes pores, protects against offending. Lifebuoy gives a wealth of lather, even in hardest water. Its own fresh, clean scent quickly vanishes as you rinse.

If you had X-Ray Eyes you'd never again take a harsh, quick-acting cathartic!

You don't need to be a professor of physiology to figure this out. When you take a harsh, quick-acting cathartic that races through your alimentary tract in a couple of hours, you're shocking your system.

Unassimilated food is rushed through your intestines. Valuable fluids are drained away. The delicate membranes become irritated. And you have stomach pains.

What a timed laxative means:

When we say that Ex-Lax is a correctly timed laxative, this is what we mean: Ex-Lax takes from 6 to 8 hours to act. You take one or two of the tablets when you go to bed. You sleep through the night . . . undisturbed! In the morning, Ex-Lax takes effect. And its action is thorough, yet so gentle and mild you hardly know you've taken a laxative.

No stomach pains. No "upset" feeling. No embarrassment during the day. Ex-Lax is easy to take—it tastes just like delicious chocolate.

Good for all ages

Ex-Lax is equally good for grown-ups and children . . . for every member of the family. It is used by more people than any other laxative in the world. Next time you need a laxative ask your druggist for a box of Ex-Lax. And refuse substitutes. Ex-Lax costs only 10c—unless you want the big family size, and that's 25c.

PERFUMES the STARS Prefer

Beauty Service

Grace Bradley, who appears in Anything Goes, favors a delicate scent which she applies with a stopper

EVERY woman should use perfume as the finishing touch to perfect grooming. True, it is a rare woman who disregards scent entirely; but many of us use it only occasionally. The final arrangement of coiffure, the final flick of powder puff and lipstick, the last-minute tilting of hat—these are rites that no woman omits. And she should be just as faithful about applying perfume, for no woman is completely beautified without an aura of lovely scent about her.

It shouldn't be obvious or cloying; it needn't be the particular scent enjoying nation-wide popularity at the time, but a suggestion of perfume should be apparent, whether the occasion is a formal party or a routine shopping tour.

Perfumes are so fascinating and so numerous today, that even the severe sports type of girl who loathes feminine frills can choose a scent that carries the fresh tang of moor or woodland. The quiet, conservative girl has a multitude of modest but poetic floral perfumes to make her more charming, while the exotic girl, who prides herself on her conquests, can claim the subtle assistance of a hundred seductive odors that complement her personality!

And because every woman (though she be basically one of these types) has moods in which she loves to play at being another type, she can call on perfume to help her express the mood of the moment. Even the glamour girl likes to be a shy violet occasionally, and every outdoor girl and home-body is subject to frequent illusions of glamour! Each of these whims can be made more convincing, both to the wearer and her "audience" if she has matched her perfume to her whim!

Even though you do have a favorite scent which you've clung to affectionately, I'd advise you not to use it exclusively. Your olfactory nerves become deadened to its particular odor and you are likely to apply it much too generously. You don't notice the resulting effulgence of scent, but your friends do, and shudder. In the matter of application, most perfume experts insist that it be applied directly to the skin, where body warmth will help to release its fragrance. (Exceptions to this rule are perfumes made especially for furs. . . .) And all experts agree that spraying perfume with an atomizer is most satisfactory and economical. By this method, each drop of precious scent is broken up into minute particles, which do not stain fabric and which give off an immediate fragrance.

NEW FILM NOTES

These Three, starring Merle Oberon, Joel McCrea and Miriam Hopkins, is the new Picture of the Month

On the set—Joel McCrea and Merle Oberon enjoy an economical chocolate soda between scenes

On the set—A closeup of Joel sleeping off the effects of his soft-drinking

By Bill Ulman

THESE THREE

The Story of Two Girls in Love

THE two girls were standing in the gloomy, Victorian room with an air of doubtful possession. Ancestral portraits were glaring at their silk-clad ankles and the long-dead, beaked noses seemed to wrinkle in disdain. The two girls happened to be on the eve of opening a girl's school in New England so that they might portray for Samuel Goldwyn the modified horrors of that famous stage play, The Children's Hour.

The two girls also happened to be Miriam Hopkins and Merle Oberon.

The new title infers a third party to this nefarious scheme—for any scheme to open a girl's school in New England is obviously nefarious—and that party happens to be the local medico, Joel McCrea. Now Joel is a man I admire. He knew he was going to have to play the part of a doctor in this opus, the guy both the girls are in love with, so he decided to really get to know doctors in preparation. He had a baby. That is, of course, with Frances Dee's help, but he contacted the doctors—especially around the first of the month.

And he learned to be calm in any situation—he says.

Well, the day we wandered out on the set to see what was going on, the two girls were standing in the aforementioned room with the aforementioned air of doubtful possession. Bill Wyler, the director, was in the act of establishing that sense of foreboding so common to the latent menace of girls' schools in general when there came a violent eruption from the direction of the stage door. Disregarding all such nonsense as red lights, Joel rocketed on the stage. His breast pocket bulged with cigars, his other pockets full of small packets of candy. Joel beamed.

As though we all hadn't taken one look at that proud pan and guessed the truth, he diffidently, casually commented, "Oh, 'm I interrupting? Sorry! . . . Unh—ah, that is, well, you see—I just had a baby. Sam. Little Sam."

Tripping over a spider box, he added that he wasn't the least bit nervous. As he sat in Bill Wyler's lap instead of the empty chair beside the director, he apologized that the lights blinded him, but he wasn't the least bit nervous, you know. Of course, it wasn't on account of having a wild man on the set, but somehow, nervous or not, no more work was done that day. They decided to celebrate. Joel had the traditional gifts for everybody and started to distribute them, candy for the ladies and cigars for the men.

TO HELP KEEP COLDS AWAY
AH-CHOO!

GARGLE PEPSODENT EVERY DAY

Doctor's Report proves Pepsodent Antiseptic a real help to

KEEP FROM CATCHING COLD!

What 2 winters' test with 774 Illinois people revealed

PEPSODENT ANTISEPTIC

reduced number and duration of colds

• A Doctor made this famous test—he proved that Pepsodent Antiseptic did reduce number of colds! And cut the average length of a cold in half!

He worked for two full winters, with 774 people in all. The people lived together. They worked together. They ate the same foods. Half of them gargled with Pepsodent Antiseptic twice a day. The other half did not.

Those who did not gargle with Pepsodent, had 60% more colds than those who used Pepsodent Antiseptic regularly.

Those who used Pepsodent Antiseptic, and did catch cold, got rid of their colds twice as fast as the others.

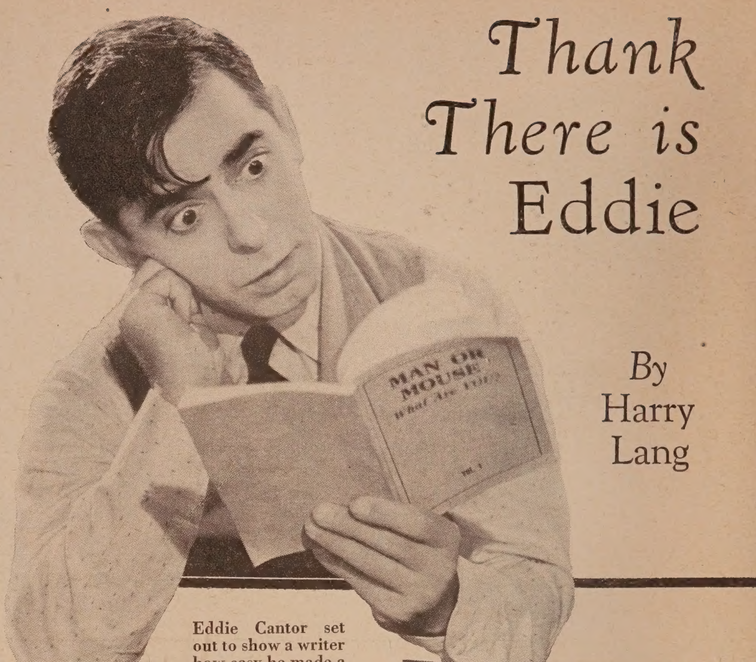
Goes 3 times as far

Pepsodent Antiseptic is extra powerful, but safe! It kills germs in 10 seconds, even when it is diluted with 2 parts of water!

For "Breath Control"—Pepsodent keeps breath pure 1 to 2 hours longer

Thank There is Eddie

By Harry Lang



Eddie Cantor set out to show a writer how easy he made a million dollars, and what followed was a priceless series of comic incidents

WELL, so here I am in the hospital with a complete nervous breakdown, and I suppose if I tried to sue Eddie Cantor, he'd laugh the case out of court.

My story is that it's Eddie's fault I'm here. It all began when the editor of this magazine asked if I could do a story about Eddie. I said: "Sure; for a long time I've been wanting to expose that guy and what an easy life he lives and gets rich on it by just cracking a few rusty wheezes. Sure," I said, "I'll write a story on him, and you can call it The Easy Life, or something like that."

So I sneaked up on Eddie. I got in touch with him at the Goldwyn Studio, where he was just finishing that cinch job called Strike Me Pink.

I figured I might get a little fun out of it myself, so I said to him: "Eddie, I'm going to write a story about how easy you make a million dollars with a few silly jokes."

So he said: "Fine, come and see me."

"Why don't you take me to lunch or something, and then we can talk it over," I suggested. So he went me one better. He said: "Better than that, why not just spend one of my typical days with me, and then you can see better than I can tell you how easy I make that million dollars."

I agreed, and he said to come up to breakfast tomorrow to start the day. "I live at the El Royale Apartments," he said, "with my wife and my eldest daughter. She's twenty-one. The other four are away in school. I'll see you at breakfast."

Author Harry Lang says this photo illustrates his idea of the world's worst nightmare. One Eddie Cantor nearly killed him—what would seven do?

"Okay," said I. "About ten o'clock tomorrow morning?"

"Ten!" he yelled. "Did you say ten? Listen—by me I have breakfast at six-thirty tomorrow morning. You asked to have breakfast. I didn't send for you." And with that he hung up. Well, I was caught. So I went up to his apartment, even though it was kind of early for that sort of thing, I wouldn't mind meeting a millionaire's twenty-one-year-old daughter, I thought. But there was Eddie all alone. "My wife and daughter

Heaven Only One Cantor!

From his hospital bed, a popular writer reports his crazy encounter with the pop-eyed comedian

—they are asleep, you dope. Just because we've got to suffer, should they?" So he said to sit down, that Frenchy was fixing up breakfast. So I sat, and waited for the omelettes aux fines herbs, and the kippered herring and the hotcakes or waffles maybe, and even a couple of chops, because I'm no piker when it comes to a free meal. And in comes Frenchy. [Continued on page 84]

Being choked by a pretty girl was one of the least strenuous things that happened to Eddie during the filming of Strike Me Pink. He spent one entire afternoon having his head stepped on!

"Wear a feather in your hat," says Joan Blondell

PERHAPS it was just a temporary coma, but I was still knee deep in January when your letters started pouring in, asking: "What's new for spring? What are the new colors? What are the new fabrics for evening? Will prints be popular? Will they wear tailored suits again?" So, premature though it seemed, I hurried forth to do a little scouting. And while it is quite possible that before the tulips burst out and the robins start their spring song many new ideas will have crept into the picture, but at the present moment the forecast goes like this:

Will they wear tailored suits again? You might just as well ask me whether the roses will be red again this year. For, so far as Hollywood is concerned, a tailored suit is something about which the rest of a wardrobe revolves. Spring, summer, winter, fall—wherever you see stars, you see tailored suits. For spring they will be double-breasted like your brother's coat and of the same material or casual one-button affairs with a slightly cutaway coat. The favorite color is grey, from light pearl shades to dense smoke tones, with hats and accessories in blending grey or navy accents.

In Wife vs. Secretary you will see Myrna Loy wearing one of the new one-button suits with the cutaway coat. It is tailored in grey men's wear fabric. Instead of wearing a strictly tailored shirt, however, Myrna wears a soft, sheer blouse of white organza with a pleated jabot edged with lace. Her accessories are of black suede and her hat is a little black felt tricorn. Myrna has a weakness for this type of hat.

For sportswear, the "interchangeable" suit is the thing. This is a smart economy note for any girl to adopt, for by using a two-color combination you can inject a lot of variety into your wardrobe at a minimum cost. In Desire, Marlene Dietrich wears a heavy linen tailleur of royal blue. The coat is double-breasted with flat pearl buttons and the short skirt has an inverted kick pleat in the center. In addition to the

The hostess, popular Paula Stone, who entertains Hollywood's most popular stars at her home

A gala event is planned for those who join the Movieland tour!

WHAT more lovely hostess could SCREEN BOOK find for its annual party in Hollywood than Paula Stone?

The piquant star of Slide Nellie, Slide, Treachery Rides the Trail and other new pictures, has invited all the members of our Movieland Tour to come to her house and meet all her friends among the notables of the screen colony—in person!

There'll be Fred Stone, of course; the man who held the spotlight on Broadway for a quarter century with his great musical comedies—The Red Mill, Wizard of Oz, Jack-o-Lantern and others, and who has just begun a great career in Hollywood. Fred Stone and his daughters, Paula, Dorothy and Carol, called The Stepping Stones, are world famous.

You'll have the time of your life meeting them. Fred has just finished Farmer in the Dell, a big 20th Century Fox picture, and he is a born entertainer. As you know, he and the late Will Rogers were lifelong friends.

And you'll adore Paula. She's slim and red headed and bubbling over with vitality. Not long ago she gave a party for her sister, Carol, and invited us.

It seemed as if everybody in Holly-

Hollywood's New Triangle

Myrna Loy and Jean Harlow discuss a delicate situation—and Clark Gable! Well, read the story for yourself!

When Clark Gable and his secretary, Jean Harlow—on the screen, you understand—held a conference in her room, Myrna Loy, the understanding wife, admitted it was a bit too much

If your husband promised to take you on a second honeymoon to Havana, and then went alone, what would you do? Clark Gable and Myrna Loy act it out in Wife vs. Secretary

By Otis Wiles

MYRNA LOY TO DIVORCE CLARK GABLE! JEAN HARLOW NAMED "OTHER WOMAN!"

THAT, my friends, would be the perfect "triangle"—and man what a story! Editors would throw the Ethiopian War into the ash can and shove the New Deal brawl back to the classified ads to splash it on their front pages. Reporters to you—would make a piker of the great Nurmi in their speed to run down the litigants Gable-Harlow-Loy and corner them for columns of quotes.

Just imagine. . . .

Clark and Myrna were happily married for three years, living in perfect understanding with each other. Clark had a lovely secretary, Jean Harlow, a very capable secretary who knew more about his business than he did, himself.

Myrna and Secretary Harlow were on quite friendly terms—when repeated insinuations of gossip, coming not only from her friends but also from her own husband's mother, began to stir up Myrna's suspicions.

They had their first quarrel over it, but they soon forgot it and Clark promised to take Myrna on a second honeymoon to Havana. But Gable, always the impulsive, went to Havana alone to close a certain deal. Even this sudden change of plans failed to wholly disappoint Myrna—until . . .

She called Clark by long distance late one night—and Secretary Harlow answered the telephone in Clark's bedroom! Myrna hung up before Clark could explain and even after he had flown back home she turned deaf ears to his feeble efforts of explanation. . . .

LOVE Confessions of the STARS!

Katharine Hepburn, with Brian Aherne in Sylvia Scarlett, displays a depth of understanding that is a vivid reminder of her first tragic romance

Right: Franchot Tone wed a Joan Crawford who is entirely different from the girl who first came to Hollywood. An early love is responsible

How the first, breathless heart affairs of screen favorites brought miraculous changes into their lives

THERE may be sweeter things than first love, there may be fuller, richer experiences, but never again is there anything quite the same.

In the case of Claudette Colbert, for instance, it played a dramatic part. Had she married her first love there would have been no career for Claudette!

She was a naive nineteen and unkissed. Such an amazing state of affairs can be understood if you know how strict old French families can be. The swains who longed to swarm around the comfortable Colbert apartment there in New York had a taste of frost-bite. Poppa and Mamma Colbert administered that with distinction! Then Mamma got lonesome for France and she hied Claudette off with her—and it was on the boat coming back that it happened.

Mamma, you see, fell asleep. And a young Southerner came charging up. As Claudette soon found out, these Southerners have a way with them. By the fourth night out they were engaged. They were standing in the shadows of the boat-deck, watching the moon trace a path on the sea, when he kissed her. It did something to Claudette—that kiss. Then a dreadful doubt swept over her. She was compromised! A nicely brought up French girl doesn't permit a man to touch her lips until they're engaged. But the young man was putting her doubt to rest by gently holding her in his arms and murmuring, "We can be married right on this ship, honey. Right away tonight, if you'll do it." Claudette wanted to. She saw herself going down to Georgia with him, keeping house for him in some cunning little place, being his wife.

But Mamma, when they roused her, didn't see it at all. She very nearly fainted. There were tears aplenty on that boat because both Claudette and the young man were sincerely in love. There were more tears after they landed for Poppa Colbert didn't like the idea either. In due time he would pick a husband for his daughter but it wouldn't be some

By
Virginia T. Lane

Since her appearance with Clark Gable in Dancing Lady, Joan Crawford has gained much in her ability to portray emotions. It is partially because, as Joan says, there was only one man "who had great faith in me as an actress"

Claudette Colbert once thought she never again could be happy—all because of a youthful romance wrecked upon the shoals of parental objection. Now, as Mrs. Joel J. Pressman, she thinks differently stranger who would cart her away to a distant state!

After weeks of futile pleading, the young man sadly entrained for Georgia—and Claudette went around pale and listless. Then she broached her Big Idea. She wanted to go on the stage. Six months earlier her family would not have listened for a moment. Now—well, it was the lesser of two evils. They didn't consent, but they didn't say "no."

That's the way things happen. You never can tell what's going to result from that first ecstatic touch of romance, where it's going to lead to. And nowhere has it had more important bearing than in the lives of the stars.

WITH Joan Crawford, for example—it is the most significant chapter of her whole story. And up to now it has been the only unpublished one.

Joan was Lucille Le Sueur then. Between those two the poised, cultured Joan and the jazz-mad Lucille—there's a gulf so wide that only love could have bridged it.

Lucille came to Hollywood with nothing more helpful than a chorus background. She was a cute, crazy kid who could out-dance anybody doing the Charleston. But her chances for cultivation of any kind had been painfully slim. Those young emotions and ambitions of hers were about as fluid and fluctuant as the tides. One moment she was making the headlines with Mike Cudahy and on the verge of becoming the glamorous mistress of millions. The next she was all-Bernhardt giving vent to the wild unhappiness stirring under all that gayety. And then Lucille fell in love. Completely, wonderfully in love in a way that had nothing to do with the infatuations she'd called "love" before. Out of that singularly beautiful experience came a new personality—Joan Crawford.

He was not a handsome man. He was small and gentle and brilliant. One of the best liked and cleverest people in the business. And because he was never to know just what he meant in Joan's life his name cannot be mentioned here. "He was the only man out here at that time who had any faith in me as an actress," Joan told me at once. "He taught me. He awakened my mind. Do you know what it means to have someone clear up the dark spots that have puzzled you so? Someone who'll strike through the doubts and discouragement and show you the way?"

He took her to see the best dancers in the world perform. He supplied her with excellent [Continued on page 72]

Words of advice from my good friend Sylvia Sidney well worth your time

Carole

Let SYLVIA Tell You How to Live!

By James Fisher

SYLVIA SIDNEY is a romantic person. You have only to see her in The Trail of the Lonesome Pine to realize that. But she is also practical.

"When I first came to Hollywood," says Sylvia Sidney, "I learned two things. My salary was to be more than I ever had earned on the stage. And Hollywood is a temptress. So I made arrangements to protect myself. I engaged a business manager, who also acts as my agent, and had him fix up a budget for me. I made it his business to see to it that I thought three times before I bought anything. I've discovered that when you pause to think that long about something you usually decide you don't want to buy it."

Here are some of Sylvia's major economies. She had a big house in Beverly Hills for a short time. But she thought about that three times and discarded it for a small apartment. She drives a car that is several years old. She gives no lavish parties. She has a housekeeper who budgets her expenses as carefully as her manager. Above all, she dresses with the utmost simplicity.

Now to go back to that manager of hers who tries to make her live on a budget. Sometimes his days have been as smooth as a billard ball. Others have been as rough as your grandfather's woolen underwear. For instance . . .

We were passing Magnin's and the window was full of winter furs. The sight of them made her chuckle. She recalled a feat of which she is very proud. "I'll never have more fun," she said in answer to my inquisitive glance, "than I had getting that leopard coat—the one my manager found out about through sheer accident. I had worked over my allotted time on a picture and made a bit of extra money. No one knew about it but myself. So I bought that coat I wanted so badly.

"Then the furrier decided I ought to have a little melon-shaped muff to match the coat. That's where I missed my cue. Instead of going down and paying cash for the muff, I told them to bill me. Of course, my manager got the bill which read, 'muff to match leopard skin coat.' He didn't even bother to phone. He came in person to wave the bill in my face. He wasn't just burning either—he was a whole conflagration!"

But even when this woeful star of Mary Burns, Fugitive does turn fugitive from her own budget she still makes sense. A leopard coat, for example. [Continued on page 87]

Be FAIR to MARLENE DIETRICH!

A glamorous, sensational screen star can be a perfect mother. This story proves it!

By James Fisher

I DON'T know what made me ask Marlene Dietrich such a question. I realized she wouldn't want to discuss the subject. It has always been taboo. I must have been unstrung by my nearness to the brittle loveliness of this Hollywood Circe! Her dressing room is tiny. Her skirt seemed rather short. And—well, those famous limbs were very much in evidence! They made me think of The Blue Angel and then of censorship.

Surprisingly enough she answered me. In throaty measured tones she said, "I think that censorship is all right if it is intelligently administered." She paused and then in rather a cryptic fashion added, "You see, I am something of a censor myself!"

She seemed perfectly willing to stop there and allow me to stew in my own puzzlement. Suddenly I remembered the existence of her own little daughter. I knew then that I had found the subject of my interview. "Oh," I said, "you mean—"

She nodded. "Yes—Maria. It is necessary for me to select the pictures she sees. I have to be so careful. In fact, I think it is so important that she should see only the right films that I myself view every one before allowing her to go." The descending cadence of her voice was dismally expressive as she concluded, "It is quite a task!"

But no task is too great for this pale beauty when it concerns the welfare of her Maria. Dietrich may be the Queen of Glamour on the screen. In her chill, sophisticated way she may wreck the screen lives of countless worthy males for your entertainment. She may be beautifully bad. Startlingly unconventional. But in her home she is the wise, the careful mother.

Perhaps it is wrong to designate the relationship between Marlene and Maria as the usual child-parent bond. It is more than that. When seen together they are more

COMEDY and TRAGEDY in Hollywood

A great story from the pen of a famous writer

By JIM TULLY

THOSE who survive in the cinema city must have the capacity to mingle laughter with tears. All things have a barb in Hollywood. When Charles Bickford was recently mauled by a lion while filming a scene, a wag asked, "Did he try to bite the lion?"

Men and women come to the cinema city from the ends of the earth. Wallace Beery, a runaway from home, one-time chorus boy, ex-elephant trainer, and son of a Kansas City policeman, was one of the first to arrive in Hollywood. He is the first illustration of the fact that one must laugh in Hollywood to keep from crying. "I've seen things happen to everyone—so like the character at the finish of Rain—pity is what we have left—and laughter."

Beery is one of the shrewdest men in Hollywood. In films for twenty-three years, he is without a peer as an actor. His rollicking good humor conceals a mind that thinks to the bottom of things, without sentimentality or pretense. Trained in a hard school—he is flint-like, determined. A keen diplomat, he early learned the value of a smile. He seldom talks seriously, always preferring to wear the garb of the buffoon. Only once did I ever hear him discuss books. Very simply he quoted Anatole France. Once, in a group, someone mentioned Gloria Swanson. His comment was, "She used to bring my slippers."

Clark Gable is one of the kindest men in Hollywood. He has been called Valentino's successor. This is a mistake. No individual, whether he be Valentino or Gable, ever had a successor. Gable brings a quality to the screen that may or may not be superior to Valentino's. It is, at least, his own.

Gable was once "on the road." He had a dime left. He flipped it—heads he would have coffee and rolls that night—tails—he would wait till morning. The dime went up in the air—and rolled down a sewer. "I can laugh about it now," said Clark, "but not then."

Once, while dining with Clark, a young girl hitch-hiker introduced herself, saying, "I've always wanted to meet Clark Gable." Clark greeted her kindly. She talked of her wanderings. Clark had to go to a preview. I chatted with the girl. As we left, the cashier of the restaurant handed the girl a sealed envelope. Inside was a twenty-dollar bill.

"Gee—he's a swell guy." There were tears in the girl's eyes.

"That was thoughtful of you," I said to Clark later.

"I remembered the dime that rolled away," returned Clark.

I interviewed Rudolph Valentino once, for a national magazine. A pompous director was with us. We talked of our early beginnings. Valentino spoke of the day when he was a bus boy, and dropped an entire tray of dishes. "The noise drowned out the roar of the elevated railroad," he laughed.

"Yes," finally said the pompous director, slightly melted, "I used to be a truck driver."

We looked, like privates might at Napoleon, and said, "You don't say?" And the pompous director expounded on the dignity of labor. When I started to leave, Valentino called me aside. "Put all that truck driving business in the story," he said, laughing. And I did. The director has not spoken to me since.

There are many tales that never reach print in Hollywood. Sam Wood, the well-known director, once engaged a young woman to jump from a balloon. When she was about to make the jump, he learned that she had never been up in the air before. Wood talked to her.

"Please let me. I need the money," she pleaded.

He allowed her to make the jump. But not all the tale is told. Her two children were destitute. Wood allowed her $150.00 for making the jump. She also worked as an extra during the rest of the film.

And she is now well known in films.

I recall when Kid McCoy, the famous pugilist, worked in a film with Wallace Beery. A young Negro was in charge of costumes for the company. He was the champion boxer of the outfit. McCoy was slightly bald at the time.

"You see that bald-headed guy over there," Wally said to the Negro. "Well, he thinks he can box—I'll arrange for you to put the gloves on with him, but don't hit him hard, just kind of slap him around."

"All right, boss," agreed the Negro.

The Negro strutted before McCoy, proud as four turkey gobblers. Finally he began to hit—the air. Before the round was over, McCoy

SPEAKING About My New CLOTHES

By

Carole Lombard

IT IS not that I've forgotten my New Year's resolution not to discuss clothes, fashion, style and all that sort of thing. But you see I can get around that by not discussing a single garment from the wardrobe of Carole Lombard. I'm going to show you—and tell you a few things about—the gowns I'm wearing in Love Before Breakfast, in which I'm not Missy Lombard at all but a girl named Kay Colby who has loads of money, lives in New York and still demands that Hollywood's ace-designer, Travis Banton, create her clothes.

It seems fitting and proper and very logical to start off with the gown both Travis and I like best. A black satin evening gown which really will establish a new "high" in drapery. This one you'll have to see on me—I mean in the picture, of course, because I'm too busy and bound around with contracts to take a tour of the country right now. But let me promise you that there has never been such a heavenly gown before. The first impression you get is that two slithering pieces of black satin have been tied around my body just before I appear in the scene. The skirt resembles an exaggerated gypsy scarf—tied about my hips and giving that swathed look. The bodice is a reflection of the same treatment and in spite of this very unusual and exciting method of designing a gown the final effect is one of stark simplicity.

With this black satin gown I wear a mad cape of monkey fur. It is cut circular and is about three-quarter length. And this is another little item you'll do better to see than to just hear about. Monkey fur always sounds a bit questionable, but I don't mind admitting that this cape reminded me gently but definitely that there is, after all, a vast animal kingdom full of hundreds of fascinating monsters. And before this welcome period of reminiscence set in I was going around, like everyone else in Hollywood, thinking that silver foxes, minks and anemic-looking ermines had successfully exterminated all the other fur-bearing quadrupeds. Don't think they didn't try, either, and the ultra-chic this monkey fur cape flaunts in their pointed little faces is just what they deserve.

While I'm on the subject of the monkey I want to call your attention to a daytime frock I

Personal Portraits

Introducing Editor Carole Lombard's close friends with comments about them by Carole's able assistant

Congratulations to "Ye Ed."
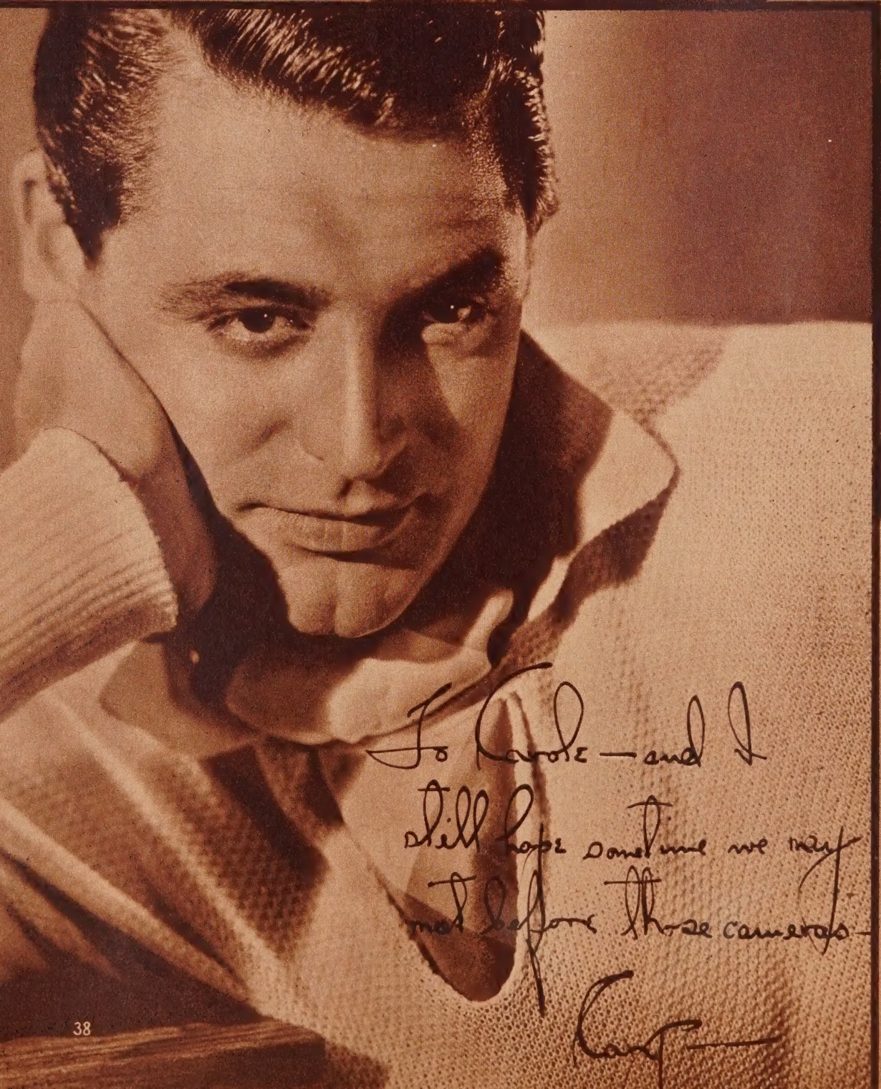
from "Ye Ex."

WILLIAM POWELL

Carole Lombard insisted that the first picture in her Personal Portrait Gallery be that of William Powell alias The Great Ziegfeld, and like the amusing gentleman that he is, Bill submitted this portrait. To be statistical, Bill and Carole were wed on June 26, 1931, and called it quits about a year ago. They are, however, warm friends and truly devoted to each other. It is hard to believe ex-husbands and wives when they say, "We'll always be the best of friends." Carole and Bill don't bother to say that —they just are

CARY GRANT



To Carole—and I still hope sometime we may meet before those cameras—

Cary

He has appeared opposite a good many leading ladies, including Katharine Hepburn in Sylvia Scarlett, but one of Cary Grant's important ambitions is to face the cameras with his good friend, Carole Lombard, to whom he autographs one of his best portraits. A genuine lover of action, he thrives on sports and as for pets craves only the solemn companionship of a Scottie, such as the one he is posed with above

Carole dear —
Here's wishing you lots of success in your new role of editor.
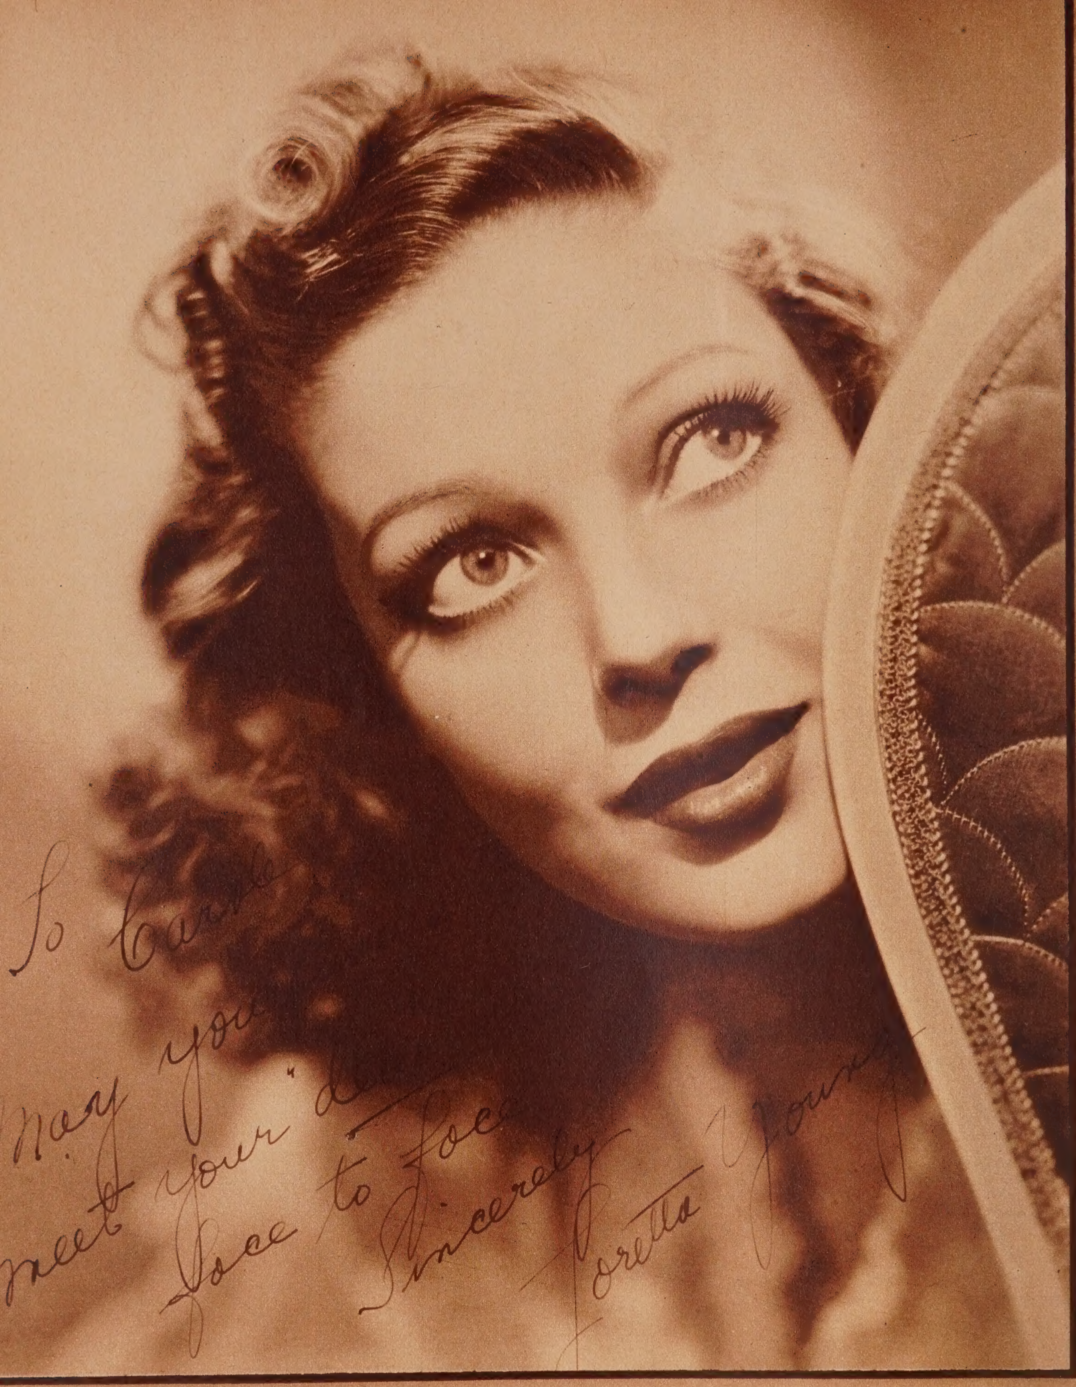
Fondly
Adrienne

ADRIENNE AMES

● Among her feminine companions, Carole Lombard is particularly fond of Adrienne Ames, a former New York society girl who gave up fashion designing for a screen career. These two have much in common, both being modern, clever and among the select group of Hollywood's most fashionable women. Carole says Adrienne has about the loveliest eyes of any girl on the screen, and this portrait is offered in evidence



To Carole
May you meet your "deadline" face to face
Sincerely
Loretta Young

LORETTA YOUNG

The "deadline" referred to in Loretta's autograph means that date by which Carole Lombard had to rush all of her material for this issue to the printer. Loretta knows what "deadlines" are; she has had so many of them in the picture business—one pressing assignment after another until she finally collapsed from overwork and was forced to temporarily retire. Editor Lombard wants to be one of the first to acclaim her return and urge everyone not to miss Lightning Strikes Twice

Why KAY FRANCIS Fascinates MEN

A writer who is hard to impress tells what makes Kay Francis so enchanting. Carole Lombard

ON THE screen, Kay Francis is one of the most fascinating figures a man can conceive. Glamor drips from her. Off the screen she is even more fascinating. Whenever I think of Kay—and it's pretty often—the first thing I think of is her laugh. It isn't the polite society titter you would expect from a sophisticate nor the one she uses on the screen. It is a deep guffaw that seems to come right from the pit of her stomach. You can hear it all over the set or all over any room she happens to be in.

Patricia Ellis once said to me, "The thing I envy most about Kay Francis is not her appearance, her ability nor her position. It is her laugh. I've never heard anyone laugh so wholeheartedly or who seemed to enjoy laughing as much as she."

Kay's intelligence is another of her outstanding traits. You cannot talk to her five minutes without being conscious of it. She doesn't weigh every word but, although she talks glibly, she doesn't talk just to be talking. Except when she's kidding, everything she says means something. Once when I commented on her intelligence she looked vaguely alarmed. "I don't know that I am particularly intelligent," she said slowly, "but if I am, please don't ever stress it."

"Why not?" I asked, amazed.

"Because there is nothing that frightens people so much as a reputation for intelligence. It makes them afraid to talk to you—to open up and be themselves."

Kay is one of the few women I have ever met who doesn't at all mind telling a joke on herself. My first meeting with her occurred at the Fredric Marchs when they gave a small dinner for me and Kay was my dinner partner. She kept us all in stitches throughout the evening with tales of her days in stock companies and the madcap things she used to do.

She is seen at most of the large functions. In the six and a half years I've known her, she has given two large parties. In a town where pretentious affairs are the rule, Kay's were the talk of the place for weeks. Both of them were novel, both of them outstanding for the meticulous care that had been lavished on detail.

I remarked that with her gift for entertaining and making people feel at home, she could easily be a social leader. "I don't want to be a social leader," she replied. "It entails too many obligations and too much responsibility. I'd much rather have a few intimate friends whom I can see often, and pay off my social debts occasionally with a large party than try to give affairs like this all the time."

She is one of the moodiest people imaginable. Either her spirits are in the clouds or she is down in the depths. Once, years ago, she came into a friend's office at the studio, slumped down in an easy chair and started opening some mail. Suddenly she burst into tears, rose and left the room. We never found out what she was upset over. You don't ask Kay things like that.

There is no one in Hollywood more reticent than she about her personal affairs. She will talk freely about her house, her pets, parts she would like to play and things like that. Of the things that are close to her she says nothing—not even to her most intimate friends.

Once I referred to the fact that so little of her personal life finds its way into print. Her explanation was simple. "Most actors are afraid to open their mouths in front of writers or reporters for fear what they say will get into print. I have found it isn't the writers and reporters who circulate the stories about us—it's our friends. Perhaps something has happened to upset me and I go to Susie Smith, a close friend, and tell her about it. Susie does what she can to comfort me. When I am gone, perhaps Emma Blank, [Continued on page 69]

"I'm Not Romantic!"

Preston Foster is emphatic, but pardon us if we disagree!

PRESTON FOSTER is a dour man these recent days. He's glum and dispirited. Like the music, he just "goes 'round and 'round," going in here and coming out there in vague restlessness.

Preston Foster is unhappy because he has no work to do. His latest assignment, Love Before Breakfast, for Universal, has been finished and his bosses at RKO-Radio are letting him rest between pictures, and rest is foreign to his soul.

There isn't a star in Hollywood today who has worked as hard to reach the heights as has this handsome, dark-haired giant. To say he is a glutton for work is to say very little. Within the skeleton confines of a year he has been starred or heavily featured in seven successive pictures without any rest.

Margaret Callahan, Preston Foster's leading lady in The Green Shadow, is among those who insist that Preston is romantic Foster stoutly maintains he has been "lucky." When he says that, he fibs outrageously. He got to the top of the heap by putting every ounce of his dynamic energy into a picture career. Time and again he was thoroughly disgusted with Hollywood. But he never let Hollywood get the upper hand. He never quit, he never weakened. He pounded and pounded away.

"I'm not a shilly-shally, wishy-washy, romantic leading man," he told RKO executives. "But I can act if you'll give me the chance, and I can make good if you'll give me work. I WANT WORK!"

And Preston Foster at last got work. Since that RKO contract date he has made seven successive pictures for his present employers, and was loaned out to star in one for Universal. Jumping into a new picture as soon as his last was completed, he was heavily featured in Strangers All, The Informer, The Arizonian, The Last Days of Pompeii and Annie Oakley, and was starred in We're Only Human and Muss 'Em Up—not to forget his Universal starring vehicle, Love Before Breakfast.

The versatility of the man was amazing. He was cast in a straight lead in Strangers All, with May Robson. He was an Irish [Continued on page 75]

He Won't Talk About Women!

Fred MacMurray and his best girl, Lillian Lamont

—so Fred MacMurray gives a writer just the sort of story women will rave about

ON THE old Vitagraph lot, some eight years ago, a super-fight scene was being filmed.

On the left—"Hey, you lunk, move over into camera range, there"—was a crowd of huskies, dressed in the plaid mackinaws of the backwoods. On the right—"Come on, guys, get a little more HATE into those mugs!"—was another baker's dozen of bearded extra men, clad in the same togs.

At a given signal, the two groups met in the exact center of the camera's field—and the battle was under way. Pulled punches, at first—and then, goaded by the director's sneers, the blows began to gather power. Gouging, kicking, slugging, the hired "airdales" merged into one great mass of cursing humanity.

The director nudged his assistant. "Look at that big —— mix it up," he whispered. "He's got his man down and listen to him yell!"

"Cut! Okay, boys. That looked good!"

And the big ——, whose name was Fred MacMurray, scrambled to his feet, dusted his clothes and grinned at his erstwhile enemy, who groaned:

"Listen, you lug, lay off from the ticklin'. I won't take it—not for five bucks a day!"

That was eight years ago—and eight years, in this merry-go-round they call the picture business, is a long, long time. Today, Fred MacMurray's a star, one of the best box-office names in the industry, and [Continued on page 77]

Leslie Howard's STRANGE Confession

Even those who are close friends of the star of The Petrified Forest are not aware of his amazing conviction

I DO NOT think that I am temperamentally suited to be an actor.

This verbal bombshell was dropped by a man who is unquestionably one of the best actors on the screen today; one who is able to pick and choose the rôles he will play and who can practically name his own figure when it comes to salary. I mean Leslie Howard. He was not talking for "effect" and the above remark was not the result of his being temporarily fed up with it all.

"A true actor," he went on to explain, "is an exhibitionist. He enjoys the spotlight and instinctively knows ways and means to achieve it. He appreciates the value of personal publicity and when he is interviewed by the press he makes an effort to be exciting while I—" Mr. Howard paused with sudden embarrassment.

And well he might, for he had entirely forgotten our interview, even though he had named the hour himself, and was out playing polo when I arrived at his home.

Mrs. Howard very graciously invited me to wait. "Although I won't guarantee that Leslie will put in an appearance," she said. "He has a habit of making dates and then forgetting all about them."

This habit of forgetting dates and the fact that even when he is finally corralled he has a way of suddenly disappearing has caused Leslie to be nicknamed "The Phantom."

"It is really uncanny," his friends will tell you. "You can be talking with Leslie, or at least think you are talking with him, and suddenly you look up and he simply isn't there."

This, however, did not happen to [Continued on page 68]

HEPBURN'S Narrow Escape

An amusing fact story about a colorful actress we all admire Carole Lombard

By Harry Lang

THIS is the story of the little boy who wanted Katharine Hepburn's autograph. Now, Hepburn's autograph, in case you don't know, is about the most difficult to secure in Hollywood. It's as tough as Garbo's. It's not that Katie wants to be mean or unobliging, she says, but she honestly believes all this autograph-album and autographed-photo stuff is silly and doesn't really mean anything. And that brings us to this rainy night in Hollywood, and the preview of Hepburn's Sylvia Scarlett—and the little boy. . . .

Katharine Hepburn

He's just a snub-nosed, freckle-faced little Irishman with red hair, and he lives in Hollywood, and he has an autograph book full of the biggest names on the screen. But he didn't have Hepburn's, and he wanted it. The kid, being a veteran hunter despite his youth, knew that Katie would attend the Sylvia Scarlett preview, so there he was, outside the theater.

He saw her drive up, with her secretary-companion, Laura Harding, at the wheel. He saw her step out and dash into the theater. He couldn't squeeze through the crowd quickly enough to nab her. So he decided to wait until she came out again. He stood and waited.

One of those rare Hollywood storms broke midway through the picture. Most of the standees outside melted away. But not the kid. He hung around in the shelter of the marquee, autograph book in one hand, pencil in the other.

The picture ended. The crowds came out, but no Hepburn. He didn't know that Katie, wise to the waiters-outside, had sneaked out through the back door of the Ritz theater, and into the alley in back. She didn't know it was raining until she'd gotten out and the door had spring-locked behind her. She scurried through the rain to the corner—and stopped dead. She saw the crowd waiting. She hates crowds. Between the downpour and the crowds, she chose the downpour.

It was there, ten minutes later, that a worried press agent discovered her, sitting forlorn on a curbstone, rain soaking into her clothes.

"Laura's waiting for you out front," he said. "Come on!"

"I won't," she said.

"Why not? You'll get your death of cold."

"I won't face that crowd," she said. The press agent knows his Hepburn. He knew she meant it. So he hurried to the front of the house, hailed Hepburn's car, told Laura where Katie was hiding out.

But the kid's sharp eyes caught the by-play. He was smart: wise to Hollywood tricks. Like lightning, he ran after the car. Just as he caught up with it, Hepburn was clambering in.

"Hey!" he yelled. "Hey—Miss Hep—hey, KATIE!"

For one startled moment, Hepburn looked. In that same moment, the press agent did what he is paid for. He grabbed the kid and held him while Katie's car whirled away.

"Aw, y'big stiff!" shouted the kid—at the press agent, not Katie. "I'll tell my big brudder!!!" Even Katie laughed at that ageless parting shot of a frustrated kid as the car rolled off, the kid still scrambling in the man's arms.

AND so, a couple of days later, when the sun was out again and everybody was feeling good, Katie Hepburn rolled away from her Brentwood house one morning for the studio. Katie was alone in the car—it was that amazing station-wagon Ford that she drives, and that every traffic cop in Hollywood knows.

Katie was feeling swell. She was bowling along at forty miles an hour without a care in the world—until she came careening down Melrose avenue, which leads to Radio Pictures' studio, and hurtled down on the LaBrea avenue crossing. A couple of hundred feet before she hit it, the traffic signal whirred and clanged—and the GO sign changed to the red STOP.

But Katie didn't stop. Katie was feeling swell, and besides, a gal can take a chance now and then, can't she? So Katie took a chance, and went through the STOP signal at forty. As she flashed across, she heard the wail of a police siren.

The smile flicked off her face as she snatched a look into her rear-view mirror. And there she saw the uniform of a traffic cop on his white, red-headlighted motorcycle, roaring around the LaBrea corner. Katie went into a panic. Instead of stopping and taking her medicine, she stepped on it!

Behind her, the cop's siren howled again. Katie's foot stepped harder. The needle on her speedometer shot up. Two blocks in the rear, twisting the handle of his machine to feed it more gas, came the motor cop, roaring

ROMANCE WITH MUSIC, starring Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy, who scored a tremendous hit in Naughty Marietta, released early in 1935. THE PLOT—Jeanette, as a noted opera singer, ventures into the Canadian wilds with an Indian guide to meet her fugitive brother. The guide deserts, and to her assistance comes the Royal Mounted Police in the person of Nelson Eddy who fails to realize that the criminal he is hunting is the brother of the girl with whom he has promptly fallen in love. CRITICAL OPINION—Superbly directed, capably acted to the tune of Friml's haunting, beautiful melodies, there is hardly a weak point in the entire picture. Highspot of Rose Marie is the Indian Love Call duet sung by MacDonald and Eddy with the assistance of highly competent echoes. Rose Marie should take its place among the ten best pictures of 1936.—Produced by Metro.

COMEDY, TRAGEDY AND ROMANTIC DRAMA all wrapped up in one picture makes it impossible to neatly classify The Petrified Forest, a screen version of the Robert Sherwood play which scored a great hit on Broadway last season. THE PLOT—As the emotional daughter of a desert gas station proprietor, Bette Davis meets hitchhiking Leslie Howard who looks upon himself as a decadent and worthless member of civilization. During their short and hectic romance they find in each other an excuse for life—and death. Smashing, two-fisted adventure bursts into the picture when a fleeing gangster takes possession of the filling station and holds its occupants prisoner while waiting for his henchman. Wife Versus Secretary

★★★½

DRAMATIC ROMANCE with universal appeal, Wife Versus Secretary is a screening of the popular Faith Baldwin story with Jean Harlow, Myrna Loy and Clark Gable its triple stars. THE PLOT—Clark Gable is the handsome young business executive loved by two beautiful women. One is Myrna Loy, the constant wife who sits home and waits and waits; the other is Jean Harlow, the dazzling secretary who is as competent in matters of the heart as she is in business. Matters come to a dramatic climax when Clark promises to take his wife on a second honeymoon and at the last moment makes it a solitary business trip. (See story on page 27.) CRITICAL OPINION—Deftly handled with an invisible bow to the legion of self-appointed guardians of the screen's morals, the picture retains color and strength.—Produced by Metro.

The Lady Consents

SOPHISTICATED COMEDY DRAMA gives Ann Harding a good rôle which in a measure will help re-establish her after a number of weak pictures. THE PLOT—After seven years of happy married life, Ann Harding, playing the wife, divorces her husband who wishes to try marriage a second time with a comely young tennis champion. Living with the belief that "he may be married to her but I am still his wife," Ann goes through a certain amount of emotional suffering, but in this picture she "suffers" with less agony and more humor than previous similar formulas. She wins back her husband by a clever device and all ends happily. CRITICAL OPINION—Similar plots have in the past been sleeping powders to the audience, but the sincere performances of Miss Harding and Herbert Marshall lift this picture out of the rut.—Produced by Radio.

Wealthy Walter Connolly suffers severe shock

Soak the Rich

★★½

FARCE COMEDY, produced by Hecht and MacArthur who have a nack of turning out pictures which create minor wars among critics who are about equally divided in their opinions that H. & M. produce either the world's worst or the world's most superb motion pictures. THE PLOT—Walter Connolly is the wealthy man who is greatly pained by "soak the rich" propaganda and is reduced to a state of near insanity when his daughter, attending the college he built, falls in love with the leader of a small group of radical students. She is kidnapped by a lunatic, rescued amid much horse play and finally rejects her violent suitor. CRITICAL OPINION—Sophisticated audiences may feel that this picture deserves a higher rating, yet few will feel that it rates in the class with The Scoundrel, an earlier Hecht and MacArthur offering. The average patron is liable to feel that his money has been well spent only if there happens to be a Mickey Mouse cartoon on the program. Those who do not see Soak the Rich will miss out on a good many heated arguments.—Released by Paramount.

Anything Goes

★★★½

Musical Comedy—This is the most ambitious Bing Crosby picture in some time, and as a screen version of the stage hit loses none of its peppy comedy values. The Plot—Bing Crosby is the young broker who sails on a vacation cruise to rescue a maiden in distress. He falls heir to the passport of Public Enemy Number 1, who is dodging arrest, and spends the rest of the merry, hectic picture trying to escape the law and rescue his maiden at the same time. It is all highly insane and wonderfully amusing. Critical Comment—There is nothing to moan about in this happy cinema event which presents Crosby in the gay, carefree type of rôle he should always have. Snappy, lovely Merman is plus perfect with her songs, and Charlie Ruggles, playing the rôle of a gangster disguised as a clergyman, offers a hysterical comedy performance.—Produced by Paramount.

Bing Crosby breakfasts with Charlie Ruggles

Colleen

★★½

Musical Comedy that presents a cast of great favorites, beautiful dance numbers and seemingly millions of well-torsoed beauties. The Plot—Here lies the weakness. With a better story, this picture might have been top notch, but concerning as it does the familiar story of Hugh Herbert's difficulties with a gold-digger and the not too exciting romance between Ruby Keeler and Dick Powell, Colleen lacks weight. Critical Opinion—It may be slightly unfair to take the edge off this film's appeal on the grounds of its story, for there is much to attract the movie-goer, particularly the legions of Dick Powell-Ruby Keeler admirers. Hugh Herbert does a grand comedy job, but the picture's real stars are Jack Oakie and Joan Blondell who are deliciously funny at all times. Ruby Keeler's dancing is superb.—Produced by Warner.

Gold-digging Joan Blondell and Mr. Jack Oakie

The Milky Way

Comedy, marking the return of Harold Lloyd in one of the funniest comedies produced since talkies began. The Plot—Harold Lloyd is the goggle-eyed milk man who just by accident knocks out William Gargan, who plays the world's middleweight champion. Adolphe Menjou plays the part of the smart manager who grooms Lloyd for the big-time prize ring. Helen Mack is satisfactory as Harold Lloyd's sister. Critical Opinion—This is the best of all Lloyd's comedies. In The Milky Way he is less kittenish, more the he-man, more the type of robust comedian the public prefers. One complaint and one complaint only is that the laughs come so closely on the heels of the following guffaws that the howling of the audience will make many a movie-goer miss some of the funniest dialogue.—Produced by Paramount.

Tough Guy

Romantic Comedy Melodrama—Quite a classification for one picture, but fails to fall under one of the simpler labels. Suitable entertainment for the family. The Plot—A dog is the hero of the picture, none other than Rin Tin Tin, Jr. The story deals with Jackie Cooper as a runaway boy who falls in with a desperate outlaw. Joseph Calleia, rapidly becoming the screen's foremost villain, shoots and wounds the dog when Jackie tries to escape from his clutches, but he suffers a change of heart and in the end sacrifices his life for the boy. Critical Opinion—Sophisticates are apt to turn up their noses at the sentiment in this picture, but to the millions who know and appreciate the depth of a boy's love for his dog, Tough Guy will tap emotional depths touched by few films.—Produced by Metro.

Shirley Temple—It is impossible to classify a picture in which Hollywood's most popular star appears. Those among the little sprite's admirers need only to see her name on a marquee to know that the picture is good; those who are not enthusiastic about Shirley know better than to start an argument. The Plot—This time Shirley is the adopted daughter of Guy Kibbee, who plays the rôle of a lighthouse keeper, and the story is concerned with her efforts to evade a mean old truant officer. Critical Comment—Shirley Temple is better than ever as she contrives to bring laughter and tears from the audience in the brief space of one hour with her dancing, singing and remarkable interpretation of the character she portrays. Others in the cast, including June Lang, Buddy Ebsen and Slim Summerville are excellent.—Produced by Twentieth Century-Fox.

ANY NOSE IS CONSPICUOUS without moisture-proof powder

Combat shine, floury streaks, clogged pores with Luxor, the truly moisture-proof and shine-proof face powder 6,000,000 women use!

● So many women are cheated of poise and charm by shiny nose, floury streaks, clogged pores! Yet a simple change to Luxor, the moisture-proof face powder, often clears up these conditions like magic!

The secret is simple. Tiny pores on your face give off moisture. If face powder absorbs this natural skin-moisture, a paste results. Nose and face look shiny, floury streaks form, and often pores themselves clog up.

So discard, today, whatever face powder you may be using. And try Luxor on our money-back guarantee.

Make this test. Put a little Luxor powder in a glass of water. Note how it stays soft and fine—won't mix into paste. Thus you know Luxor won't mix with skin moisture and cause shine and blemishes. To induce you to try this marvelous face powder in a range of smart modern shades, we offer this gift at any cosmetic counter:

A Free 2-dram Flacon of Perfume

La Richesse by name, and selling regularly for $3 an ounce. Both powder and perfume are wrapped together, and sell for the price of the powder alone, 55c. Small sizes of Luxor powder at all 10c stores. Try it today.

The advantage of having all your cosmetics, your bath salts, bath powder, toilet water, sachet, soap and perfume in harmony is obvious; more and more fastidious women are adopting this idea of a symphony in scent, and lavender, violet and lilac seem to be favorite "theme scents." If you, too, are interested, I'll be glad to send you the trade name of a one-perfume line of toiletries.

A lovely bouquet perfume—a blend of carnation, rose and jasmin—with a heart-lifting quality is Ybry's Joie de Vivre. Depending on the amount you use, you can fit Joie de Vivre into your daytime regime or your formal evening picture. Just apply it more generously for evening. The crystal flacon, in pyramid shape that is so suggestive of an Oriental temple, rests like a large topaz in a satin-lined box. Joie de Vivre (ask for Joy of Living if your French is shaky!) is priced at $8 for one ounce, $4.50 for one-half ounce.

The beautiful cellophane drum which contains Pond's face powder and powder puff

Dorothy Gray's remarkable Triple compact. Just the thing for the Easter Parade!

SOMEONE is always thinking up new things that surprise me! For example, the Wrisley people, famous for their gardenia soap, have brought out a large cocktail shaker filled with Wrisley Bath Crystals. It's thirteen inches tall, is made of frosted white glass and has a black bakelite screw top. Under the cap is a strainer to keep lemon seeds out of your guests' cocktails—after you've had the fun of using the bath crystals, which are powder-fine and floral in scent. This attractive novelty costs only $1.50.

When you join the Easter parade in your new Spring outfit, I hope you won't be using a battered old compact! My suggestion is that you provide yourself with one of Dorothy Gray's stunning Triple Compacts in a combination gold and copper finish. They're as flat as can be, and smartly modern in design, with room for your monogram on the cover. There's a large mirror, a lipstick, and roomy compartments for rouge and powder—all the essentials in one slim case. Looks far more than its price—$3.50.

I photographed that hand-painted cellophane drum of powder puffs partly because they look like gaily-covered Easter eggs, but mostly because I want you to become sanitary-minded about powder puffs. These disposable swirls cost only fifty cents and will last for weeks. There are two of the swirls beside that box of Pond's Face Powder, seen above, so you can see that they're comfortably large. They come packed in rainbow formation in blue, yellow, peach and pink and are made by the Parfait Powder Puff Company.

The attractive glass jar with its flower-wreathed blue-green top, which contains Pond's Face Powder, is a real foretaste of the powder's general excellence. Its wide variety of skin-matching shades and its fine but clinging texture are achievements in face powder technique. It is priced moderately, too, at only thirty-five and seventy cents a jar.

In case you prefer a liquid make-up to a face powder, don't overlook the staying qualities of Raydence, made by the Sensation Cosmetic Company. It comes in an opaque bottle with silver and black label, and in the following expressively-named shades: Moon Shadow, Swan, Peach Rachelle, Brunette, Peach Tan, Continental and Carioca. A four-ounce bottle retails at $2 and a smaller purse size at fifty cents. Raydence acts as an astringent, powder base and powder and is a very smooth evening make-up, in two senses of the word!

If you have a personal beauty problem or wish to inquire further concerning any of the products mentioned in this article, write to Janet Lynn, SCREEN BOOK, 1501 Broadway, New York City, enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope (U. S. Postage Only) for a prompt reply.

Those HOLLYWOOD Kisses!

By An Anonymous Reporter

Franchot Tone kisses Bette Davis in Dangerous but not in just the way Hollywood does its private life caressing

THERE are kisses and kisses, of course, but they all prevail in Hollywood. It's probably the most kissful city extant—and kissing's being done by the nicest people.

Just a few of them "make me immortal with a kiss," as it were, but these cannot be counted upon in public places. And that "long, long kiss, a kiss of youth and love" is apt to be sort of private, too. "The one kind kiss before we part" goes rather well in the divorce courts, and is usually preceded by the "In short, my dearie, kiss me and be quiet" variety.

For all the stage's superior culture, art and dignity, it was the advent of the theater recruits to pictures that really introduced expansive and all-encompassing kissing into Hollywood. It's their ebullient desire to be affectionate, and after all, a mere handshake is so cold and formal.

May Robson, during her fifty years of professional life, has kissed an average of ten people a day, young and handsome masculinity preferred. May probably began shyly, modestly, in the Victorian decade, but has become fondly expansive as the years go on, so that at her birthday party she kissed everybody from Freddie Bartholomew to Louis B. Mayer, including females. Lucille and Jimmie Gleason run her a close second, since they would not think of giving a party without kissing every last guest both upon arrival and departure. And the thing is so catching, so that the guests start kissing everyone, too, and there you are, don't you know.

WHEN kisses were splashing all over the screen, the off-the-lot kissing was milder, less universal. But with the screen outlet reduced to a minimum, the slack had to be taken up somewhere. There must be no ploughing under of kisses. A mild Englishman who came out here to write for the films found it so astonishing to be airily kissed by so many charmers (in the upper brackets of fame, too,) that he has kept a neat record. It would, he thinks, be absurd to uphold any "Kiss and never tell" standards, in a community where people who withhold kisses are regarded as cold and aloof.

He has likewise tabulated the type of kiss conferred upon him—Elissa Landi's cheek-brushing while she kisses the air; Lupe Velez and Fifi D'Orsay's tempestuous varieties; Jeanette MacDonald's comradely pout; the Norma Shearer and Joan Crawford amused condescension; the Marlene Dietrich promiseful suggestion that rarely materializes; the maidenly, friendly type bestowed on and by, say, Lois Wilson or Mary Brian; the impish "You mustn't but I know you'd like to" effect conveyed by Merle Oberon, thus preserving her lipstick effect intact; and there's a memory of Pola Negri, who was selective but thorough when the occasion warranted.

Consider a situation in which a director and his wife, and an actress and her husband meet at a party. The director and the actress kiss as a matter of course. Whereupon the actress' husband, meeting the director's wife for the first time, finds himself in a quandary. Should he kiss the lady? He usually does, for, after all, it seems the gentlemanly thing to do. Thus, with complete rectitude, husbands kiss other men's wives all over Hollywood from sheer courtesy.

Ramón Novarro rather held the palm for kissing all types of femininity, from the glamorous star to the least seductive female fan writer. Francis Lederer seems almost about to, but kisses hands instead, which is nearly as good and less committal. Wally Beery has a hand-stroking, arm-squeezing system that fulfills all requirements.

GENTLEMEN list numerous ladies with whom it is well to hesitate. It is not safe to rapturously embrace Ann Harding, Helen Hayes, Ina Claire, Irene Dunne or Sylvia Sidney, without definite encouragement. This sort of thing confuses the issue, and requires gentlemen to be mindful of their hunches. One sees so many of the men at Hollywood parties in that meditative mood which denotes the awkward necessity of making a delicate decision. With everybody doing it, the thing still calls for a certain amount of tact. When in doubt, the reverent forehead kiss seems to meet the situation.

There's a hasty peck that serves on a good many occasions, especially between females. The girl who puts her arms around one, but kisses the air behind the left ear, is approved, because even the most affectionate gentlemen find it embarrassing to display a red lip-print on their cheeks.

All sorts of people who came to Hollywood almost kissless have acquired an expansive and all-embracing efficiency in no time at all. And, really, one is apt to be a bit out of things, if one doesn't.

Don't let Adolescent Pimples give YOU a job problem

FROM the beginning of adolescence—at about 13 until 25, or even longer—young people are frequently worried by pimples.

Important glands develop and final growth takes place during this time. This causes disturbances throughout the body. The skin becomes oversensitive. Waste poisons in the blood irritate this sensitive skin. Pimples pop out!

But you can overcome these adolescent pimples. Fleischmann's fresh Yeast clears the skin irritants out of your blood. Unsightly pimples disappear.

Eat Fleischmann's Yeast 3 times a day, before meals—plain, or in a little water—until your skin is entirely clear. Start today.

SPENCER TRACY Talks About HIS PAST

Emerging into the spotlight with such leading ladies as Myrna Loy, the remarkable Spencer Tracy comes to another turning point in a colorful career

THERE is no one in pictures with more and more varied experiences than Spencer Tracy has had. "Spence," I asked him recently, "what were the most colorful incidents in your life?"

Spence pulled at his nose with his thumb and the side of his forefinger, as you've often seen him do in pictures, and considered. "Gosh, I dunno. I suppose one of the funniest things—although it didn't seem funny at the time—was shortly before Johnny (his son) was born. We had been out of work in New York most of the summer. We took what money we had, figured out how much we could spend a week from then until the baby was born and that was what we lived on. By the time the room rent was paid we had about forty cents a day for meals. Louise had to have nourishing food on account of the baby. I figured she could eat comfortably on thirty-five cents a day. That left a nickel a day for me. So I went on what is known to actors as a "rice-pudding diet." There is nothing more filling than rice pudding and it's fairly nourishing, too. I knew every restaurant in New York from the Bowery to the Bronx and could tell you off-hand which ones put the most raisins in and which ones served the most milk with the stuff.

"Well, there were little incidentals we hadn't counted on and the money began to run short. Not long before the baby came I got a job with a stock company in New Jersey. The night before the company opened, we hadn't eaten all day and we had five cents left. I tried to get an advance from the company but there was a rule you couldn't draw against your salary until after the show had opened. So, when the company had been dismissed for the night, Louise and I went into one of those dairy restaurants that have chairs with arms on them. I ordered an egg sandwich for five cents and we cut it in half."

Spence laughed mirthlessly. "I'll never forget us sitting there in that glaring light, hungry as a couple of starved animals, each trying to make that half of a sandwich last as long as possible.

Somehow, the mental vision of those two hungry, forlorn kids, nibbling at that piece of bread and egg and each pretending, for the other, that it was plenty, didn't seem very funny to me. I could only nod and ask, "What else?"

"Well, the next thing was almost right after that. That stock company barely lasted long enough for us to get the wrinkles out of our stomachs and our debts paid up. So there I was out of work again. We went back to New York and I started pounding the pavements looking for work. Finally I had a job offered me with a stock company in Winnipeg, Canada. The only fly in the ointment was I had to pay my own fare up there. Somehow I managed to borrow enough for our transportation and to keep us going during the rehearsal period.

"After what seemed an eternity, we opened. The first week we weren't paid because the manager said he had to pay off the local firms to which he owed money. We got through the second week and after the Saturday night performance we looked for the manager and found he had absconded with the two weeks' receipts! We were stranded!"

"What a rotten break!" I sympathized.

SPENCE shrugged. "Nobody's life is all beer and skittles. You've got to take things as they come. There was another time I was playing in New York in a comedy called Whispering Friends. It was the last night of the run. At seven o'clock I found out my father was dying. I had to go on and play the performance. By the time it was over my father had passed on. The company was leaving next day for Chicago. I left with my mother and brother and accompanied the remains to Freeport, Ill. The interment was Monday. I stayed for that and left at two o'clock for Chicago. I got there in time for the evening performance, went on and played—in a comedy!"

IT'S THE WRONG TIME OF THE MONTH

NONSENSE!
TAKE SOME MIDOL
AND YOU'LL BE YOURSELF

Don't Suffer From "REGULAR" Pain

It's an old-fashioned girl who still suffers each month when there is really no need to! It's just too bad for the girl who doesn't know she can keep her dates and keep comfortable. This is the way:

Watch the calendar. At the first sign of approaching pain, take a Midol tablet and drink a glass of water, and you may escape the expected pain entirely. If not, a second tablet should check it within a few minutes. Midol often helps women who have always had a very hard time. And the relief is lasting; two tablets see you through your worst day. Yet they contain no narcotic and form no habit. They do not interfere in any way with the normal and necessary menstrual process. But don't be fooled by ordinary pain tablets offered as a specific for menstrual pain! Midol is a special medicine offered for this special purpose.

Must you favor yourself, and save yourself, certain days of every month? Midol might give you back those days you have had to be so careful. You can get these tablets in a trim little aluminum case at any drug store.

IF YOU ARE WEAK, PALE RUNDOWN AND SKINNY MAKE THIS SIMPLE TEST

See How NATURAL IODINE Builds Worn-out, Pale, Sickly Folks Into Strong, Red-Blooded Men and Women

Kelpamalt, New Mineral Concentrate from the Sea, Rich in NATURAL PLANT IODINE, Feeds Starved Glands—Must Build Good Red Blood, Put on Lbs. of Solid, "Stay - There" Flesh, Give Steady Nerves and Day - Long Energy in First Week or Trial Is Free!

As the result of tests covering thousands of weakened, run-down, nervous, skinny folks, science now claims that it is GLANDS STARVING FOR IODINE that keep you pale, tired-out, underweight and ailing. When these glands don't work properly, all the food in the world can't help you. It just isn't turned into "stay-there" flesh, new strength and energy.

The most important gland—the one which actually controls body weight—needs a definite ration of iodine all the time — NATURAL ASSIMILABLE IODINE—not to be confused with chemical iodides which often prove toxic. Only when the system gets an adequate supply of iodine can you regulate metabolism—the body's process of converting-digested foods into firm flesh, new strength and energy.

To get this vital mineral in convenient, concentrated and assimilable form, take Kelpamalt—now recognized as the world's richest source of this precious substance. It contains 1300 times more iodine than oysters, once considered the best source. 6 tablets alone contain more NATURAL IODINE than 486 lbs. of spinach or 1387 lbs. of lettuce.

Make this test with Kelpamalt: First weigh yourself and see how long you can work or how far you can walk without tiring. Then take 3 Kelpamalt Tablets with each meal for 2 weeks and again weigh yourself and notice how much longer you can work without tiring, how much farther you can walk. Notice how much better you feel, sleep and eat. Watch flattering extra lbs. appear in place of scrawny hollows. And if you don't gain 5 lbs. the very first week the trial is free. 100 jumbo size Kelpamalt tablets—four to five times the size of ordinary tablets—cost but a few cents a day to use. Get Kelpamalt today. Kelpamalt is sold at all good drug stores. If your dealer has not yet received his supply, send $1.00 for special introductory size bottle of 65 tablets to the address below.

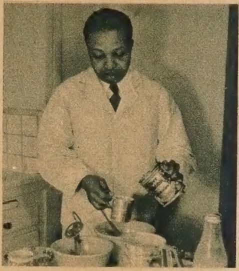
SPICY GINGER WAFFLES

By Grace Ellis

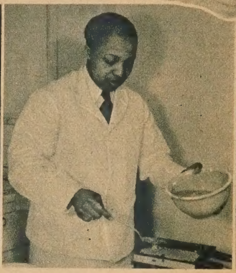
Adrienne Ames tells how to make a delicious dessert

Cooking Service

Miss Ames produces the recipe and enlists the assistance of her cook, William



The thin batter is rich with molasses and light with very well-beaten egg whites



William spreads the batter evenly over the hot, ungreased electric waffle iron

And here are the waffles, crisp, brown and gingery, and hot off the griddle!

ADRIENNE AMES isn't the only gingerbread fan in Hollywood! But she's one of the most loyal. When she was a little girl, I have no doubt that she sat quietly in the cook's shadow for hours, her big eyes getting constantly wider, waiting for that climatic moment when a square of hot gingerbread, crustily brown and dripping warm butter, would be handed her.

When she was introduced, recently, to that grand new gingerbread version—Gingerbread Waffles—she dashed home at top speed to draft the assistance of William Davis, faithful cook, butler, and general handy-man, and try the delectable dessert in her own kitchen. That she stopped en route only long enough to acquire a can of high-grade plantation molasses, essential to any successful gingerbread mixture, is a fact worthy of note.

Miss Ames does not pretend to be an experienced cook. But I happen to know that she is a food connoisseur. In other words, she has a fine sense for detecting what's good-to-eat. And she's crazy about:

Adrienne cuts the waffles in halves and spreads them with luscious cream filling

GINGERBREAD WAFFLES
(Recipe used by Miss Ames)

3	egg yolks
¼	cup sugar
½	cup high-grade molasses
¾	to 1 cup thick sour milk
⅓	cup melted butter
1½	cups all-purpose flour
½	teaspoon salt
¾	teaspoon ginger
1	teaspoon soda
1	teaspoon baking powder
3	stiffly beaten egg whites

Beat egg yolks until light. Add sugar and continue to beat. Mix milk, molasses and melted butter. Sift dry ingredients together. Add wet and dry ingredients alternately to beaten egg yolks, beating until smooth, after each addition. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites.

Place four tablespoonfuls of mixture on an ungreased electric waffle iron that is hot

RECIPE SERVICE

Miss Ames' Gingerbread Waffle recipe came from a little shop that makes a specialty of waffles. Next to Gingerbread Waffles, their Cream Waffles and Sour Cream Chocolate Waffles are "best sellers." Recipes for both are FREE to all readers who send stamped, self-addressed envelopes with their letters to Grace Ellis, food editor. Other leaflets you'll want are:

Apartment Parties	5 cents
Appealing Appetizers	5 cents
Bridge Refreshments for Spring Months	5 cents
How to Make Perfect Angel Cake	5 cents

enough to sizzle when a drop of water is placed on it. Bake until brown and crusty. Cut hot waffle in halves. Spread lower half with filling. Top with remaining half. Cut in two and serve.

GINGERBREAD WAFFLE FILLING

1 cup whipping cream
2 tablespoons brown sugar
½ cup broken nutmeats
1 cake cream cheese
Pinch of cinnamon

Whip cream until stiff. Add cream gradually to cream cheese, mixing with fork until smooth. Fold in remaining ingredients. Use to put between sections of Gingerbread Waffles.

One of the easiest of all methods of making Gingerbread Waffles, or other waffle delicacies, is to blend them with ready-boxed biscuit flour. A knock-out new leaflet entitled, "Let The Stars Show You" has just been put out by the manufacturers of one of these flours. It is illustrated with color photographs and recipes for hundred of things to be made of biscuit flour. It is priced at only 25c. Address SCREEN BOOK's Food Editor.

"These waffles are just as good as they look —even better," is Adrienne's verdict

Today's Gossip

Meanwhile John Barrymore, who has signed for a principal rôle in Romeo and Juliet, has been escorting Elaine here and there, but with noticeable care declines to discuss her visit.

BRUCE CABOT, the crazed gangster for screen purposes in Show Them No Mercy, says that one of the picture's most exciting scenes was a bright idea of members of the cast and was "ad libbed" on the set. When Cesar Romero approached the door of the room where cowered the mother and father and baby, he asked Cabot, "Who's first?" "You are, buddy!" Cabot growled and shot him in the back.

JEAN HARLOW has announced her intention of selecting interior decorating as a sideline for her acting career, and the decision is a wise one. Bebe Daniels did a similar thing several years back when she opened a gown shop. Now her business is so profitable that both she and her husband devote more time to it than they do to screen work. Recently Ben Lyon flew East to display Bebe's newest creations to New York manufacturers and was met with an enthusiastic reception.

RICHARD DIX seems to have found a new lease on stardom with the backing of Gaumont-British. He was generally considered to be on the skids here in Hollywood when he accepted an offer to star in the English-made picture, Trans-Atlantic Tunnel, which proved such a hit that it completely re-established his popularity. Now, according to his agents, he has been offered a chance to star in another Gaumont picture to be made in Australia, and will accept.

HELEN HAYES left Hollywood some months ago with the announcement that she was through with all things cinematic—but it seems that Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has other ideas, and intends to hold her to the terms of her contract which gives them her services for one more picture.

When Janet Gaynor reported to Metro for her current rôle in Small Town Girl, she was given "Helen Hayes' dressing room" and her somewhat surprised inquiries brought out the fact that the studio has held that one dressing room for Helen ever since her departure for the New York stage.

BILL HART has just completed a yarn about the Northwest Mounted Police and has sold it to one of the major companies here in Hollywood. The name of the picture will be, O'Malley Of The Mounted. Here's hoping that William S. will have as much luck in the writing game as he had when he was making pictures. He ought to have a wealth of material for such stories.

ANITA LOUISE has just received a novel gift from her mother, a gold bracelet from which hangs a whole handful of little spangles each engraved with the name of a picture in which Anita has appeared. It makes a swell trophy and helps her to remember that she has done well in the film world.

WINI SHAW has just taken the trouble to set the world right on the Hawaiian situation. She says that although she is part Hawaiian she has never set foot on the islands. She can talk Hawaiian as well as she can English, but that is because her brothers and sisters were natives.

PAUL MUNI admits that his friends don't recognize him these days. The reason is that he has shaved his head clean as a melon, and he has no eyebrows. The loss of all his hair helps him to look Chinese for his rôle in The Good Earth.

WARREN WILLIAM has everyone beat as far as handy dressing rooms are concerned. He has purchased a 1936 Ford truck, on the back of which he has constructed a complete dressing room. This simplifies his life no end. When working, he drives his rig onto the set, and the moment he is through hops in and whirls away for home.

GEORGE E. STONE, veteran character actor, must be at the studio at four o'clock every morning in order to assure his arrival on the set at nine-thirty. The make-up he wears in Anthony Adverse is so difficult to put on that it requires hours of careful application. George just sleeps while the make-up artist goes to work on his face.

GARY COOPER has established some kind of record or other by being before the cameras for 480 consecutive working days. Since his first day in Lives of a Bengal Lancer he has not missed a single shooting day and has, during that time, made three pictures.

JAMES CAGNEY has returned from a trip on the high seas in his yacht. The voyage was not exactly a pleasure trip, seeing that Jimmy took it only to get away from the studio because of a current feud over salary. He knew that at sea they couldn't reach him, even if they wanted to.

BING CROSBY, rumor goes, lost over ten thousand dollars on the horses during the last racing season. It seems that Hollywood folk are not particularly good judges of horse flesh, considering the fact that at the Santa Anita track there were about forty horses owned by film people. Alma Lloyd, at this writing, is the only member of the screen colony to own a winning horse at Santa Anita.

BORIS KARLOFF is now making his second return trip to England. He has been in this country for twenty-five years with but one trip home. His first visit home was discouraging because he had so little time to look around. Karloff says he once swore that he would never go home without first achieving success. He kept his oath.

ERROL FLYNN is in the midst of writing the story of his life. From all reports, it is bang-up drama, for the young star of Captain Blood has had an exciting career, a portion of which includes the pleasant pastime of head hunting with a group of savage natives.

MAX FACTOR says that screen stars are not the only ones who receive crazy letters. The following is one he found in his mail: "Dear Sir: There is always a doubt as to my age when I make application for a job. Due to this fact there has been little work for me in the past year. Would it be possible to use some of your make-up to increase my appearance as to age? For this information I will gladly

YOUR HOSTESS in Hollywood

PAULA STONE, one of the famous "Stepping Stones" who made stage history, invites you to a cocktail party at her home in Hollywood! You'll meet all her friends, among whom are the most noted stars in Hollywood. Fred Stone, her father, will act as host, and her two sisters, Dorothy and Carol, will help entertain you.

Doesn't it sound thrilling! And it's just a sample of the wonderful entertainment Fawcett Movie Magazines have arranged for those who join the second Annual Movieland Tour. To give you an idea—here's a day's schedule: Start with a trip through 20th Century-Fox studios, where you'll see pictures being made, meet the stars working on the sets. You'll meet Shirley Temple in person, talk with Janet Gaynor, Warner Baxter will come up to say hello. In the afternoon, a tour through Beverly Hills, seeing the homes of the stars. That night, a big party at the Blossom Room of Hollywood's Roosevelt, at which many of the movie people will be present. Other highlights of the four days in Hollywood . . . bathing at Santa Monica Beach, a trip to Catalina Island—magic spot in the Pacific, Paula Stone's cocktail party, a large dinner party at the famous Cocoanut Grove.

This is the kind of vacation an ordinary traveler could never hope to have. But under the sponsorship of Fawcett Movie Magazines, all doors are open to you. Briefly, the plan is this—we've organized a complete, all-expense vacation trip of two weeks, from Chicago to Hollywood and back. We'll see some of America's most wonderful scenery—we'll go through Yellowstone Park, see Old Faithful, the world's biggest geyser, visit British Columbia. We'll travel in luxurious special trains, have first class accommodations everywhere. But by getting group rates, the entire cost of the trip will be absurdly small. One sum includes everything—transportation, meals, hotels, entertainment.

Two Movieland Tours are planned, limited to 200 people each. One leaves Chicago July 19th, the other August 9th. Fill in coupon now for booklet giving complete details.

Hollywood's New Triangle

"Myrna, a situation arose—a business deal—about which my secretary knew I should be informed. She had to deliver certain documents to me, so she flew down the day after I did."

That's what Clark told her, and Myrna told him:

"You haven't touched on the minor point of why she was in your room at two o'clock in the morning."

"Myrna, there is nothing—there has been nothing—there never was anything between my secretary and me. Do you believe me?"

"No, I don't."

So Myrna left Clark Gable and began preparations for a divorce suit.

UNBELIEVABLE? Impossible? In reality, yes. In motion pictures, no. A far-seeing producer at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer first visualized the possibilities of "the perfect triangle" on the screen. From New York he summoned Faith Baldwin, expert juggler of modern triangles, and together Miss Baldwin and Hunt Stromberg drew the prospectus of the triangle.

Back to New York went Miss Baldwin to write the story and with three great screen names always in mind as her characters—Clark Gable as the husband, Myrna Loy as the wife and Jean Harlow as the secretary.

Wife vs Secretary was published serially in a national magazine, but before the ink had dried the picture was in production in California.

For Myrna, the experience was not a new one. She has been a screen wife seven times—once with Leslie Howard, five times with William Powell, once with Clark Gable. Her wifey rôles have been the key to her success, have lifted her to stardom and though she is Hollywood's champion bachelor girl she holds first place as the ideal wife of the screen.

Her duties as a screen wife have not been of the flaming youth or puppy-love breed. On the contrary, they have been a matured variety, of which she says:

"It took motion pictures many years to discover that romance can be found in mature marriages as well as in the teens or flighty flaming youth era. The discovery apparently was made in the year of The Thin Man, and I, for one, have been kept quite busy perpetuating the accepted ideal of the perfect wife.

"Even a perfect wife can become a third-portion of a perfect triangle as I have found out in the marital mix-up with Clark Gable and Miss Harlow in Wife vs Secretary.

"While the perfect triangle is perfect for the fictionist, I would not recommend it for normal life beyond the picture screen. No triangle, imperfect or perfect, is applicable to happy married life, for it is most inadvisable for a man to believe he can equally share his affections with two women, his wife and another woman, be she a secretary or not."

JEAN HARLOW believes that a good secretary can and should be extremely loyal to her boss. . .

"But not to such a length that she feels she has as much right to his attentions as his wife. I am no authority, but my own opinion is that love and business cannot be mixed, that a secretary should be a secretary to her boss and nothing more.

"A good secretary's qualities not only should include loyalty but she should dress to please the clientele to which the boss caters. Even though she may be loyal to her boss and attractive to his customers and business associates, so long as she attends to her own business there should be no excuse for such triangles as boss-wife-secretary."

Next comes Gable. Does he think a boss should fire his pretty secretary because his wife wishes him to? Does he think it is possible for a husband to pay a little more than business attentions to his secretary and yet hold the love of his wife? Does he think there is such a thing as a perfect triangle? That an understanding and devoted wife can condone her husband taking his secretary to dine and dance without displaying even a spark of jealousy?

"W-a-i-t a minute!" Clark exploded.

Then he uttered his classic line voiced upon his arrival in New York when he returned from South America, the land of flashing-eyed senoritas. . .

"Do you want me to lead with my chin?"

Nevertheless, my good people, Gable-Loy-Harlow WOULD be a perfect triangle.

HOLLYWOOD HOME HINTS

By JANE CARROLL

Donald Woods, whose most recent screen rôle is in Anthony Adverse, has what he thinks is the most unusual ash tray ever invented. Read about it in this column

If YOUR husband is anything at all of a cigar or cigarette smoker, he'll be happy to know about Donald Woods' unique ash tray. It comes equipped with a little bulb which you fill with water, the point being, when you are finished with your smoke, all you have to do is to touch it against the bulb and the water will instantly put it out. It makes a charming gift and ends forever the fear of lighted cigarettes catching anything on fire.

● And here's another suggestion for your husband. No doubt, he'll be draining the radiator of his car soon and getting rid of the anti-freeze solution he has had in it all Winter. While he is about it he might just as well do the job up right and give the old radiator a thorough cleaning. That can of Sani-Flush you have been using to clean out your drains with will do a better job than many of the chemicals on the market made for the purpose. Try a can and see the magic action of Sani-Flush.

pay you, for without it I am afraid my situation will be very grave. Please send information as soon as possible. My girl has said that she will not marry me until I increase my appearance as to age. This is all that is detaining our marriage. Very truly yours, J. M."

REX INGRAM, who plays "De Lawd" in Green Pastures, tells a funny story about the "angels" who are working in the picture. "I came in from lunch the other day to start work," he says, "to find the director panic-stricken because he couldn't find his angels. When he finally did locate these celestial beings he found them behind a piece of scenery playing poker."

AL JOLSON'S Great Dane has presented him with octuplets—which means that she had a blessed event attended by eight wriggling puppies. The day after the arrival of the pups, Paul Muni appeared at Jolson's home with two hundred and fifty dollars cash in payment for two of the pups which will be his as soon as they are old enough to leave their mother.

HERBERT MUNDIN has just let the news leak out that he has an eighteen-year-old daughter. The reason Herb kept it a secret all these years is that his daughter is making quite a name for herself on the London stage. She is now on her way to Hollywood and looking forward to a successful movie career.

FRED MacMURRAY seems to have an innate fear of going soft on the screen. In Hands Across the Table, he balked at his rôle when advised that he was to play a social registerite—a blue-blooded aristocrat. Before he was soothed, the scenarist had to write in a line of dialogue which permitted him to say, "My grandfather was hanged as a pirate." With that background established, he enjoyed the rôle.

JEANETTE MacDONALD has nothing on Joe Penner, or vice versa—the whole story hinging on the fact that over night a duck farm moved in next door to Jeanette. The ducks had a habit of dropping in on Jeanette for the purpose of an early morning dip in her swimming pool. In desperation, Jeanette donned her old clothes and went to see the owner of the ducks to request him to keep his wandering webb-footed charges from taking their morning constitutional at five A. M.

GEORGE E. STONE has widened the field of his affections to include pert little Dixie Dunbar, and dame rumor has it that he is now less interested in Isabel Jewell. Isabel, it seems, is now seen around with a mysterious Australian boy who recently came to Hollywood for a try at pictures.

GRACE MOORE, after establishing a unique reputation as the one screen star who under no circumstances would allow her home to be photographed, finally broke her rule and sanctioned the presence of a studio cameraman when she gave a very, very ultra party for her house guest, Lady Mendl. All of the Filmland elite were present and all very graciously consented to pose for pictures. The photographer exposed every plate in his bag, and it was a large bag.

The pay-off came in the dark room. All of the film proved defective.

Behind the Scenes with the Quintuplets

This is because the clever picture engineers of Twentieth Century-Fox knew that they must make the most of every second the quintuplets appeared before the camera.

Perhaps the only actual plot which could be fitted to the babies was their birthday celebration. For the purposes of the film, they celebrated this event in late December when it actually will not take place until May 28th.

Alert movie-goers will notice that two of the babies, Emilie and Yvonne, appear to sprout teeth in a split second. This is because the shooting took place while the young ladies were cutting their teeth and after shooting for a scant few moments on one day the director and cameramen found their actresses considerably changed when they returned the next. Ordinary movie children need not cause this trouble, for it is always possible to re-shoot a portion of the picture, fitting the starlets with tiny false-front teeth as has been done in the case of Shirley Temple. With the quintuplets, however, re-takes were impossible.

MANY have wondered why it is that Mrs. Oliva Dionne did not appear in The Country Doctor as the mother of the children, and that their father also did not have a rôle. Hollywood wanted it that way, but the Dionnes have refused profitable offers to be photographed with the babies and would make no exception for the screen. The reason is said to be that the parents are still irked over the Ontario Government's refusal to permit them to exhibit the children at the Chicago Exhibition.

The mother and father, however, appear to be reasonably taken care of by their famous children and their income for a twelve months period from various side-incomes made possible by the quintuplets is estimated at $10,000.

Now that Hollywood has gone to the quintuplets, the quintuplets may return the favor, but not until they are of "Shirley Temple age." In the meantime they will continue to be blissfully unaware of the fact that Hollywood has made them $50,000 richer and hopes to add to that considerable sum not too far in the future.

her old rugs to the Olson Rug people and letting them make her several brand new rugs out of the ones she has no further use for. Why not investigate just what the Olson people can do for you?

- And before the canning season comes again, don't you think it would be a good plan to have plenty of jars and tops on hand before it gets too late? Sometimes the shortage of jars prevents you from preserving things that should be put up the same day they are cooked. Waiting over night might spoil a whole batch of things for you. Take our tip and go down to the store now and purchase enough "Ball" jars to last you the whole season.

- Mrs. Jimmy Gleason has a tip on house cleaning. She has found that in some cases a carpet sweeper is much easier to use than a vacuum cleaner. There are times when the bother of attaching a cord is harder than sweeping the offending spot by hand. There are so many little jobs about the house that don't require the use of an electric cleaner and the Bissel Carpet Sweeper company make a sweeper for those very needs.

- The new Hamilton-Beach Mixers have made quite an impression on Hollywood housekeepers. They come in so handy in whipping up things for guests who drop in unexpectedly. And another thing, they are a good old stand-by when it comes to mixing batters and the like. Being electrically driven, the mixer works by itself and allows you to pour ingredients into the batter while it is mixing. Get a look at one of them at your local hardware store.

- Paula Stone says that the trend is towards preparing things to eat right on the table. What with all the new toasters, waffle irons, coffee pots and the like on the market, there is little use for the kitchen. For the very purpose of supplying that need, the Nesco people have made available a roaster that can be plugged into the wall and set right on the table. Their roaster is automatic in action and may be used for any number of purposes. The dial heat control is especially handy.

- There has been so much comment of late about cheap imported electric light globes, it might be well to tip you off to one that you can't go wrong on. The General Electric people are making one of the best globes on the market. They are called Mazda Lamps and can be purchased at your local electrical store. Only high grade materials are used by G. E. and there is no fear of buying a bad globe.

- By the way, have you seen those Clopay blinds there has been so much talk about? If not, go right down now to your local "five and ten" and get a look at them. You will be surprised at their low cost and serviceability.

3 annoying problems solved because Kotex

CAN'T CHAFE—CAN'T FAIL—CAN'T SHOW

CAN'T CHAFE

The sides of Kotex are cushioned in a special, soft, downy cotton — chafing and irritation are prevented. Thus Wondersoft Kotex provides lasting comfort and freedom. But sides only are cushioned — the center surface is left free to absorb.

CAN'T FAIL

Kotex has a special "Equalizer" center whose channels guide moisture evenly the whole length of the pad. Gives "body" but not bulk — prevents twisting and roping. The filler of Kotex is actually 5 times more absorbent than cotton.

CAN'T SHOW

The ends of Kotex are not only rounded, but flattened and tapered besides. Absolute invisibility — no tiny wrinkles whatsoever. Even the sheerest dress, the closest-fitting gown, reveals no telltale lines.

● THREE DISTINCT TYPES OF KOTEX

Choose the one for your intimate comfort

REGULAR—IN THE BLUE BOX
For the ordinary needs of most women. The choice of millions.

JUNIOR—IN THE GREEN BOX
Somewhat narrower—for some women when less protection is needed.

SUPER—IN THE BROWN BOX
Extra layers give extra protection, yet no longer or wider than Regular.

A distinct division between the breasts is especially important for the new fashions. To meet this need, Maiden Form developed this "Variation" brassiere which—in addition to under-breast stitching for extra-firm support—gives you that fashionable line-of-separation. Note the little heart-shaped "over-lap" at the center front—it supplies just enough gentle pressure at the necessary point! $1.00 and $1.50.

For slightly pointed contours—select a "Semi-Accentuate" brassiere like No. 543 (left). This same design may be had with a longer diaphragm-band or without band. Send for free Foundation Booklet FA: Maiden Form Brassiere Co., Inc., New York.

Spencer Tracy Talks About His Past

"Gee, Spence," I whispered.

"If you print that," he said evenly, "I'll break your neck."

"Wh-why?" I stammered.

"Because I don't think things like that should be printed. I'm not trying to make myself out a hero and I don't want anyone thinking I'm trying to cash in on anything like that. You asked me as a friend and I'm telling you as a friend—in confidence."

And, as a friend, Spence, I'm telling the world, because I think heroism like that should be told.

"Hasn't anything good ever happened to you?" I burst out. "Has your whole life been like this?"

"Sure," he grinned at me. "Lots of swell things have happened to me. I'd always been cast in comedies and I'd always wanted to be a dramatic actor. The night The Last Mile opened in New York I got fourteen curtain calls—and I knew people weren't laughing at me for my attempts at a dramatic part. I haven't got as big a thrill as that from many things."

THERE are other high lights in his career. Trying to pick out the most colorful incidents in Spencer's life is like—like trying to pick the winner in a paddock full of thoroughbreds.

But none of the incidents in his colorful career are as colorful as the man himself. That habit of pulling at his nose, of sticking out his lower lip when he's thinking. And a worried expression he gets on his face over the most trivial things.

He acts tough with the waitresses around the studio and they love it. One of them in particular—Martha—at the Metro commissary. She adores Spence and is constantly hovering around his table to see if there is anything else he wants. The first day after she returned from her vacation last summer, Spence and I came into the restaurant. As Martha fluttered about, Spence asked, "Did you have a good time?"

"Lovely," Martha murmured in confusion. "Is there something else?"

"Yes!" said Spence. "I'll pay for seventeen trips around the world for you if you'll take them, just so I can get a little service with my meals and some peace!"

"Oh, Mr. Tracy," Martha giggled. "You're such a scamp!"

He is one of the moodiest people I have ever met.

But the years of struggle are over. Perhaps there will never again be the necessity for some of the sacrifices he and Louise have made—the heartaches they have endured. Perhaps with financial security nothing colorful will ever happen to him again. It may be that ten years from now he won't be able to add one incident to those I have given you here. It won't matter. Spencer, himself, will always be as colorful as they come!

Enter the Trademark Contest

constantly bidding for a share of the public's purse that all business needs similar stimulating aids.

"Who doesn't recognize the little shaver in his nightie with a candle and the 'time to re-tire' legend underneath? 'All the news that's fit to print' is a million-dollar slogan of the Fourth Estate.

"Miss Pickford and I are most eager to get a smashing trademark that will catch the public's imagination; and we look to our millions of movie-going friends to give us their best cooperation, by proposing a trademark and slogan that will instantly suggest to screen-patrons, when they see it—Pickford-Lasky Productions."

It won't be long now before Pickford-Lasky's initial production reaches the screen. It is called One Rainy Afternoon. Francis Lederer is the star with Ida Lupino for his leading lady. Paris today is the scene of this lilting comedy-romance, which takes its name from a song, composed by Ralph Erwin, called One Rainy Afternoon, which runs through the story.

For the information of entrants in the trademark contest, Pickford-Lasky's program calls for four major productions a year, which will be released by United Artists. They will all be made for the world-market, hence stories will be selected with international appeal. To this end casts will also be made up of artists from different countries.

These plans of Pickford-Lasky are set forth in connection with the trademark contest, so they may help entrants get a lead for their ideas. Read these rules:

1. Contest opens February 1, and closes April 15, 1936.

2. All readers of Fawcett Publications may participate, except employes or relatives; Pickford-Lasky employes and their relatives.

3. It is not necessary to submit a drawing of the trademark. You can describe it.

4. Do not submit decorated or fanciful entries.

5. Contest closes April 15. Winners will be announced as soon thereafter as possible.

6. In case of ties, duplicate prizes will be awarded.

7. Prize winners agree to sign all right and title to winning designs, and to accept the prize money as full compensation for the same.

8. Send your entry to Contest Editor, SCREEN BOOK Magazine, 7046 Hollywood Blvd., Hollywood, California.

Judges for the contest will be Mary Pickford, Jesse L. Lasky and Capt. Roscoe Fawcett. Their judgment will be final. No entries will be returned.

Hepburn's Narrow Escape

faster. His speedometer needle was beyond the sixty mark. He was gaining.

At the studio gate, the gateman heard Katie's horn, recognized it. For a moment he stared astounded as he saw her come tearing down the street.

"What's she doing now?" he asked himself. He opened the gates—just in time to let Katie make another hair-raising turn, and go flashing into the studio grounds.

NOW, heaven alone knows what was in Hepburn's mind. Somehow, she was under the delusion that once inside the studio lot, she was safe. Maybe she thought she was playing puss-in-the-corner, where you can't be tagged when you reach base. Anyway, she grinned.

But imagine her chagrin . . .! Without even slackening speed, and with his siren going full-blast now, the motor cop roared right in through the gate behind her, and pulled up alongside with the devil's own leer on his face, as Katie had to stop.

"You," he began, "are Katharine Hepburn, aren't you?"

Katie gulped and nodded.

"Yeah," he muttered, as he began writing in one of his ominous-looking books; "I thought I recognized your funny car.

"Lemme see," the cop went on. "Driving through a stop signal—reckless driving—ignoring the legal command to halt—speeding—sixty-five miles an hour in a twenty-five-mile zone—that'll be about $150, if they don't take your license away, too—"

Katie nearly swooned.

"—driving through pedestrian zone—giving no signals on left-hand turn—giving no signal on right-hand turn—driving through blind intersection over fifteen miles per hour . . ."

Katie found her voice. "Are you"—she gulped—"going to charge me with all that? Why—they're liable to put me in jail . . . !"

The cop grinned fiendishly.

"Yeah," he said, cold-bloodedly, "they prob'ly would."

Katie's heart leaped. Here was hope. "'Would,' did you say? Or did you say 'will'?" she asked.

"I said 'would,' young woman," he said. "But I'm going to let you off easy. Maybe it'll be a lesson to you. I'm just going to charge you with driving through a stop signal. That won't be so tough. It'll only cost you ten bucks. Sign here."

He held out the traffic-tag book. Katie scrawled her name across the tag. He tore out the carbon, handed it to her. Then he handed her a second black book.

"Sign here, too," he commanded.

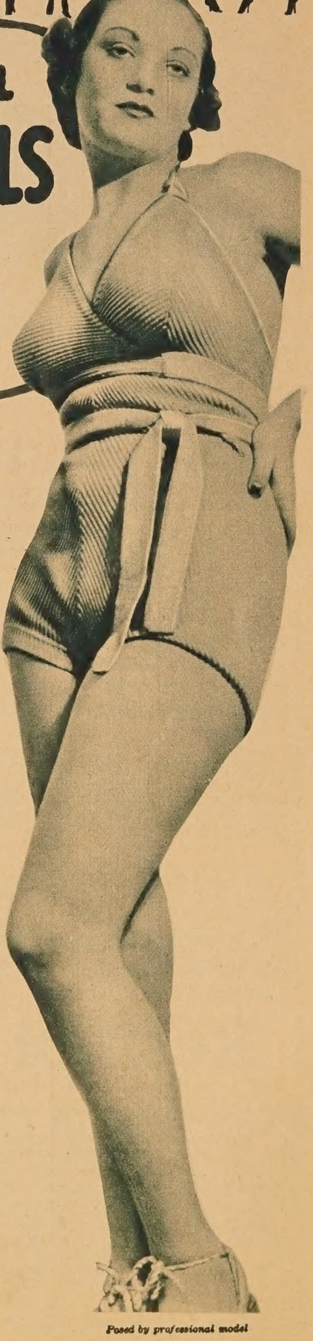
"Say," she suddenly demanded, "why did I have to sign that second slip—that tag—or whatever it was?"

"That wasn't no tag," said the cop, stowing the book in his pocket. "Say, Miss Hepburn—do you remember the other night—that rainy night at the Ritz theater, when you drove away just when a little kid was after your autograph?"

Katie remembered.

"Yes," she said.

"Well," said the cop, as he clambered back onto his motorcycle. "That kid was my brother. This is his autograph book you just signed."



I WANT TO TELL ALL
SKINNY GIRLS
HOW I GAINED
15 POUNDS

It's easy for thousands to add 5 to 15 lbs. this new, quick way!

IF you're skinny, and do not make an attractive appearance on that account, listen to what thousands of others say about these amazing new "7-power" ale yeast tablets. They're putting pounds of solid, normally, good-looking flesh on many who never could gain an ounce before—and in just a few weeks!

"I gained 10 pounds in 3 weeks," says Fannie Alcorn. "I put on 14 pounds in 3 weeks," writes Dora Sotelo. "15 pounds in 4 weeks," reports Mrs. Mabel Fontenat. "15½ pounds with 3 packages," says Mrs. Velma Price. Every day brings many more reports like these from men and women.

Amazing body-building discovery

Doctors now know that the real reason why great numbers of people find it hard to gain weight is that they don't get enough Vitamin B and iron in their daily food. Now scientists have discovered that the richest known source of health-building Vitamin B is cultured ale yeast. By a new process the finest imported cultured ale yeast is now concentrated 7 times, making it 7 times more powerful. Then it is combined with 3 kinds of blood-strengthening iron in little tablets called Ironized Yeast tablets.

If you, too, are one of the many "skinny," run-down persons who need these vital elements, get these new "7-power" Ironized Yeast tablets from your druggist at once. Day after day, as you take them, watch flat chest develop and skinny limbs round out to normal attractiveness. Indigestion and constipation from the same source quickly vanish, skin clears to normal beauty, new health comes—you're an entirely new person.

Results guaranteed

No matter how skinny and run-down you may be, try these wonderful new "7-power" Ironized Yeast tablets for just a few short weeks. See if they don't build you up as they have thousands of others. If you're not delighted with the results of the very first package, every cent of your money will be instantly and gladly refunded.

Special FREE offer!

To start you building up your health right away, we make this absolutely FREE offer. Purchase a package of Ironized Yeast tablets at once, cut out the seal on the box and mail it to us with a clipping of this paragraph. We will send you a fascinating new book on health, "New Facts About Your Body." Remember, results guaranteed with the very first package—or money refunded. At all druggists. Leslie Howard's Strange Confession me. Perhaps because we were seated in a small room adjoining the Howard drawing room and my chair was in front of the one and only door.

"I haven't the looks, the personality or that certain glamorous something which the true actor should have," Leslie continued, "and which the actors of the old school invariably had. Twenty-five years ago I do not think I would ever have been able to get a job on the stage. Certainly I could never have qualified as a screen actor. A casting director would simply have taken one look at me and said, 'You look more like a bank clerk or a college professor than an actor.' And that of course is true.

"Another thing—I have absolutely no sense of showmanship and I presume that I never shall have. Mrs. Howard has much more ability along that line than I have. Take, for example, the matter of my wearing glasses. I wear them because I'm near-sighted. Naturally, there is nothing glamorous or romantic about a near-sighted actor. Imagine Romeo wearing glasses! Mrs Howard thinks of those things. When we go to opening nights or any place where there are likely to be crowds, when we are within a block of our destination, she has the foresight to take my glasses off and put them in her bag."

Like most men, Leslie likes to be comfortable. His favorite costume is a pair of old corduroy trousers and some Mexican sandals for which he pays $3.95. He likes them so well that he buys them in half a dozen shops, just in case the shop where he purchases them might decide to discontinue carrying them. He loathes wearing hats and when forced to do so he usually drags out some headpiece of ancient vintage which has the appearance of having long since outlived its expectancy.

BUT to get back to Leslie's reasons for thinking that he is not temperamentally suited to be an actor.

"A true actor thrives on emotions," he says. "Other people's emotions as well as his own. He likes to dissect and dramatize them and thoroughly enjoys working himself up into a fine frenzy. It has always been embarrassing to me to witness other people's emotions and I am shy of expressing my own. The more deeply I am touched, the more difficult it is for me to outwardly express what I feel. I don't think it would be possible for me to play a rôle in which I had to chew the scenery, as they say on the stage, or tear an emotion to tatters. It would be so entirely foreign to my own personality that an audience would immediately detect my discomfiture. What I try to do is to suggest the emotion the character I am portraying is experiencing instead of outwardly expressing the emotion."

There, doubtless, is the secret of Leslie Howard's superb craftsmanship. For so vividly does he "suggest" the emotional reaction of the character he portrays that he gives the audience the impression that he actually is the character. Even those who work with him have the same illusion. And almost without exception the various women stars with whom he has appeared have given their best performances when playing opposite him.

Pinkie Tomlin picks out a tune for Dixie Dunbar backstage at a recent benefit which featured the magic-toed little dancer

"Do you think that a love scene is likely to be more convincing to an audience if the two participants are actually in love with each other?" I asked.

"On the contrary, I think that in most instances it would be a decided handicap for an actor to be in love with his leading lady. They would be swayed by their personal feelings and emotions rather than by the feelings and emotions of the characters they were attempting to portray. It is the job of the actor or the actress to make the audience feel and if they do all of the feeling themselves, the audience is very likely to be left cold and unmoved. Frequently you will hear people say: 'He seems to actually live the rôle he plays.' Now the truth of the matter is that he only appears to be living it. Suppose he dies in the story. Well, it would be impossible for him to die through half a dozen camera takes. Consequently, it is his job to make the audience feel that he is dying but not to actually feel it himself. And that of course is where the technique comes in."

IN REAL life Leslie Howard has that same charming casualness which characterizes his work on the screen, though there are surprising facets to his personality. He does not seem to be the type who would ever engage in strenuous sports but polo is one of his major enthusiasms and he plays with skill and daring. His sense of humor never fails and his laughter is infectious. His family more or less regard him as the "infant" of the household and he is treated as such. There is nothing of The-Great-Actor-At-Home attitude in the Howard household. In fact, if Leslie should ever carry his Romeo mantle home from the studio his daughter Leslie, aged eleven, would undoubtedly say "Oh daddy, be yourself!"

Why Kay Francis Fascinates Men

a close friend of mine and Susie's, calls her up. And Susie, genuinely concerned over me, will say, 'Did you hear about poor Kay? Isn't it awful?' And Emma tells another friend and the other friend tells someone else, so, eventually, my troubles have got to someone who isn't a friend at all. If I keep my troubles to myself, I know they're not going to be broadcast."

She has no superstitions. She was born on Friday the 13th in the thirteenth month of her mother's marriage and thirteen has been mixed up all through her career.

Despite the fact that her salary runs high into four figures weekly, she lives simply and saves her money. In all the time she has been in Hollywood she has had two cars—both of them Fords. Most stars trade in their cars every year.

When she first arrived in Hollywood she took a small bungalow—maybe six rooms—on an unpretentious street. It was a bungalow such as any bank clerk, steadily employed, might have lived in. Being herself, Kay invited her friends to it without hesitation or apology. There has never been any of that chi-chi about "Isn't this an awful dump? It was the only thing I could find on a moment's notice and I'm just squatting here until I can find time to go house-hunting."

The place was plain, respectable, livable and it reflected Kay's most sterling qualities. She lived there for several years—until she married Kenneth MacKenna. Then they moved to a slightly larger but hardly more pretentious place. Since their divorce she has continued living there. When she is out of town her mother moves from her own apartment into Kay's home and they save the apartment rent.

For years she had a Scotty pup for whom William Powell suggested she name "Snifter"—after "a snifter of Scotch." Snifter was a bum and constantly ran away from home. I don't know how

New Film Notes

So, he walked right up to Miriam and Merle and, being not the least upset or nervous, gravely handed them a Corona-Corona apiece.

So I had to come back the next day to see what the picture was about.

It's mostly about how nasty little girls can be when they are adolescent and jealous and how, through that jealousy and bad up-bringing, they can wreck the life of an unwary adult.

When I walked on the set the second time, I thought it was a meeting of the Ladies' Aid Society. Sitting off-stage were twenty-eight silent matrons, if you can believe that! From on-stage came the childish treble of twenty-eight lassies, fourteen of them actresses, fourteen more being stand-ins. They were being divided into two companies, "A" and "B," so that the harrassed assistant directors could handle them better. You see, when company "A" was emoting for the greater glory of Goldwyn, company "B" was working on these three "r's," reading, 'riting and 'rithmetic, off stage, and when company "B" was staring enviously up at the bright lights their more favored sisters were doing the studios in a big way.

When I came on stage, the two companies chanced to meet en route to their separate tasks. And the sound and the fury. . . . There's no doubt about the esprit de corps of companies "A" and "B." When I left the stage, convinced that no matter what happens I will never open a girl's school, no matter how hard you beg, twenty-eight stage mothers, divided into companies "A" and "B," were hard at it separating their progenies into squads—but, if you ask me when the press agent isn't around, I'll admit that it looked as though there was no lack of esprit de corps among the adult companies "A" and "B," either.

COLLEEN

Backstage with Keeler, Powell and Oakie

JACK OAKIE is one guy who enjoys himself. Jack Oakie likes to play one picture engagements on other lots than his own because he doesn't have to behave himself. Behaving himself, to Jack, means no practical jokes. Hugh Herbert has fun, too, on any lot. And when a Herbert meets an Oakie in the course of a musical production, nobody is safe and executives stay tucked away in their offices behind barred doors.

For example, it's a well known fact that sound stages are not only sound proof, but echo proof. It's also an established fact that sometimes sets are built that do inexplicable things to accoustics and bring back the echo. There's one very nice bit of warbling in Colleen when Dick Powell and Ruby Keeler advise each other to the effect that I Don't Have to Dream Any More. As the introductory music faded and Dick confidently went into the lyrics, there was a very faint but perceptible echo from the rafters, not enough to be annoying on stage but the mike picked it up and was horrified to the depths of its mechanical soul. Rapid consultations and a crew of grips clambered to the dizzy cat-walks with yards of Monk's cloth. The orchestra struck up and Dick told Ruby he didn't have to dream any more until a querulous voice from the control room complained of more echoes.

Warner Bros. sent immediately for their Chief Echo-Finder who arrived on set the same time I did. He's been a sad little man for a long time. Inactivity, probably. But he had a distinct gleam in his eye as he proceeded after the first well-defined echo found on the lot in years. A thrilling hunt that he and the boys could yarn about in the long winter evenings: "The Strange Case of the Echo on Stage Eight."

He emitted strange noises and looked about keenly after each emission as though to trap the echo sneaking off stage knowing it had met its master. But apparently the echo was very unorthodox. It leapt about the rafters with the greatest of ease. At last, puzzled, The Expert blindly picked a spot for more Monk's cloth to baffle the Invisible Waves.

The Invisible Waves were at that moment hidden behind a coil of rope smilingly smoking a cigarette. After the Monk's cloth was hung and the orchestra started to warm up, they grinned and a look of peace came upon them as they silently deployed to their new posts. As Dick, a slightly apprehensive eye on the rafters, started to tell a rather nervous Ruby about dreams again, Jack Oakie, Invisible Wave Number One, started singing very low about dreams, too, but just half a beat behind Dick; I. W., Number Two, from the other side of the stage, concentrated likewise. Thus it was that Jack, wrapped up in his delicate task, did not notice the stealthy approach of a small, black-habited little man with a look of determination on his face until too late. The little man pounced, fastened on to Jack like a limpet, and yelled in triumph.

Back on the stage he drew himself to full heighth.

"Mr. Director Green," he intoned, his voice and pointing finger both vibrating with drama as he indicated Jack Oakie, "there is your echo!"

And from the high gallery there came a distinct echo from the Echo Expert's own voice. They never did find Hugh Herbert.

But, somehow, the company withstood the combined onslaughts. Paul Draper even devised a promising new broken-step tap routine when the boys coated the soles of his tap shoes with shellac. But Jack was smart, himself. When he had to sing a number with Joan Blondell, A Boulevardier from the Bronx, he saw to it that Hugh got a wire calling him in to Hollywood for a couple of vain hours.

MESSAGE TO GARCIA

Wallace Beery Goes in for Potent Realism

THE swamp was dismal. Trailing lianas writhed through the thick air, rotting where their tips trailed in the brackish water. Wriggling things undulated through the brown ooze and frightful-looking insects were like unseen arrows that stung as they droned their song of burning death as the huge alligators lurked just beneath the surface, their death-green maws slobbering for flesh.

Into this nightmare plunged two men. They struggled waist-deep through the sucking, gurgling muck, lashing about them with rudely fashioned cats-o'-nine-tails at the lazily menacing 'gators. The sweat on their faces was very real as they clambered up on a knoll of soft earth to rest and their relief was unfeigned when George Marshall mopped his brow and called, "CUT!"

Wally Beery sighed and grinned at John Boles while property men set about bridging the swamp with boards for their return. The alligator's trainer waded toward his hissing and grunting charges, a bull-whip snapping in his hand. Their little eyes glazed as they sluffed off the banks into a herd in mid-stream. That is, all but one. The one who remained, oblivious to the whip, was Elmer. And Elmer stayed where he was, his hooded eye fixed on Wally Beery as rasping hisses escaped through his teeth. Elmer didn't like Wally and Wally felt no love for Elmer.

It seems that from the very first day Wally and Elmer had formed an instinctive, abiding dislike for one another. It is sad, but true, that personalities should enter into picture making and temperament should raise its ugly head, but Elmer cared little for the amenities. In his little alligator's heart he loathed Wally Beery at first sight. Every time they played together in a scene Elmer would hiss when Wally spoke a line, and all actors are sensitive about that sort of thing. Whenever Mr. Beery had a bit of business Elmer would thrash his tail or yawn prodigiously. "Elmer," Mr. Beery was prone to comment in a low voice, "is a dirty scene-stealer!"

But despite such upsetting incidents, that swamp was one of the most realistic things I've ever seen on any lot. To give you an idea of what I mean, John Boles and Beery were joking about the possibilities of catching malaria. A Cuban extra heard them and was moved to meditate. A week later he was taken deathly ill. The power of suggestion? Not exactly. He didn't have malaria—but he was as sick as only a Cuban extra can be from having consistantly over-dosed himself with quinine as a precautionary measure!

Of all the people on the picture it was John Boles who had the best time. For the first time in his picture career he could go dirty. For once he didn't have to be the freshly-shaved matinee-idol about to burst into a love song.

What a battle! Dick Powell emerges victorious after a furious encounter with Jack Oakie—all for the love of Joan Blondell books to read. "I wanted terribly to make him proud of me," she confided. "I wanted to lift myself up on a mental plane with him." The real loves of Joan's life have all furthered that desire—to lift herself up mentally. But he, that small gracious man who has since faded from the Hollywood picture, was the one to arouse it.

Love Confessions of the Stars!

Katharine Hepburn at seventeen was the typical sub-deb. She was attractive, she had a powerful "line," and she had her choice of a dozen or more boys around her home there in Hartford, Connecticut. Boys she had grown up with, fought with, played with. But her young feelings remained as placid as a still pond until that Christmas party when she met Tuck. He was a sophomore at a nearby university. Darkly good-looking, a great dancer, half-back on the varsity team. And he stirred Katharine as no man had ever done before. All during the holidays he rushed her. When summer came he managed to see her almost every week-end. They'd bump over the countryside in his eccentric flivver, swim, and sometimes deep silences would fall between them that were strangely sweet.

In the fall she saw every football game in which he played. Including that game shortly before Thanksgiving. No one ever knew how it happened. He was suddenly a sprawling, quiet figure out there on the field with both teams hovering around him. Then they were carrying him off. He never regained consciousness.

They say that Katharine Hepburn has a genius for bringing poignant young love moments to the screen. Moments that bring a queer tightness to your throat. And Katharine? Perhaps she is remembering.

SOMETIMES young love takes on the color and highlights of a fiction story, the same quality of tenseness. Merle Oberon's did.

It was in India and she was attending her first dinner dance. All the fascination of the land seemed to center in Calcutta that night. Or so Merle thought. She was dancing with an English attache when something drew her attention to the entrance. A very blonde, very distracted young man in polo clothes was standing there obviously searching for someone in the crowd. For an instant his glance touched hers, then he disappeared through the doorway.

A half hour later she was being introduced to a very blonde, very calm young man in correct formal attire. He led her out into the garden, took her hand. "There's no use beating around the bush," he said abruptly. "I'm madly in love with you, Merle. I have been for months." His voice shook a little with his own young sincerity. "I've been trying everywhere to meet you. Rushing into some dance or other to see if you were there and then leaving as soon as I discovered you weren't. Tonight luck favored me! I went home, got into the proper togs . . . and now I'm asking you to marry me."

It was as sudden as that. But nothing waits in India. Especially young love.

He had to sail for England in a few days and he wanted to make the trip their honeymoon. "We can be so happy, Merle," Nicky pleaded. She was a little aghast. "But I've only just met you!"

The next few days he spent trying to make up for that deficiency. But when the boat pulled out—he was alone. Merle had been too excited to know how she felt about him. She knew, though, as soon as the ship was beyond reach. Love Nicky? She adored him! He was the most thrilling thing that had ever happened to her. So she began a tearful campaign to make her uncle take her back to England. It worked. Within three weeks they were on the high seas.

But that journey, taken as a love quest, was to have quite another import in her life. It was to carry her to fame.

In Nicky's arms again she thought she'd found the answer to everything. There were only two slight drawbacks to their immediate marriage. She was sixteen. Nicky, twenty-one. Neither had a shilling between them and their families objected violently to early marriages . . .

It was all pretty tragic. Bleakly tragic. And they suffered the way only very young people can. Then someone suggested the theater to Merle; they even maneuvered a small part for her. Nicky began to see less and less of her. And so quietly, painfully, they drifted apart. "But I've never known anything like that love again," said Merle.

She never will. There's always a tender effulgence about the memory of first love. It's like that Irish poet found out long ago, "Oh, there's nothing half so sweet as love's young dream!"

It pays to be nice to an editor! Cesar Romero brings Carole Lombard, guest editor of this issue, an apple on the set of Love Before Breakfast, her new film linen skirt Marlene has another of ivory-colored flannel. The coat is smart with either skirt. Marlene's sport shoes are of white buckskin with navy blue heels and a wide side-fastening strap of navy blue kid.

For the more dressy type of spring suit, I was greatly intrigued by the ultra-chic costume which Travis Banton did for Ida Lupino. It is of black wool crêpe and the one-piece frock has a finely pleated treatment which is stitched down until it bursts free just above the knees. Over this frock goes the jauntiest little three-quarter length cape of the same black wool crêpe. For contrast and animation, it is lined with beige kasha and has wide revers of leopard skin. The beige and black note is carried out in accessories. Personally, I'd call this a four star costume for early spring.

As to evening fabrics, there seems to be a veritable epidemic of chiffon, most of it pleated from shoulder to hem. Net, too, is very much the vogue.

Travis Banton did one of the loveliest negligees I've ever seen for Marlene Dietrich to wear in Desire. It is a closely fitted gown built high about the bust line and has a softly draped cowl neck. A single layer of the chiffon forms a long cape which blends into the neckline and ties in a bow at one side. It has a brief train and long, transparent sleeves.

Of course, the most amusing new materials are the newspaper prints—a chintzy fabric with the front pages of coast-to-coast papers printed thereon. Betty Furness has a pair of beach slacks and hat made of this material.

But Betty goes in for fashion-firsts. You should see her new spring hats. They look as though they had stepped right off an old Godey print. One is of natural colored straw with a tiny, derby-like crown and a brim slightly rolled at the sides and dipped down in front. It has a black velvet ribbon around the crown with short "streamers" dangling at the back. All it seems to lack is a hoop skirt and a lace parasol to go with it. Betty has another quaint little spring number that is built along the lines of a baby bonnet. It sets far back on the head and ties under the chin with an enormous bow of black velvet. The hat itself is of fine black straw and the only ornaments are three perky pink rosebuds standing up in front.

Some time ago I told you about the Dietrich version of the old automobile veil. At that time I didn't have a picture to show you but now I have (see page 22), and since Dietrich has a way of starting clothes fads I know that you will be glad to have a closeup of this motoring conceit. The veil is of beige chiffon and is attached to visor of beige felt. It is worn with a modern version of the old-fashioned linen "duster" which was the smart thing for motoring when Uncle Henry launched his first flivver. Marlene's coat is of beige kasha and it fastens with loops of pigskin. It has a wide crushed belt of pigskin with matching gauntlet gloves.

I could go on and on, telling you of outstanding things I've seen at the various studios, but my space is up. So I'll save the rest for next time.

Be Fair To Marlene Dietrich!

like two good friends—companions who need look no further than each other for perfect understanding.

At the studio where she often comes to lunch and spend an afternoon with her mother, Maria is treated by the adults as an equal. There is no baby talk—no prankish coddling. Under such circumstances it seems rather paradoxical to see the vibrant Marlene superintending the ordering of her child's lunch, cutting her steak for her, seeing to it that the vegetables are just right.

On other afternoons it is equally strange to see mother and daughter strolling across the lot hand in hand. Headed for the commissary usually—and an ice cream cone. On such excursions Marlene is definitely not the woman of the world. She is merely the radiantly youthful companion of Maria.

Marlene with her daughter, Maria

At that moment a slender white hand intruded itself upon the field of these visions. It held a cigarette case and belonged to my hostess. She gave me a light from her jewel-encrusted lighter.

Suddenly the atmosphere of her dressing room seemed less uncomfortably formal. Her smile seemed warmer. I decided that it was a smile and not a quizzical smirk that might mean irritation, speculation, damnation.

Then her smile vanished and her expression became serious. She was elaborating on the subject under discussion. Slowly, thoughtfully she said, "Perhaps I may seem foolish. Even so, I think that one cannot be too careful in the selection of films for the child. Maria is so impressionable—as, indeed, every child her age must be. Too much gruesomeness, too many thrills, realism of a morbid nature. All these things are not good. And it is these qualities, unfortunately, which one can so often find in films which otherwise might be excellent entertainment for children.

"Such things I do not want Maria to see. She would be upset and nervous for days afterward. Afraid of the dark. Afraid to have the light turned out at bedtime. That is not because she is supersensitive. She is healthy and normal. She has the average child's imagination.

"A child's mind should be stimulated, certainly. But in the right direction. It should not be diverted into channels that feature the grotesque, horrible, unnatural."

I recognized in these thoughts the specific mention of but one of Marlene's theories concerning the upbringing of Maria. Marlene is neither the stern parent of the "thou shalt not" school of thought nor is she the ultra-modern mother of the free and easy cult. Hers is strictly a common sense technique.

Maria may be permitted the advantages of adult society but she is also encouraged to indulge in all the diversions of the child world. She accompanies her mother on grownup shopping excursions. But her whims, too, are recognized. On one memorable occasion by a very extra special doll. With it, however, she received a whole wardrobe of dresses for the doll. In doing this Marlene hoped not only to gratify the cravings of a little girl but to initiate Maria into the practical field of dress design.

Our Dietrich is a subtle mother!

With all this Marlene is careful to guard against any chance that Maria may become "fresh." I discovered this when I suggested that the present landslide of pictures starring children should lighten the job of movie critic.

THE pale beauty met this suggestion with a smile that was decidedly sphinx-like. "Yes?" Her inflection denoted the motherly raised eyebrow. "But you are wrong. Even such pictures are not always right. That is because children are imitative—like little monkeys. Grownups think it cute to see Shirley Temple thumb her nose at some pompous dowager. Or hear her say, "Aw nuts," to the too formal butler. But it is not good when children also think such things cute! Then they return home to shock their parents with their own imitations of these tricks!"

Suddenly I was struck by the strangeness of hearing such pious sentiments coming from the coral lips of Marlene. Such motherly protectiveness seemed oddly out of place in one whose screen characterizations have never erred on the side of sweetness and light! Perhaps I had forgot to put on my poker face. Perhaps this pallid Nordic beauty is a bit on the psychic side.

Anyway. . . .

She lit another cigarette after smoothing it speculatively with her slender fingers. Then she peered at me through a cloud of bluish smoke before she said, "Perhaps you think it strange to hear me being so severe. You probably think too that my views hardly coincide with some of my screen rôles. That, also, is part of my argument!

"I should not be so foolish as to allow Maria to see any of the pictures I have made. None of them have been of the type that would interest children. Neither have they been suitable for the child audience. They were made only for the entertainment of adults.'"

Just then I noticed that Marlene was drumming a tattoo on the arm of her chair with those red nails. Simultaneously I felt a mild twinge of surprise when I saw that she was actually able to raise the finger that supported the dead weight of an emerald fully as large as W. C. Fields' nose!

I had interpreted this tapping as a willingness on her part to conclude the interview. She surprised me by continuing. "People may think me perverse, unkind perhaps, because I have so constantly refused to discuss Maria. But I have felt always that even an actress should be permitted some privacy. The home, should be one's own sacred domain. Its privacy should not be violated. In its activities the public should not be included. I think that everyone can understand that. I am sure that every mother will agree with me."

She paused and smiled rather plaintively before adding, "My one greatest desire is to give Maria the advantages, the freedom enjoyed by every other child whose mother does not happen to be an actress. Only under such conditions can a child grow up naturally—gracefully. I want my Maria to be natural, to feel free. I want her to feel that she is not being followed by reporters, by photographers. Her childhood could easily be ruined . . . could be turned into some sort of a mad, uncomfortable chase. I don't want that. Surely such a desire can be understood!"

As I left the studio it occurred to me that I had not been interviewing La Dietrich—the Queen of Glamour. I had been talking to a very young but a very wise mother!

"I'm Not Romantic"

patriot in the Victor McLaglen picture, The Informer. He played a Western bad man with Richard Dix in The Arizonian. In The Last Days of Pompeii, he appeared in five rôles as a Roman blacksmith, gladiator, slave trader, horse dealer and arena spectacles promoter. He was a famous marksman in Annie Oakley, a New York detective sergeant in We're Only Human and a private detective in Muss 'Em Up.

FOSTER is an unusually fine swimmer, and a "nut" about all things aquatic. He owns six boats, ranging from a wee speedster to a yacht. When he can get time off (which generally means only on a Sunday) he whizzes all around Balboa Bay. That is, he once did. But one Sunday, careening over the sad sea waves he almost cut down Director Ernest Schoedsack—and, not wanting to lose both a star and an ace director should their craft meet again, his bosses stopped Foster's motorboating.

It is doubtful if there is a male star in motion pictures today who commands a greater measure of affection from his fellows. Foster's infectious smile, displaying rows of dazzling teeth, wins every man and woman he meets. He "roughhouses" on the set with the men of the technical crews; he helps out constantly with work that is not in his province.

At the conclusion of Muss 'Em Up, there was a little dinner for the production company. Director Charles Vidor was toastmaster. Calling upon Foster, he introduced him with the remark:

"Here is the man with the sunniest disposition in Hollywood." Not romantic? He is everything the word means!

He Won't Talk About Women

his salary, from that original five-a-day, has assumed the proportions of "big business."

But Fred, happy-go-lucky then, and happy-go-lucky now, has changed but little. He wears better clothes, he drives a better car, he lives in better quarters, and he has a bank account. But, inside, in those essentials which make a man an individual, he's exactly the same good-natured, down-to-earth, unpretentious "lug" who gave his all, that day eight years ago, for the glory of Central Casting.

"I'm lucky," he grins. "I've not only had some great breaks this last year, but they were delayed long enough to let me gain a sound perspective on this business. I don't blame the early stars for losing their heads—it's easy to do with everyone kowtowing to a person—but if I make the same mistakes, after seeing them go down the skids, I'll deserve my punishment."

Most interviewers call Fred MacMurray "tough copy." And so he is if refusing to answer asinine questions warrants that charge. The fact is that he's leaning over backwards to avoid the accusation of conceit.

"Look here," he said to me not long ago. "Here's some woman who writes for a pack of newspapers and she wants me to name the ten most charming women in Hollywood. How can a fellow do a thing like that without making himself out a conceited jackass? Who am I to pick the ten most charming women in Hollywood?

At first Fred MacMurray found it difficult to take his sudden rise to screen fame seriously.

"I'd never figured myself as Heaven's gift to the acting profession," he explains. "And I simply couldn't believe that there could be any demand for me—especially as a leading man. I'm still no actor—but I'm trying to learn something about timing and emotional expression. Right now, the trend seems to be toward naturalness and that's a lucky break for me. But I want to go on as an actor—and unless I acquire more ability than I have now, I'll make just as sudden an exit as I made an entrance.

"I'm also studying voice and singing. In my orchestra days, I sang fairly well but I never had time for lessons. Now I'm looking forward to the chance to sing on the screen.

"They let me sing a song in Hands Across the Table. I sang it without rehearsal—and it didn't quite make the grade. Next time, I want to be able to deliver."—By ERIC ERGENBRIGHT.

CURIOUS FACTS

Harold Lloyd, who takes the rôle of the comic prizefighter in The Milky Way, wanted to be a boxer before he entered films . . . Victor Jory was a professional boxer, as was Bruce Cabot, who is seen next in Robin Hood of El Dorado . . . George Raft has done his bit in the prize ring, and Nat Pendleton, who has the rôle of the strong man in The Great Ziegfeld, was a champion wrestler.

TUMS MADE ME A NEW WOMAN

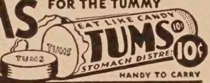
Can You Finish This Jingle?
$250 IN CASH
And 100 Other Valuable Prizes for Best Last Lines

WRITE YOUR LAST LINE HERE

NO ALKALIES FOR ACID INDIGESTION

MILLIONS have found they do not need to drench their stomachs with strong, caustic alkalies. Physicians have said this habit often brings further acid indigestion. So much more safe and sensible to simply carry a roll of Tums in your pocket. Munch 3 or 4 after meals—or whenever troubled by heartburn, gas, sour stomach. Try them when you feel the effects of last night's party, or when you smoke too much. Tums contain a wonderful antacid which neutralizes acid in the stomach, but never over-alkalizes stomach or blood. As pleasant to eat as candy and only 10c at any drug store.



TUMS FOR THE TUMMY
TUMS ARE ANTACID . . . NOT A LAXATIVE

A Valuable Prize For Everyone Who Enters

Can you write a last line to this jingle? It's easy! It's fun! And your "last line" may win one of the 158 valuable prizes! 1st prize—$100.00; 2nd prize—$50.00; 3rd prize—$25.00; five prizes of $5.00 each; fifty prizes of $1.00 each; 50 Eversharp pencils; 50 hunting knives. Every entrant will receive a worth while gift besides. Get your information about TUMS from the advertisement at the left, then read the simple rules.

SIMPLE RULES

Write your "last line" in dotted line, tear out whole advertisement, and mail with your name and address to the address given below. If you submit more than one entry, simply write your additional "last line" on a plain sheet of paper. But EACH "last line" submitted must be accompanied by the wrapper from a 10c roll of TUMS which you can secure at any drug store.

Elaborateness will not be considered. Only skill with which "last line" is completed, and neatness will count. Every entry will be individually considered and acknowledged with a worth while free gift. No entries will be returned. Judges will be chosen by officials of the A. H. Lewis Co. In event of tie, duplicate prizes will be awarded. All entries must be postmarked not later than midnight of May 31st, 1936. Prize-winners will be notified as soon as awards are made.

Address your entries to Contest Department, Room 22-A, The A. H. Lewis Co., 4th and Spruce Streets, St. Louis, Missouri.

I was so lonely and friendless, a new-comer to town. Neighbors called once—but never came again.

I read how a woman became popular by learning to play through the U. S. School Course. I enrolled.

Soon I was able to play real tunes. Now I'm invited everywhere. They call me "the life of the party".

MUSIC – the Surest Path to Friends
... so easy to learn this short-cut way

NO longer need you envy people who play—who are always the center of attraction at parties—who make friends immediately wherever they go. Now this modern short-cut home-study method can make YOU an accomplished musician. It can bring you the good times you've always longed for.

More than 700,000 men, women, boys and girls have studied music without a teacher the famous U. S. School way. And the cost averages only a few cents a day!

Easy As A-B-C

This new "print-and-picture" method is literally as easy as A-B-C. The U. S. School simplified instructions, written by expert teachers, first tell you what to do. Then a picture shows you what to do. Then you do it yourself and hear it.

LEARN TO PLAY BY NOTE
Piano Saxophone
Guitar Violin
Organ Ukulele
Tenor Banjo
Hawaiian Guitar
Piano Accordion
Or Any Other Instrument

And you learn so much more quickly by this modern, up-to-date method than was possible in the old-fashioned, tiresome, scale-practicing way. Now you play real tunes almost from the start—by note. No teacher to fuss you. No wearying scales to plague you. No interference with business or pleasure, because you choose your own time at home.

Prove to yourself without cost how easily and quickly you can learn to play. Send today for our booklet, "How You Can Master Music in Your Own Home." With it comes a Free Demonstration Lesson which shows graphically how simple this expert home instruction really is. Mail the coupon TODAY. U. S. School of Music, 364 Brunswick Bldg., New York City. Instruments supplied if desired—cash or credit.

★★★ Good Show ★★ Fair Film ★ Mediocre

New Films

MUSS 'EM UP—★★—Preston Foster and Margaret Callahan in a mystery story which begins with the killing of a dog and ends with the killing of a couple of chauffeurs.—Radio.

DANCING FEET—★★—Eddie Nugent does a grand job in a musical which has excellent moments but on the whole nothing to rave about. Others in the cast include Vince Barnett, Ben Lyon, Isabel Jewell and Joan Marsh.—Republic.

KING OF THE DAMNED—★★★—Tense story of revolt on a convict island, with Conrad Veidt as the prisoner who attempts to prove that convicts treated like human beings will re-establish themselves. Helen Vinson and Noah Beery also in the cast.—Gaumont British.

BRIDES ARE LIKE THAT—★★★—Fine comedy romance about newlyweds and their battle against a harsh world with excellent performances by Ross Alexander and Anita Louise.—Warner.

DANGEROUS WATERS—★★—Melodramatic story of an ambitious ship officer and his adventures at sea. Cast includes Jack Holt, Robert Armstrong and Grace Bradley.—Universal.

EXCLUSIVE STORY—★★½—Film based on the career of Martin Mooney, reporter who was jailed for refusing to divulge the source of his information after exposing a gangster ring. Franchot Tone, Madge Evans and Stuart Erwin.—Metro.

THE INVISIBLE RAY—★★—Fairly entertaining horror story about a mad scientist who kills with the aid of radium. Boris Karloff, Bela Lugosi, Frances Drake.—Universal.

THE SINGING KID—★★★—About a great entertainer who is jilted by Broadway but fights his way back. Al Jolson, Lyle Talbot, Claire Dodd and Edward Everett Horton.—Warner.

ONE WAY TICKET—★★—A man steals the exact amount owed him by a closed bank and goes to jail for it. Lloyd Nolan, Peggy Conklin and Walter Connolly.—Columbia.

NAVY WIFE—★★—The marriage problems of a woman who weds a sailor. Just fair, with Claire Trevor standing out in a cast which includes Ralph Bellamy and Warren Hymer.—Twentieth Century-Fox.

TIMOTHY'S QUEST—★★—Dickie Moore in the rôle of an orphan who softens an old maid's heart. Eleanore Whitney, Tom Keene and Virginia Weidler.—Paramount.

CALL OF THE PRAIRIE—★★—Cowboys mixed up with bank robbers. William Boyd and Muriel Evans.—Paramount.

THE GARDEN MURDER CASE—★★—Edmund Lowe in a fine mystery story that should please "who-done-it?" fans. Virginia Bruce and Benita Hume.—Metro.

EVERY SATURDAY NIGHT—★★★—A tender story based on the life of the average American family. Full of interest and suspense. Cast includes Jed Prouty, Spring Byington and June Lang.—Twentieth Century-Fox.

NEXT TIME WE LOVE—★★★½—Margaret Sullavan's best picture, in which she plays the rôle of a career girl who marries and suffers by enforced absence of her husband. A splendid picture and a triumph for its star.—Universal.

Previously Reviewed

MODERN TIMES—★★★★—The long-awaited Chaplin picture with Charlie as the waif who attempts to aid a penniless girl. Splendid comedy, but would have been better had he talked. Paulette Goddard, Chester Conklin and Hank Mann.—Released by United Artists.

KING OF BURLESQUE—★★★★—Drama amid burlesque and the bright lights of Broadway, with Warner Baxter and Alice Faye delivering excellent performances.—Twentieth Century-Fox.

CEILING ZERO—★★★★—A whirlwind drama based on the behind-the-scenes lives of America's commercial pilots. Pat O'Brien in a thrilling rôle with Jimmy Cagney, Stuart Erwin, June Travis and Isabel Jewell contributing to make this a picture long to be remembered.—Warner.

Sally Eilers begs a kiss from Eddie Cantor who has a feeling that he won't be the champion kiss-resister long. A scene from Eddie's Four Star hit, Strike Me Pink

Right: Raymond Walburn, the faithful valet, having trouble with Gary Cooper, his master, the morning after the fateful night before. A scene from Gary's next picture, Opera Hat

CHATTERBOX—★★★—A too, too sweet story about a girl whose theatrical ambitions are greater than her talent. Anne Shirley, Phillips Holmes and Erik Rhodes.—Radio.

SYLVIA SCARLETT—★★★—Hepburn masquerading as a boy. Cary Grant in an unusual rôle is the only reason this picture merits a good rating.—Radio.

THE PASSING OF THE THIRD FLOOR BACK—★★★★—Splendid drama with Conrad Veidt in a Christ-like rôle.—G-B.

RIFFRAFF—★★★—First exciting moments of this picture dealing with life and love among tuna fishermen make it worth while. Jean Harlow, Spencer Tracy, Mickey Rooney and Vince Barnett. —Metro.

THE STORY OF LOUIS PASTEUR—★★★★—Paul Muni in a powerful portrayal of Pasteur, the French doctor, who struggled against great odds in his battle against disease and death.—Warner.

DANGEROUS—★★★★—Bette Davis in an unsympathetic rôle as a self-centered actress who leads Franchot Tone astray. Davis does a perfect dramatic job.—Warner.

FIRST A GIRL—★★★—Jessie Matthews in a delightful comedy about a girl who is forced to disguise herself as a man for the sake of her career.—GB.

MISTER HOBO—★★★—George Arliss in the rôle of a kindly tramp who upsets the financial wizards of France and straightens out the problems of young love.—GB.

A TALE OF TWO CITIES—★★★★—Dickens' masterful story of the French revolution translated to the screen perfectly by Ronald Colman, Elizabeth Allan, Blanche Yurka, Basil Rathbone and Donald Woods.—Metro.

THE BRIDE COMES HOME—★★★★—Hilarious comedy romance with Claudette Colbert who gets off to a fighting start with her young husband, played by Fred MacMurray.—Paramount.

THE LITTLEST REBEL—★★★—Another grand Shirley Temple picture, with Shirley as the little Southern girl who saves her father from death by appealing to Lincoln.—Twentieth Century-Fox.

AH WILDERNESS—★★★★—A simple yet powerful story of the life of an average family in the early 1900's. Perfectly played by Lionel Barrymore, Wallace Beery, Cecilia Parker and Eric Linden.—Metro.

I DREAM TOO MUCH—★★★—Lily Pons lifts her glorious voice in song for the screen. Henry Fonda has a leading rôle.—Radio.

A NIGHT AT THE OPERA—★★★★—The dizzy Marx Brothers return to the screen after a long absence in one of the funniest pictures ever filmed. Groucho racketeers in opera, with Kitty Carlisle and Allan Jones as foils.—Metro.

MUTINY ON THE BOUNTY—★★★★—A bloody page from the annals of British naval history, so perfectly filmed that it cannot help but be chosen the best picture of the year. The cast includes Charles Laughton, Clark Gable and Franchot Tone.—Metro.

PROFESSIONAL SOLDIER—★★★—In which Victor McLaglen, a hired modern warrior, kidnaps a young king. Freddie Bartholomew, Gloria Stuart and Michael Whalen.—Twentieth Century-Fox.

COLLEGIATE—★★★—Silly but greatly entertaining comedy with Jack Oakie as the playboy who inherits a girl's school. A fine cast, including Joe Penner, Ned Sparks, Frances Langford and Betty Grable.—Paramount.

CAPTAIN BLOOD—★★★★—A great adventure film, with Errol Flynn as the dynamic British exile who escapes and becomes a pirate. To help make the picture thrilling and well-acted there is a grand cast including Olivia de Havilland, Lionel Atwell, David Torrence, Guy Kibbee, Basil Rathbone and Ross Alexander.—Warner.

THE GHOST GOES WEST—★★★½—Robert Donat has never appeared more pleasing on the screen than he does here. Playing the dual rôle of a Scottish youth of today and of the ghost of that youth's eighteenth century ancestor, Donat produces a riot of mirth and laughter. As the Scottish youth, he sells his ancient castle to an American who wants it transported across the ocean to Florida. With the castle comes the ancestral ghost, too. Wires are sent to New York, telling them of the ghost's coming. Finally, in Florida, the ghost passes. You'll enjoy this film. —United Artists.

GOOD NIGHT, SISTER! HAVE A GOOD TIME!

SHE WAS TOO FAT!

And then she made up her mind to get thin and did, without hard exercise or starvation diet

Nobody loves a fat girl—but why mope about it when you can so easily get rid of that excess fat by means of a tried and true corrective, known and recommended by physicians the world over?

Many years ago medical science discovered that obesity—when an abnormal condition—is caused by the lack of an important element which the body normally supplies.

That element—which is the chief ingredient of Marmola—has since been prescribed to thousands of overweight women, with amazingly beneficial results. It is taken with their meals. They do not wear themselves out with exercising, do not starve themselves, nor drain their systems with drastic purgatives. Yet day by day they have felt lighter, more alert, more energetic. Soon they find their weight satisfactory. The excess fat has simply slipped away, revealing the trim and slender figure underneath.

Sounds like a miracle, but thousands of women who have taken Marmola as directed — 4 tablets a day — might well tell you it's a demonstrated fact. Indeed, since 1907, more than 20 million packages of Marmola have been purchased — proof positive that nothing succeeds like success. Marmola is put up by one of the leading medical laboratories of America.

Start today! You will soon experience Marmola's benefits. When you have gone far enough, stop taking Marmola. And you will bless the day when you first discovered this marvelous reducing agent!

Marmola is on sale by all dealers —from coast to coast.

Speaking About My New Clothes

wear in the picture. It's very important because it shows what miraculous progress fabric makers have made in their efforts to give us interesting new versions of our old favorites. I always have to have at least one or two plain black daytime frocks in my wardrobe. And this coat dress which "T" has turned out is the type I love. The neckline is high and round and the sleeves are cut wide, in raglan fashion, then fitted in near the elbows so that they dissolve into tight cuffs. This sort of dress is ideal, I think, for the working girl who wishes to look suitably attired for business hours but is just as anxious to look her best during the dinner date that same evening.

Right on the heels of this practical frock a thoroughly glamorous—in every sense of that poor, over-worked word—gown comes to my mind. And practical or impractical this white chiffon vision is a masterpiece. It's the sort of gown my cameraman, Teddy Tetzlaff adores. You see, he can have a photographic field-day with a gown that glitters and then you can come and see the picture and say "what an interesting effect!" without realizing that Teddy has had to exert every ounce of his camera-cunning to give you this moment of enjoyment. At any rate—describing this gown is almost as hard as achieving a new "Tetzlaff effect" so let us proceed.

White chiffon—as I said before—finds itself draped with loose bands of silver bugle beads which look almost like stripes. The gown itself has slim lines and these stripes, or bands, of shimmering beads are used vertically. They are suspended from the waistline down the skirt and they seem to tuck up under the hemline in a magic, mysterious manner. What a dress this is for dancing! And in case you're looking for an inspiration for a furless evening wrap just take a good timely tip from the long white satin cape I wear over this gown. The only detail in the cape is the treatment in front where it ties up around my neck in wide pieces of the satin.

I WEAR a negligée—or hostess gown—which I hope to kidnap, or abduct, or something, when the picture is finished. It's a luscious pale apricot panne velvet affair with a very slim line about the figure and huge, graceful sleeves. It ties at the throat and at the waist and is trimmed in bands of luxurious sable which gives a grand color contrast to the velvet. Travis certainly does this sort of thing divinely. And whenever I can arrange with the studio to do so I buy them to wear at home. These regal hostess gowns are very good for one's morale, I think. And one of my pet fashion fixations is that no matter what circumstances a woman may be in, she should have at least one garment of this type in her wardrobe. It's what I call "woman's right" and should by no means be monopolized by the lady of leisure who never has to work for her bread and butter.

But before I get completely off my subject I mustn't forget to mention the fact that I have adorable apricot colored mules with bands of the same sable, to match this negligée.

I Guard SHIRLEY TEMPLE

Fabric again scores, thanks to Mr. Banton's vigilant eye, in a formal evening ensemble of the shiniest material I've ever seen. This costume is black, I think, but I swear that the shimmering effect of the material confuses me even when I'm wearing the gown. You see it's covered with rows, placed closely together, of tiny gunmetal beads. And this beaded treatment, plus the sheen of the fabric itself, causes an optical illusion which is difficult to describe. The gown is made in tunic fashion with panels of black fox down the back, and there is a generous boa of black fox which I wear like a muff at the right moments in the scene.

And whether it makes for the correct story construction or not (after all, who's editor of this magazine this month anyway) I'm going to tell you about the fancy dress costume I wear. There's a bit of sentiment attached to this, you see, as well as a lot of excitement which I defy anyone to escape when dressed in such a costume. Travis Banton has always said that I reminded him of Gaby Deslys. This has always thrilled me, because whether I could be vain enough to agree with him or not, Gaby Deslys has been one of my idols ever since I can remember. She was such an exciting person, such a romantic figure in the days when she held the dramatic spotlight. And, as everyone knows, it is thrilling to be told such things. Therefore when Travis Banton looked at the costume plot for Love Before Breakfast and noticed that I would have a fancy dress costume he saw the opportunity to fulfill one of his fondest hopes. He could design and execute his conception of a modern Gaby Deslys creation.

WHITE satin. Graceful plumes of white ostrich. Ropes of pearls. White chiffon embroidered in diamente. The white satin drapes into a slim skirt. The ostrich plumes float from the skirt and form a boa which can be draped at random. The white chiffon and diamente form the bodice and the ropes of pearls go around my neck and are reflected in similar ropes wound around my wrists. There is a cap of white satin edged in diamente for my head and a graceful white plume of ostrich adorns it as does a pear-shaped pearl over the right eye which shows that my designer and dearest friend Mr. Banton, really "knows all" about Gaby Deslys. Even my sandals are edged with baguette diamond stones.

Before I end this and go back to the set where my friend and Director Walter Lang is and has been expecting me for well nigh an hour I have to tell you about just one more of my dresses.

The frock is of black and white in a very bold check which is almost a plaid. The skirt is short, of course, and I wear a circular cape of white piqué lined in the black and white check. I also have a scarf of white piqué lined in black and white check so that it can be reversed if desired. And with a white panama hat trimmed with a bunch of vari-colored posies—or with just a black ribbon band—there I am—right on the fashion deck for spring!

And don't forget—even though you may not believe in Love Before Breakfast you still must pay expert attention to your clothes.

STAY IN STYLE!

YOUR SKIN'S SO LOVELY DARLING!

TO CLEAR UP SKIN TROUBLES

Try This Improved Pasteurized Yeast That's EASY TO EAT

IN CASE AFTER CASE, pimples, blotches, and other common skin troubles are caused by a sluggish system. That is why external treatments bring you so little lasting relief.

Thousands have found in Yeast Foam Tablets an easy way to correct skin blemishes caused by digestive sluggishness.

Science now knows that very often slow, imperfect elimination of body wastes is brought on by insufficient vitamin B complex. The stomach and intestines, deprived of this essential element, no longer function properly. Your digestion slows up. Poisons, accumulating in your system, cause ugly eruptions and bad color.

Yeast Foam Tablets supply the vitamin B complex needed to correct this condition. These tablets are pure yeast—and yeast is the richest known food source of vitamins B and G. This improved yeast should strengthen and tone up your intestinal nerves and muscles. It should soon restore your eliminative system to healthy function.

With the true cause of your condition corrected, pimples and other common skin troubles disappear. And you feel better as well as look better.

Don't confuse Yeast Foam Tablets with ordinary yeast. These tablets have a pleasant, nut-like taste that you will really enjoy. And pasteurization makes them utterly safe for everyone to eat. They cannot cause fermentation and they contain nothing to put on fat.

Any druggist will supply you with Yeast Foam Tablets. The 10-day bottle costs only 50c. Get one today. Refuse substitutes.

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES

This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief Of Pain

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.

The kidneys are one of Nature's chief ways of taking the acids and waste out of the blood. If they don't pass 3 pints a day and so get rid of more than 3 pounds of waste matter, your 15 miles of kidney tubes may need flushing.

If you have trouble with frequent bladder passages with scanty amount which often smart and burn, the 15 miles of kidney tubes may need flushing out. This danger signal may be the beginning of nagging backache, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes and dizziness.

Don't wait for serious trouble. Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills — used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help flush out the 15 miles of kidney tubes. Get Doan's Pills.

Perish the Thought

WHY not have the Marx brothers edit one issue? The cover would probably be upside down. Blank pages would make up Harpo's contribution to the game, and imagine Groucho telling of the inside and intimate life of any star! Heaven only knows what Chico would do. But of course he would print plenty of pictures of good-looking blondes.—Wesley S. Bird, 72 West Blake Avenue, Columbus, Ohio.

Joan Jealous of Tone?

NOW that Joan and Franchot are joined together, it remains only for some producer, by co-starring them in a picture, to thrust them asunder! Franchot has talent and versatility far beyond any which Joan has even suggested. We need Joan, of course. We like her smart clothes, her smart lines, the surface brilliance of her acting which amuses us without disturbing us inside. But why waste Franchot Tone by casting him as her leading man? Many stars have more hair than he, and broader shoulders, and that's what Joan needs as support. But Franchot can act! The result of co-starring Joan with Tone would be either the complete crushing of his superior talent, or his rebellion, and the subsequent finish through professional jealousy, of what may otherwise make a successful marriage. Let Joan glitter and Franchot act, apart!—Betty McLean, Hillsboro, Ill.

Perfect Balance

AS PRESIDENT of a Franchot Tone Fan Club, I believe that everyone would like to see Joan Crawford and Franchot Tone together in pictures. After being with them as their guest at the Waldorf-Astoria recently, I feel that I am qualified to express an opinion regarding their future work together. They should continue to make pictures whenever a story is found suitable for both of their personalities. Their talents are so perfectly balanced and their sense of fair play so great, that I am sure there would never be a question of professional jealousy. However, I should like to see Miriam Hopkins with Franchot Tone again. They were splendid in The Stranger's Return.—Phyllis Carlyle, 67 Merrill Street, Portland, Maine.

Make Ginger a Star

GINGER ROGERS should be starred in her own pictures. When she is co-starred with Fred Astaire, Fred does all the hard dancing while Ginger just makes turns and does a little soft-shoe work. Then Ginger is hailed as a great dancer while all the credit is due to Fred. If Ginger is starred in her own pictures, she can take all the credit and I'll know she deserves it. Mr. Astaire needs someone like Eleanor Powell, and they'll both do some real tap-dancing.—Irene Guzik, 525 Tyndale Avenue, Youngstown, Ohio.

An Incongruous Combination

PUTTING Freddie Bartholomew in a picture with Shirley Temple seems utterly silly to me. Shirley's curls and Freddie's nice British accent are an incongruous combination. No doubt, for publicity's sake, romance rumors would be started as they were for Jackie Cooper. At the present, they are two very fine children. Why not let them stay that way?—Marjorie Geyer, 506 Glenwood Avenue, Syracuse, New York.

"—don't try to get well in a day..."

no appetite? nervous? losing weight? pale?

—there is usually a definite reason for these

DON'T try to get well in a day . . . this is asking too much of Nature. Remember, she has certain natural processes that just cannot be hurried.

But there is a certain scientific way you can assist by starting those digestive juices in the stomach to flowing more freely and at the same time supply a balanced mineral deficiency the body needs.

Therefore, if you are pale, tired and run-down . . . a frequent sign that your blood-cells are weak—then do try in the simple, easy way so many millions approve—by starting a course of S.S.S. Blood Tonic.

You may have the will-power to be "up and doing" but unless your blood is in top notch form you are not fully yourself and you may remark, "I wonder why I tire so easily."

Much more could be said—a trial will thoroughly convince you that this way, in the absence of any organic trouble, will start you on the road of feeling like yourself again. You should soon enjoy again the satisfaction of appetizing food . . . sound sleep . . . steady nerves . . . a good complexion . . . and renewed strength.

S.S.S. is sold by all drug stores in two sizes. The $2 economy size is twice as large as the $1.25 regular size and is sufficient for two weeks treatment. Begin on the upward today. © S.S.S. Co.

FRENCHY, it seems, is more than just cook. He's Eddie's valet, masseur, rubber-down, twenty-four-hour-doctor and things like that.

"Today, Mister Cantor," he said, "you've got a tough sequence at the studio, where you have to do a lot of physical work, and you know your stomach, so here's your breakfast."

And what do you suppose he set down for us?—a single poached egg, a half slice of toast, a cuppa weak coffee and a half a sliced orange. I was just opening my mouth to tell him off, but somehow my knife was in the way with the toast and egg, and it slipped in, so I couldn't say anything, and by the time I'd opened my mouth again, breakfast was over and Eddie was saying to hurry.

"Wait a minute—my hat," I yelled, but Frenchy was stuffing it in my hand, and the next thing I knew, I was in the auto with Eddie at the wheel and we were half-way to Goldwyn's studio. At seven-thirty we were in Eddie's dressing room and he was telling me to stop puffing so hard because he couldn't hear himself reading his mail. Then Eddie got into a barber chair! He's got one in his dressing room, and there he was being shaved and made up with grease paint. "Do I get a shave?" I asked, and Eddie said sure, there was a razor in the attached bathroom, but there wasn't a blade in it, so I skipped it, and by that time Eddie was listening to Frenchy, who'd come along in the rumble seat, reading his day's dialogue to him.

"ZopsawayIlunlinezh," glubbered a voice from beneath the shaving lather. Frenchy translated. "He says that's the way he learns his lines." I said uh huh, and was getting my breath. By eight-thirty, somebody'd given me a razor blade and I was shaved too, and said now I suppose we rest.

"REST—what's that?" yelled Eddie. He grabbed a handful of mail and began to read it and dictate answers to a secretary who had arrived.

There was a letter from President Roosevelt's secretary, asking Eddie if he'd like to spend a few days with the President at Warm Springs, Georgia. Eddie turned it down because he had to work.

At nine o'clock, Eddie yelled: "Come on, let's go!" And off we went again, this time to the movie set, where they had a balloon hanging with a hole in the basket and Parkyakarkus in the basket. Well, soon as Eddie got in, Director Norman Taurog told him to hang from the bottom of the basket and chin himself four or five times, while Parkyakarkus stepped on his head.

"I can do it," yelled Eddie, and he did it. Then Taurog made him do it over again because Parkyakarkus didn't step on his head hard enough. It seems Parkyakarkus is a friend of Eddie's.

So Eddie did it again, and Parky stepped hard this time, but Taurog didn't like it yet. He said Parkyakarkus stood up too high for the camera. So Eddie called Parkyakarkus something and they did it over again.

Now Eddie isn't any young guy any

The guarantee protects you.

The Best GRAY HAIR Remedy is Made at Home

You can now make at home a better gray hair remedy than you can buy, by following this simple recipe: To half pint of water add one ounce bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and one-fourth ounce of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it yourself at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. Barbo imparts color to streaked, faded or gray hair, makes it soft and glossy and takes years off your looks. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.

more and Taurog was telling him to do it over again. So Eddie drank a glass of buttermilk, glares at Taurog, and says: "I can do it," and off they go again. This time, Parkyakarkus lost his hat and the scene was no good, so Taurog says do it again.

Eddie was pretty nearly winded. He staggers over to me and says: "Cinch, ain't it, you dope?" Then he goes back and does the scene again, and this time it's all right, and Eddie nearly faints and they send for a glass of brandy.

Instead, this guy Frenchy comes without the brandy and says: "You had buttermilk, didn't you, Mister Cantor? Well—you know your stomach. No brandy!"

"So now," I said, "we rest." But Eddie yells: "Come on, let's go!" and he grabs my arm and we bust back to his dressing room, where he calls up a town in Arizona on business and answers another dozen letters and grabs me and yells: "Come on, let's go!" and back to another set we go, and darned if Eddie didn't have to do a lot of work on the flying trapeze.

It seems in the picture he falls from the balloon, or something like that, I don't just exactly know, but he gets caught in the hands of one of those troupes of trapeze acrobats, and gets flung around.

Well, they did that until lunch. I was just strong enough to wait for that. I always am, no matter what the exertion I've been through, when the lunch is free.

THEN, when lunch was over, and I hadn't even got through my noodle zoop yet, when Eddie yelled: "Come on, let's go!" and off we went again to the trapezes.

"Well," says I, "darned if I'll exhaust myself watching you," so I went over to the lunch-and-drink man on the set where I'd charged a beer to Eddie, and said: "Gimme a liverwurst on rye and charge it to Ed."

"Oh, yeah?" he yelled, "you pay me for that beer—Eddie's Frenchy doesn't allow anything to be charged." And he called the stage cop and I had to pay for the beer. So I went back to the set and wore out my eyes and pants watching Eddie get flung around trapezes till he lost his clothes. Because Taurog made them do it so many times, it was eight before the job was done!

But we ate. Oh, yeah—at seven-thirty, they brought me a bowl of zoop. Eddie had one, too. I grabbed an egg sandwich, too, but Eddie didn't have time. He grabbed me instead and yelled, "Let's go!" So with me stuffing the sandwich in my mouth, I watched him get the make-up off and a shower, and then he threw me in his car, the big stiff, and before I knew it, we were downtown in Los Angeles where they broadcast Eddie's radio program.

"This ain't Sunday," I hollered, because I knew Eddie did his radio program on Sundays. "I know it, you crybaby!" he hollered right back, "but we're rehearsing tonight." And while I fell in a chair, he did an hour and three-quarters rehearsing. Then he read a couple of telegrams, dictated some replies, and then he turned to me.

It was then he said what he said.

He said: "Well, what'll we do now?"

It was the last straw. They tell me I screamed something awful when I finally collapsed.

You Are Invited to a Hollywood Party

TO EXPLAIN this great event simply—SCREEN BOOK organizes a complete, all-expense vacation trip of two weeks, from Chicago to Hollywood and back.

Quite aside from the grand times you'll have in Hollywood, which include parties at the night spots and visits to the studios, naturally you'll cover a lot of interesting territory coming out and returning. The Twin Cities, Yellowstone Park, Seattle and Puget Sound, San Francisco and China Town, the Grand Canyon, Pike's Peak—all colorful moments in the glamorous journey.

The Roosevelt Hotel, home of many stars and the place where Eadie Adams sings in the famed Cinegrill, will be your home in Hollywood. Plans have been completed at Darryl Zanuck's studio, 20th Century Fox, for all to spend an afternoon visiting the studio and seeing their great stars. If luck is with us, and Shirley Temple is working, we'll see the most famous little girl in pictures. There's Victor McLaglen, Ronald Colman, Loretta Young, Rochelle Hudson, Alice Faye, Janet Gaynor and a host of other 20th Century-Fox players working at that studio and they'll be invited by SCREEN BOOK to be on hand to greet our visitors.

Last year the party at Raquel Torres' home was the highspot of the whole trip. We'll promise you just as much fun, if not more, this year—for we have extended the time to be spent in Hollywood. If you can't plan your vacation for the Movieland Tour, which leaves by special train from Chicago on July nineteenth, then plan to go on the one leaving later, on August ninth. The second tour, called The Movieland Special, will also have a Hollywood hostess to greet you at a party and the welcoming studio will be Universal, where such great pictures as Sutter's Gold (Edward Arnold, Binnie Barnes, Lee Tracy), Love Before Breakfast (Carole Lombard, Preston Foster, Cesar Romero) and Show Boat (Irene Dunne, Charles Winninger, Allan Jones) are now in production. Both trips will be equally exciting.

Naturally the cost of such a trip would staggering if you attempted it on your own. By making up a special train and getting group rates on everything, the cost is really absurdly small. And SCREEN BOOK is able to give you a glimpse of Hollywood no other tourists could hope to see.

Write now for full details, contained in an illustrated pamphlet ready to be mailed you at once. Address Mr. Joe Godfrey, Jr., Movieland Tour Manager, 360 North Michigan Ave., Chicago.

Remember, we're expecting you as an honored guest at Paula Stone's party! Here's one vacation trip you'll long remember, so write now for your pamphlet and mark one of those dates with a red circle on your calendar of things you MUST do!

WATCH FOR MORE NEWS!

Many more unusual events are planned for The Movieland Tour of 1936. Read about them in the next issue of SCREEN BOOK.

Let Sylvia Tell You How To Live!

The initial cost isn't so great. And it's like a piece of hardware. You certainly can't spot a leopard skin by dunking it in your drink. It's good for any occasion—be it sport or dress. It will last so long that the surviving pieces can be handed down to the grandchildren when they play Tarzan. In fact, it breaks a furrier's heart to sell one. For he knows that by the time the purchaser returns to buy another his shop will have succumbed to some depression and his orphaned children will be raising rabbits.

"The fact of it is," Sylvia says, "whenever I buy clothes I first ask myself, 'how much mileage can I get out of that?' By mileage—well, you know what I mean. I'm for the things that will not only last through a number of seasons but that will also see me through the most occasions—also the most kinds of weather."

But hear what the Sidney had to say about her pet costume. "No woman who wears a classic tailleur can ever be badly dressed. It will take her through any occasion of the day. It will last for years. In fact, it's always been my own opinion that most women buy too many inexpensive clothes."

OF COURSE if you want to copy the Sidney formula for making sense, you'll first have to acquire her genuine independence of spirit. She has learned to discount certain feminine failings in the interest of common sense. She's taken this thing, Vanity, apart and has found out what makes it tick. She knows that in order to be supremely unhappy you've first got to be vain. Then the rest comes easily!

You're skeptical about that? Well listen to this. When Sylvia left hurriedly last sping to visit friends in Nassau she took one suitcase. She was wearing a grey tailored suit. This one bag contained sweaters, blouses, accessories to go with the suit. Oh, yes, it contained, too, a pair of comfortably worn jodhpurs for horse-back riding.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

Without Calomel—And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Your whole system is poisoned and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

Laxatives are only makeshifts. A mere bowel movement doesn't get at the cause. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." Harmless, gentle, yet amazing in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name. Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c at all drug stores. © 1935, C.M.Co.

Comedy and Tragedy

pointed downward, "Your shoe's untied."

The Negro glanced down—for a second. In the next he was on the floor—being counted out.

"That hain't no fair," he said to Beery later, "that referee—he begun to count at seven."

"Do you know who that was you boxed?" asked Beery.

"No, sah—an' I doan wanta know."

I told him that it was Kid McCoy. And he quit his job.

Eric Von Stroheim has often been called "the hard luck guy of Hollywood." His wife was burned severely in a beauty parlor, and his young son has since been terribly ill. But Hollywood has not deserted its most picturesque figure.

Von Stroheim's arrival on the cinema scene was one of the most spectacular in Hollywood. A maze of contradictions, he is an interesting, a lovable, and a bewildering personality.

A man of outstanding ability, he enters a room like no other person. He "makes an entrance." Heels clicked together, head thrown back, his bull neck rigid, his cane held at a certain angle, he approaches his hosts with the grace of a tiger.

Only once was the show ever stolen from Von Stroheim. It was at the Los Angeles appearance of Dusé, the celebrated Italian actress. It is an actor's business to be seen. They generally appear late at all performances. Dusé would allow no one to be seated while the curtain was up. I accompanied Chaplin, who, through accident or design, arrived late and was forced to stand during the first act. This had its compensation, as he was allowed to find his seat between the acts with the full lights of the theater upon him.

The great Von Stroheim also waited. Each actor tried vainly to find his seat while the crowd cheered. Mr. Chaplin, however, made such a fuss that the crowd's attention was at last directed to him alone.

He had stolen the show from the great Eric Von Stroheim.

It was Mabel Normand who said to me a long time ago, with the sadness only born of wit, "It's all a circus, Jim, this Hollywood, and we're like a lot of little kids standing inside, while the rain is beating on the tent. Suddenly, some one turns a big light on us; then people point their fingers, and we look around, pretending to be scared, while none of us knows what it's all about. After a while, the rain stops and the sun shines, and we go outside. But it's not the same any more. The pointing fingers have changed us. We pretend that the light hurts our eyes. But we feel very sad when they turn it away."

"But, Mabel," said ZaSu Pitts, "surely you don't mind."

"No," sighed Mabel, "not a great deal—only when they keep the light away too long."

And Mabel Normand personified the laughter and the tears of Hollywood.

Why Kay Francis Fascinates Men

much he cost Kay in rewards and advertisements for his return. Once she had an appeal broadcast over the radio for him. A milkman found him a few blocks away and returned him.

Eventually Snifter did a good job of it, got himself thoroughly lost and has never been heard from since. Although that has been several years ago, I have no doubt but that, like Enoch Arden, he'll turn up some day to complicate her life which is now bound up in dachshunds.

She doesn't go in for jewelry. As nearly as my memory serves me, she doesn't own a star sapphire and I doubt that she has over one or two pieces of jewelry to her name.

Some women—particularly actresses—select handsome men for escorts, as a complement to their own looks. Kay never has. The men with whom she has been associated have all had to have something more to offer than mere physical attractiveness. None of the men I have seen her with would ever be even a candidate in a "handsome man" contest. But she doesn't mind.

To me, the most significant thing about Kay is that her closest friends are Richard and Jessica Barthelmess. There are no two people in Hollywood more truly refined and cultured than they. It is a mutual compliment that they can find in her and she in them, the ideal companions. One night, in full evening regalia, they may be at the most exclusive cabaret in town. The next will find them in the shoddiest dives. But they never forget themselves. There is nothing of hauteur in their manner at the cabarets nor do they descend to gutter-levels in the dives.

Frequent meetings are not necessary for her to maintain a friendship. She takes it up after a hiatus where it was left off. She pays you the compliment of assuming you have intelligence. She talks freely to friends and her remarks are not prefaced with "This is not for publication." You're supposed to use your head.

I have seen Kay in many different surroundings and have known her in a diversity of settings. I like her best, not as a considerate hostess or thoughtful guest but when we accidentally run into each other, pull up our chairs and settle down to a gab fest.

Kay is one of the few people I know of whom Tennyson, I think it was, might have been dreaming when he wrote:

"Age shall not wither, nor custom stale,
The infinite variety of her charms."

ANSWERS TO THE KAY FRANCIS PERSONALITY TEST

To score a 100% rating in the Kay Francis personality test on page 69, the answer to each of the ten questions should be "No!" Take off ten points for each question to which you answered "yes." If your final rating is 70%, your popularity among men should be assured. A rating of 90% to 100% indicates a personality that should appeal to men of all types.

With the Editor IN HOLLYWOOD

Carole Lombard, the new Guest Editor, delivers a vital message

SINCE this, in all probability, is the only "editorial" I'll ever have the chance to inflict on the public, I've given its subject matter considerable thought. And I've decided to devote this page to a heart-to-heart talk with those of you who are ambitious to become actors and actresses.

If the letters which you write to the stars, directors and producers of Hollywood may be taken as a census, your number must be legion. I feel that I know you personally, for many thousands of you have written to me, and, perhaps because you are convinced we shall never meet, you've thrown reserve overboard and poured out your hearts' desires in your letters.

I, for one, do not doubt the sincerity of your ambition—and neither do I question its worth. And yet, many of you start your letters with this preface, "Probably you will think I'm silly because I want to act . . ." Why should I, of all people, consider you silly? My ambition is exactly the same as yours, I, also, want to act—and the fact that I've been permitted a chance to do so has only confirmed my ambition and made it flame the higher.

Guest Editor Carole Lombard on the job

● Certainly, there is no reason to be ashamed of the desire to act. The merchandizing of entertainment has become "big business." There is an increasing market for acting. It has become a dignified profession which offers rich rewards, both in remuneration and in self-satisfaction. The actor no longer is classed with the mountebank.

The so-called intelligentsia used to sneer at the movies, and perhaps the crude "flickers" of fifteen or twenty years ago justified the sneers. But every baby must learn to toddle before learning to run, and motion pictures, then, were in the toddling stage. Today, with such pictures as David Copperfield, Lives of a Bengal Lancer, Rose Marie and Midsummer Night's Dream being featured on every studio's production schedule, the screen has become as definitely a medium of artistic expression as is literature, painting or the opera. Hollywood has attracted the best writers, the best directors, the best actors and actresses. The future possibilities of the once despised movie are unlimited.

● So—If you are ambitious to act and self-analysis assures you that the ambition is deep-seated and sincere—don't be ashamed. Instead of nursing the fear that someone may consider you silly, take stock of your assets and your liabilities and get busy! Make a start toward your goal!

How?

That's a reasonable question and I'll answer it to the best of my ability.

First of all, consider the changes which have been brought about by the developments of the past few years.

The addition of dialogue has brought the screen player into direct competition with the trained stars of the stage—usually with disastrous results to the imperfectly equipped screen player. Attractive appearance and physical grace, which used to be paramount considerations in recruiting new personalities for pictures, still have weight, but they have become secondary to these other, far more important points:

Have you a vibrant, emotionally-expressive voice?

Have you the trained intelligence necessary to learn dialogue and interpret a rôle?

Can you act? Do you understand timing? Have you mastered the technical fundamentals?

Unless you can answer every one of those questions in an unqualified affirmative, you are not ready for the Hollywood of 1936!

● And still I say, "don't give up your ambition if it is really sincere. Just curb your patience and remember that acting is a profession. All of those qualifications can be acquired. If you were determined to become a great engineer, or a great singer, or a great doctor, you would not expect overnight fame and success—so why look for sudden success on the screen? The rewards of merit in the acting profession are just as great and just as worth waiting and working to achieve.

Start on the stage, not on the screen. Hollywood hasn't time to train beginners, consequently, Hollywood no longer has a market for beginners. Pictures are made on definite schedule and directors dare not devote too much time to any one scene. And the actor must stand or fall on the virtue of that impromptu performance.

On the stage, things proceed at an entirely different pace. Weeks and sometimes months are spent in rehearsing every member of the cast in his rôle until he is satisfactory. Then the play opens, usually in some unimportant theater, and each member of the cast still has the opportunity to shade his performance and improve. Audience reaction is an invaluable guide according to all of the great stage stars.

Perhaps you live in a small town, which has no legitimate theater. If so, you may argue that that lack checkmates your ambition at the very start. If you'll pardon my frankness, your ambition is very anemic if it can be so easily defeated.

Hollywood, now as always, is eager for new faces. But its recruits must come already trained. If the screen is your goal, do not imagine, for one moment, that you are being wasted on an amateur stage. Every year, Hollywood is sending out new battalions of talent scouts.

It's up to you! And it can be done! Instead of burning your hearts out with that "great ambition" you write about, spend your energies in a constructive effort to achieve your goal.

Invisible Rhythm Treads

Give Amazing Comfort in the Smartest of Shoes . . . RHYTHM STEP

IT took Hollywood by storm . . . this grand new idea in shoes! And women everywhere are thrilled to find that the lightest, trimmest of style shoes have amazing extra comfort features . . . with Invisible Rhythm Treads! An utterly new principle that makes heavy leathers, weighty arches and bulky heels entirely unnecessary to ease the strain of body weight! A revolutionary idea that makes walking more buoyant, more graceful and more comfortable!

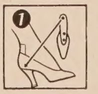
ONE . . . TWO . . . THREE STEP . . .

Means Extra Support in Light, Dainty Shoes

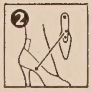
Rhythm Step exclusive feature . . . Invisible Rhythm Treads . . . buoys up your foot at three strain points . . . instead of just the main arch! It cushions your heel against pavement pounding. Gives a "lift" to your arch and metatarsal . . . with less weight and bulk than has ever been possible! In shoes so gay that smart young things and women who've been wearing "comfort" shoes for years, greeted them with enthusiasm!

Jyll Egger, Dancing "Headliner", Shows How Invisible Rhythm Treads Support the Foot at Three Strain Points

As your heel pounds the pavement Rhythm Treads cushion the shock and protect delicate nerve centers.



As weight shifts to your arch all strain is absorbed and cushioned . . . in addition to the usual built-in arch.



As full weight centers on ball of foot the metatarsal arch is supported, keeping delicate bones in position.

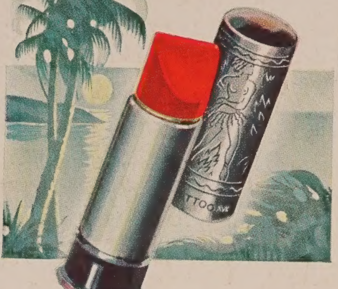
Tattoo your lips



THERE'S smartness in rich, luscious color . . . but there's distinction of a smarter, more exciting kind when lips have tempting color, but no pastiness to spoil it. Pasteless lip color . . . that's TATTOO!

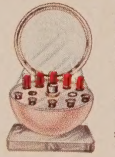
You put it on . . . let it set . . . then wipe it off. Nothing remains on your lips but smooth, even, transparent South Sea red that's smarter than smart . . . that stays for hours and hours, regardless . . . and that actually keeps lips caressingly soft, smooth . . . and oh so desirable! Never drys them as ordinary indelible lipstick so often does.

It's fun to select your proper shade of TATTOO by testing all five on your own skin . . . at the Tattoo Color Selector displayed in your favorite drug or department store. Try them all. Then . . . tattoo your lips!

TEST THESE FIVE SHADES

No. 1 has an exciting orangish pink cast. Rather light. Ravishing on blondes and titian blondes. It is called "CORAL."

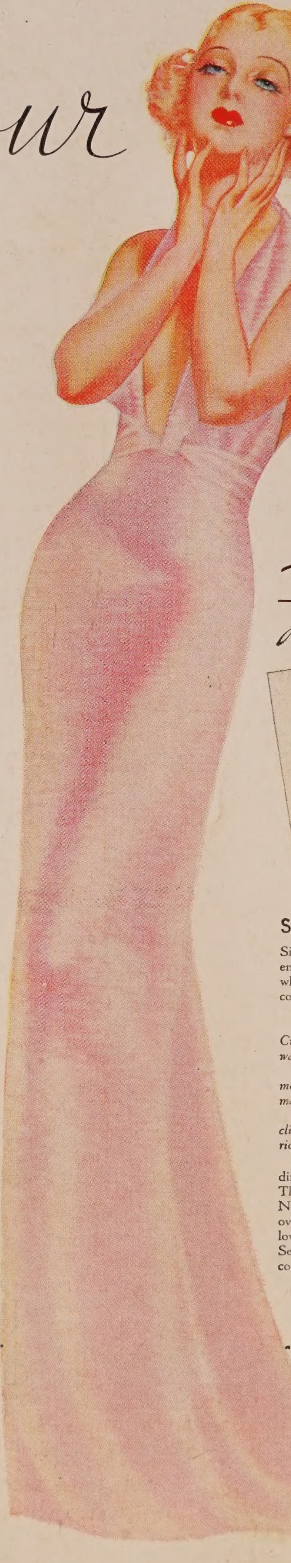
No. 2 is an exotic, new shade, brilliant, yet transparent. Somehow we just cannot find the right words to describe it. It is called "EXOTIC."



No. 3 is a medium shade. A true, rich blood color that will be an asset to any brunette. It is called "NATURAL."

No. 4 changes color when applied to the lips. Gives an unusually transparent richness and warmth of color. Called "PASTEL."

No. 5 has the rich intensity of Hawaii's most gorgeous flower . . . the wild Hibiscus. It's vivid, very vivid, yet has a lovely softness. Called "HAWAIIAN."



Free! THIS GORGEOUS "TATTOO GIRL" READY TO FRAME

As a special gift, we will send you postpaid and free of all charge, an exquisite 11" x 14" art reproduction (free of advertising matter) of the gorgeous "Tattoo Girl" illustrated here . . . painted by Geo. B. Petty, America's foremost illustrator of alluring women. Made from the original engravings, and bearing the artist's signature, this striking figure is a most effective picture for framing.

A CASH BONUS

for Everyone who Travels!

You've heard a lot about the Bonus this year—but just what is the meaning of the word? A bonus is "something of value, over and above the usual or expected amount". How well that definition fits the saving on each Greyhound ticket!

Every person who has traveled by Greyhound during the past year has received a cash saving or "bonus", ranging from a few dollars to a few hundred. This economy in ticket cost is not the only bonus that goes to Greyhound passengers. There is a big extra portion of scenic enjoyment for every mile traveled—a generous share of good fellowship among passengers—a welcome surplus of comfort in deeply-cushioned reclining chairs.

You are in line for this cash bonus and these extra advantages every time you stand before a Greyhound ticket counter. So, plan to get your share of them, many times during 1936.

[UNTIL SHE SMILES]

"PINK TOOTH BRUSH" makes her evade all close-ups—dingy teeth and tender gums destroy her charm

You naturally expect to see—from any lovely woman you meet—a lovely smile.

(A flash of sound, white teeth. A glimpse of firm, healthy gums.)

You don't expect to see—from a lovely woman—an unlovely smile.

(An unpleasant glimpse of dingy teeth, tender gums.) And you shouldn't. And you needn't!

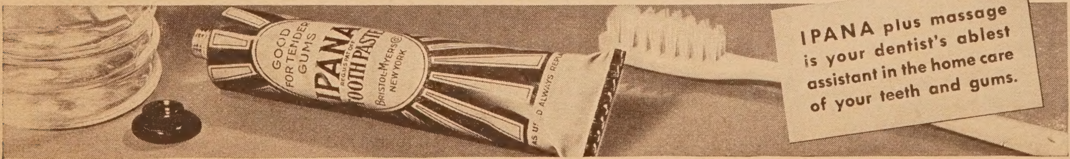
The modern dentist knows how to avoid "pink tooth brush." How to correct it. How to treat the unpleasant mouth conditions due to soft foods and lack of massage. He will tell you what to do about it. And it's very reasonable. Too many soft foods . . . not enough hard, fibrous foods . . . and consequently not enough work to keep teeth and gums normally healthy—these are the primary reasons why "pink tooth brush" is so common nowadays.

EXERCISE KEEPS GUMS HEALTHY

So modern dental practice encourages an oral health measure that's not only effective but very easy and simple—Ipana plus massage. All you do is to put a little extra Ipana on brush or fingertip, and rub it into your gums. Massage them thoroughly. Do it regularly, every time you brush your teeth.

You can tell that your gums are grateful by the healthier, cleaner "feel" to them. New circulation tingles through them. They feel less lazy. More alive . . . Less sensitive.

Make this gum massage with Ipana a part of your daily routine—morning and night. And "pink tooth brush" will probably always remain a stranger to you . . . gingivitis, pyorrhea and Vincent's disease probably will be just words in a book. And the new whiteness of your teeth, the new brilliance of your smile, will make you wonder why every woman isn't using Ipana plus massage.



IPANA plus massage is your dentist's ablest assistant in the home care of your teeth and gums.

TODAY'S GOSSIP

By the Star Reporter

All the gossip that's fit to print. Follow your favorites through this department each month!

NORMA SHEARER is more difficult to see these days than Garbo. She won't be interviewed, she won't allow visitors on her set and she is rapidly becoming a Hollywood myth. Norma is so deeply interested in Romeo and Juliet that she wants nothing to interfere with her work. Your reporter, however, did pay a visit to the garden set of the picture, sneaking past a wary watchman. The garden scene is one of the most beautiful, expensive bits of Hollywood magic ever conceived, occupying as it does more than half of one huge sound stage. One thing was puzzling however. How, I wondered, could Leslie Howard climb Romeo-like to the ornate balcony which was almost three stories up? Later I discovered that there was an exact duplicate of the little balcony on another sound stage. Here it was that the close-ups were shot.

Sir Walter Raleigh has nothing on Donald Woods, who during Hollywood's recent torrential rains rescued Anita Louise, whose coupe stalled in a flood of water

What happens to chorus beauties such as Mary Jane Haley and Clarissa Sherry, seen above in their costumes for The Great Ziegfeld? LeRoy Prinz, famous dance director, reveals the answer on page 8

GRACE MOORE has a surprise for screen audiences in her new picture, The King Steps Out. She sings, of course, but the main event is a Viennese Waltz through which she gracefully glides with Franchot Tone as her partner.

GEORGE RAFT started something when he did a studio walk-out, refusing to go on working with Carole Lombard in The Princess Comes Across, because he was miffed at the selection of a cameraman who favored Carole in the close-ups. Fred MacMurray figuratively stepped into Raft's shoes for the rôle, but he too shied at actually going to work. Fred hid away for a few days hoping to get his salary, estimated at about $350, boosted.

Carole Lombard, whose exciting parties are the talk of Hollywood, poses with her friend, romantic Robert Taylor, starred opposite Janet Gaynor in Small Town Girl

FRED ASTAIRE has been a happy man these days, what with the visit of his sister, Adele, to Hollywood and the studio with her husband, Lord Cavendish. All eyes were on Lord and Lady Cavendish as they entered the studio commissary for lunch as the guests of Virginia Bruce. Outwardly they were cheerful, but onlookers knew that behind their quiet smiles each hid an abiding sorrow. The black band on the arm of Lord Cavendish was a symbol of grief for Adele's twins, dead at birth. And time has not yet softened the sorrow of Virginia Bruce over the passing of John Gilbert.

TODAY—
FRESH, RESTED,
FEELING FINE

HERE'S HOW I DID IT

"A friend told me how to clear up that logy, bilious, 'all-run-down' condition caused by constipation. Before I went to bed last night, I chewed delicious FEEN-A-MINT for 3 minutes.* It's this chewing, they tell me, that makes FEEN-A-MINT so much more effective. Well, it worked wonders for me. Today I'm fresh and rested—feel like a new person. This easy 3-minute way is so much nicer than taking harsh, griping, 'gulped' cathartics."

FEEN-A-MINT is fine for children too. No urging necessary to make them take FEEN-A-MINT, because they love its cool, fresh, minty chewing-gum flavor. And it's not habit-forming. Go to your druggist today and get a generous family-sized supply of delicious FEEN-A-MINT. Only 15c or 25c. Slightly higher in Canada.

Today's Gossip

The gang was all there! When Fay Wray, Movieland's champion commuter to England, returned to Hollywood, three of her best friends—Jeanette MacDonald, Dolores Del Rio and Gene Raymond greeted her at the station ters, Dorothy and Paula, always occupy the same booth at The Brown Derby, where they dine early and usually in the company of Charles Collins, Dorothy's young husband, who makes his first screen appearance in Dancing Pirates. Other Brown Derby addicts who may usually be depended upon to put in an appearance at this famous Hollywood eatery are Carole Lombard, Al Jolson, Claudette Colbert, and Gary Cooper. This is at the Vine street Derby where the great and near great gather for lunch and a midnight snack after the Friday night prize fights. But the greatest crowd of celebrities may be seen on "maid's night off"—Thursday evenings—when they crowd the Beverly Hills Brown Derby to its doors.

DICK POWELL has a new leading lady and dancing partner in Stagestruck. She is Anita Louise, who makes her departure from ballet and aesthetic dancing for the first time in her nineteen years.

DOLORES DEL RIO may live in a mansion with a staff of servants at her beck and call, but once each week during the five years of her marriage to Cedric Gibbons she has donned an apron, shooed the maid out of her kitchen and cooked dinner for hubby.

JEAN HARLOW, your reporter believes, is about the most democratic star in Hollywood. The other day Jean pulled her car up to the curb in front of a beauty parlor and found herself surrounded by a group of tourists from Nebraska. "Of course," she responded to their pleas for autographs. Then, to please them further, she posed for several pictures and chatted for ten minutes before her appointment broke up the impromptu meeting. Few stars these days would bother to be that considerate.

CLARK GABLE has a George Raft

WHAT HAPPENS TO CHORUS BEAUTIES?

"You can believe it or not," says famed dance director LeRoy Prinz, "but Hollywood chorus girls—most of them—wed sooner or later, and usually it's sooner. In New York they seem to have eyes only for beautiful clothes, jewels and night life, but in Hollywood they forget all that. I can't count all of my girls who have married doctors, business executives and prominent men—happily too. They settle down and have children, but it's a funny thing—in a year or so a good many of them are back for another fling at dancing. They can't seem to get it out of their systems."

"They love to sing-a"

So Al Jolson, Sybil Jason, The Yacht Club Boys, Cab Calloway & His Band, Edward Everett Horton, Wini Shaw, Lyle Talbot, Allen Jenkins and Claire Dodd Have Joined Forces and Voices in a Celebrity-Packed Warner Bros. Song Show That Recalls the Glories of Al's Immortal "Singing Fool."

"THE SINGING KID"

THE PICTURE OF THE MONTH

'Sonny Boy' in skirts! The world's greatest and the world's youngest entertainers form one of the most delightful picture partnerships in years.

Those Yacht Club Boys, boast of Broadway's and Hollywood's niftiest night spots, are musically madder than ever in 'My! How This Country Has Changed'.

Girls! Girls! 100's of 'em! bring Harlem to Hollywood in lavish dance numbers staged by Bobby Connolly, forming a gorgeous backdrop for the dramatic story which was directed by William Keighley for First National Pictures.

Read why this well known movie star picked the girl with the Tangee Lips

WARREN WILLIAM makes the lipstick test on the set of "The Gentleman from Big Bend", a Warner Brothers Production.

● We presented Mr. William to three lovely girls ...One wore the ordinary lipstick...one, no lipstick...and the third used Tangee. Almost at once he chose the Tangee girl. "I like lips that are not painted—lips that have natural beauty!"

Tangee can't give you that "painted look"—because Tangee isn't paint! Instead by its magic color change principle, Tangee changes from orange in the stick to the one shade of blush rose to suit your complexion. Try Tangee. It comes in two sizes, 39c and $1.10. Or for a quick trial send 10c for the Special 4-Piece Miracle Make-Up Set offered below.

● BEWARE OF SUBSTITUTES . . . when you buy. Don't let some sharp sales person switch you to an imitation... there is only one Tangee. But when you ask for Tangee... be sure to ask for TANGEE NATURAL. There is another shade called Tangee Theatrical, but it is intended only for those who insist on vivid color and for professional use.

SCREEN BOOK'S Talent Scout presents . . .

Elspeth Eric

Introducing the first in a series of outstanding personalities Hollywood cannot afford to overlook

ELSPETH ERIC is as intriguing and unusual as her name. A talented girl who has more to offer than her oddly fascinating beauty and personality, she has made a name for herself among the glittering stars of the Broadway stage while still in her early twenties. Playgoers who saw her performance in Small Miracle last year and her sensitive, moving work in the dramatic hit, Dead End, during the current season have hailed her as one of the more important discoveries of recent years. Elspeth Eric was chosen as the month's discovery by SCREEN BOOK's Talent Scout for the obvious reason that she stands head and shoulders above the ranks of Broadway's younger actresses. Hollywood will inevitably sign her for the movies, so remember her name and the fact that her first screen recognition appeared in this magazine.

SCREEN BOOK's Talent Scout functions both as a source of information for studios in the constant search for new players and for the public in revealing the first news about the screen stars of tomorrow. Follow this department each month. Someone you know may be the next to be singled out and asked by the Talent Scout to take a bow.

THIS IS THE WOMAN WHO SAID:

"What's the difference,

ALL LAXATIVES ARE ALIKE!"

THE LADY above made a mistake. A grave mistake . . . yet, lots of people make it.

One day she was constipated, and took a laxative. Picked it at random. It happened to be a harsh, quick-acting cathartic that raced through her system in a couple of hours. It upset her. Nauseated her. Sent pains shooting through her stomach. Left her weak—weary . . . Such drastic remedies should never be taken, except on the advice of a physician.

DON'T SHOCK YOUR SYSTEM

When you need a corrective, don't make the mistake of assuming that all laxatives are alike. They're not! You'll feel a whole lot better when you take a correctly timed laxative. One that won't rush through your system too quickly. And yet, one that is completely thorough.

Ex-Lax is just such a laxative. It takes sufficient time—6 to 8 hours—to work. Hence, your system is not thrown "out of rhythm." You aren't upset or nauseated. You don't suffer from stomach pains. Ex-Lax action is so mild, so easy, you scarcely realize you've taken a laxative—except for the relief you enjoy.

A PLEASURE TO TAKE

With Ex-Lax you say farewell to bitter, nasty-tasting purgatives and cathartics. Because Ex-Lax tastes just like delicious chocolate. It's a real joy to take—not a punishment. Get a box today—only 10c at any drug store. You'll also find a more economical family size for 25c.

Why Dick Powell Wants Marriage!

The idol of millions explains his early divorce and tells why his present plans include a wife and children

By Linda
Heath

Dick Powell, the groom, and Joan Blondell, the bride? Hollywood friends believe that Dick's desire to settle down is centered in this lovely young actress

DICK POWELL is looking forward to the time when he'll be able to quit pictures. And the reason? He wants a wife . . . home . . . babies . . . time for relaxation . . . and all the other things he says he can't have while playing his present real-life rôle of "the busiest young man in the world!"

"My present contract still has three more years to run," says Dick. "After that. . . ."

But wait a minute. That's getting ahead of our story. For it was at Dick's own home, on a recent rainy morning, between listening to mellow symphonic records and eating cake and coffee in front of a roaring fire, that he gave me one of the most humanly sympathetic interviews a film star ever gave an interviewer.

"What's all this about three years?" I asked. "Why that tone of finality about 'three years from now'?" And then he told me.

"All my life, I've done nothing but work," he said. "I've never had time to play. And yet I've been 'playing' all my life. Had a swell time at it, too.

Joan Blondell—strikingly attractive, perfect in health, and a girl with a grand sense of humor. She completely typifies the type of girl with whom Dick Powell could be happy

"I really believe that marriage is necessary to every man," says Dick Powell

But I've missed a lot of things a man should have—and I'm going out and get 'em, pretty soon."

Even as a schoolboy, Dick Powell always was a bear for work. When the other boys were out playing games and sparking with the girls, Dick worked, afternoons, Saturdays and summers, in a grocery store. "Always wanted to make money," he reminisces now.

THEN, after a year in the Little Rock, Arkansas, college, he took a fling at vaudeville.

"There was a winter in St. Louis, when I was eighteen or nineteen, that I almost starved," he says with matter-of-fact calmness. "With a piano player as partner, I managed to get a few bookings at the cheaper neighborhood theaters. I'd tell jokes, and sing. And oh, how we would flop! After that whole winter of living in cheap boarding houses on practically no money at all, I had made just enough to get myself back home again."

So, home once more, Dick Powell worked daytimes first for the telephone company and then for the electric light company, singing Sundays at two Episcopal church services and Friday nights at the Jewish synagogue, with two rehearsals each occupying the evenings in between. But if he thought he worked hard then, it was nothing compared to what he did during the seven years of his success as master of ceremonies in Pittsburgh and Indianapolis theaters!

"I had to be in the theater from eleven in the morning until eleven at night, seven days a week," he relates. "But that was just for the shows themselves. On top of that, there were rehearsals. So, three mornings a week, I'd get there at seven a. m., three mornings a week at ten—and

Visit SHIRLEY TEMPLE'S STUDIO!

Make your plans now for a glorious two weeks vacation and a trip to Hollywood

By Jack Smalley

IMAGINE the thrill of watching Shirley Temple at work and at play! And could you visualize anything more interesting than seeing in person such famous stars as Ronald Colman, John Boles, Rochelle Hudson, Gloria Stuart and the many others who live their professional lives at beautiful Twentieth Century-Fox Studios?

These experiences can be yours! The gates of Hollywood are being opened wide to admit SCREEN BOOK's annual Movieland Tour which leaves Chicago on July 19th for an exciting two weeks vacation. It is a known fact that the casual visitor to Hollywood seldom even sees a movie star, much less the inside of a studio, but those who take the Movieland Tour will find that for their special benefit the hard walls of privacy will be torn down.

When the tour arrives in Hollywood on Sunday, July 26th, festivities will begin at the famous Brass Rail, a popular gathering place for famous film folk. Monday has been set aside for a complete tour of Twentieth Century-Fox studio in Westwood hills, where Darryl Zanuck is making some of Hollywood's greatest pictures. A special guide will conduct the whole party to every interesting corner of this vast studio.

In the evening there will be a huge banquet at the Biltmore Bowl of the Los Angeles Biltmore hotel. Jimmy Grier's popular orchestra will play and there will be dining and dancing throughout the evening. A special table for hosts and hostesses from the movie colony will add color to this important event.

On Tuesday, popular Paula Stone, daughter of Fred Stone, will entertain at her own home, giving every tour member a chance to mingle personally with movie famous, securing autographs and having pictures taken with the stars. Every tour member is urged to bring a camera and plenty of film.

Wednesday will find the entire Movieland Tour taking a cross channel trip to Catalina Island, the Rivera of the West. This beautiful [Continued on page 70]

NEW FILM NOTES

The greatest love story ever told! A beautiful scene from Romeo and Juliet, which stars Leslie Howard and Norma Shearer with John Barrymore

By Bill Ulman

ROMEO AND JULIET

Filming a Great Screen Masterpiece

BLOOD oozed softly through the fine cambric on Mercutio's breast. Above him, in the medieval court-yard in Verona, stood the sneering Tybalt and horror-stricken Romeo. Crystal clear water tumbled from the fountain and mingled with the cooing of doves. They stirred in gentle amazement at the stentorian tones of Mercutio's dying voice. Tears of mingled anger and sadness filled the eyes of good Romeo for it had been in his sake that Mercutio had drawn steel and challenged the insolent Capulet. It was a deep and powerful scene of brotherhood—and hate.

In the brilliant blue skies above Verona's ancient's streets there flooded a balloon, a large balloon, all silver serenity. Inscribed across its fat belly in huge, black letters was the mystic word quiet. Suddenly we, far below in ancient Italy, heard a mounting hum that grew into a crescendo of sound like the anger of the wind-gods. Abruptly a new note was heard, a sharp rat-tat-tat-tat-tat!

Director George Cukor threw his script down in disgust; the sound man angrily lit a cigarette and we, the citizens of Verona, looked up to watch a little pursuit airplane roll over and scoot away while the silver balloon staggered drunkenly to earth, its fat sides fallen into old and dissipated wrinkles.

John Barrymore forgot his mortal wounds, rose on an elbow and glared as only a Barrymore can glare after the retreating plane. His moustaches quivered and he pointed an accusing, dramatic hand into the skies.

"A pox upon him!" he roared, "His foul spewing at yon tender bubble will cause another take this day, me thinks!"

"Well spoken, stout Mercutio!" answered Romeo Leslie Howard, "A pox and a plague and may the devil rend yon eagle's nest and cast it to the rats!"

Thus it was that soon the men of Verona forgot for the time the bitter feud of the Montagues and the Capulets and were joined in peace while the varlets from the property department vulcanized "yon tender bubble," pumped it full of gas and once again it rose and floated serenely above the streets of Culver City, M-G-M and, of course, Verona, admonishing all to quiet that the loving words of Juliet Shearer and Romeo Howard might the better reach the sound-track.

It is worthy of mention that most of the Hollywood studios are gnashing their teeth in envy over Romeo and Juliet. It is going to be one of the grandest things to reach your local Bijou Theayter in many a moon. A lot of people seem to think that it is merely a glorious and passionate love story, but in that they are wrong, my friends, quite wrong! There is action and plenty of it; there are duels between such master swordsmen as Barrymore and Rathbone; chases and murders and sudden death and all of it done very much in the grand manner, swaggering and swashbuckling against a noble background. And what background could help but be noble with a cast like Leslie Howard, Norma Shearer, Rathbone, John Barrymore and Reg Denny, to name but a few?

THE KING STEPS OUT

Grace Moore Sings and Milks a Cow

MARGIE is the pride and joy of Max, Duke of Bavaria. Margie's figure is full and rounded and her eyes are the limpid pools of the Rubiayat. Margie is white—milk white. Margie is a cow, a temperamental cow with no ear for music.

When her owner washed her carefully and told her that she was to play in a scene with Grace Moore, actually be milked by the opera star to the music of "Liebesfreud," Margie just looked at him. But what a look! Margie was annoyed. Her eyes seemed to say, reproachfully, "You know how I hate to be milked by opera stars. They don't keep their minds on the job while reaching for high 'C'" She mooed plaintively. For a cow Margie is not much of a moo-er; her voice is heavy and discordant, so her boss slapped her on the fanny and told her she was just jealous and that it would give her a lot of prestige to be milked by la belle Moore.

Thus it was that Margie was led into the gorgeous white stables of Max, Duke of Bavaria, on the Columbia lot. Joe von Sternberg had gotten a lot of nice clean hay and they practically turned the set over to her. That's one thing about cows—they have such definite and assertive personalities that, on a small set, you just do have to turn the place upside down for them. But still Margie had a sulky look in her eye.

With bored comprehension she stood there munching free hay while von Sternberg and cameramen inspected her, lit her, measured her. She stopped once to kick over a reflector when the director commented disparagingly on a small brown birth-mark that splotched her large bovine nose because it would photograph like dirt. Make-up men were sent for. It is better to ignore what followed. The make-up man resented the whole thing. He'd never made up a cow in his life, wittingly, and he was damned if he'd start now. Finally he was prevailed upon and shudderingly approached Margie's schnozzle. An hour passed and the make-up man's blandishments triumphed. He left the set red and sweating. Margie looked at him scornfully, took one strong, healthy pass at the make-up with her long tongue and followed it with a chaser of hay to get the taste out of her mouth.

At that moment Grace Moore entered and Margie was introduced. They viewed each other coldly. The owner showed Miss Moore how Margie worked. Margie had a pained expression.

They got to work and cameras ground. Milk hissed into the pail under Grace's deft manipulations. Margie looked relieved but still suspicious. The music was going through the opening bars. Miss Moore began to sing "Liebesfreud" (Love's Joy). Margie moved restlessly. Miss Moore went up on a really high note and Margie jumped as though stung by an adder. It was pretty sad, what with milk all over the set. Shortly after that the stage was closed to visitors, but late in the afternoon I saw Margie going home. She was quite placid and unruffled. Judging from the sounds issuing from the stage door, I think Margie had won whatever argument there had been during the day. (See photo page 32.)

That night the call sheet was issued as per usual. The scene was the same, Miss Moore to be there in make-up at nine SPARKLING, LAUGHING EYES . . . eyes that say more than words can ever express . . . are the eyes that fascinate men, that invite romance.

Now, every girl can have eyes that sparkle . . . eyes that radiate life and beauty. Just a touch of WINX Mascara to the lashes and instantly they appear darker, longer, and more lustrous. It works wonders—brings out the natural beauty and charm of your eyes—enlivens your whole appearance.

Once you try WINX you readily understand why so many smart, well-groomed women use WINX regularly for both daytime and evening make-up. You will like the way its emollient oils keep your lashes luxuriantly soft at all times.

WINX Mascara is offered in four colors—black, brown, blue, and green—and in three convenient forms—the new Creamy WINX (which is gaining in popularity every day), and the old favorites, Cake WINX and Liquid WINX. All are harmless, smudge-proof, water-proof, non-smarting, and easy to apply.

Your local drug and department stores carry WINX Mascara in the economical large size. You can also obtain the complete line of WINX Eye Beautifiers in Introductory Sizes at all 10¢ stores.

THE TIME OF MONTH CAN'T DICTATE TO MODERN GIRLS:

MIDOL

The modern girl doesn't decline an invitation just because of the time of month! She knows how to keep going, and keep comfortable — with Midol. For relief from painful periods, this is all you have to do:

Watch the calendar. At the very first sign of approaching pain, take a Midol tablet and drink a glass of water, and you may escape the expected pain altogether. If not, a second tablet should check it within a few minutes.

Midol's relief is lasting; two tablets should see you through your worst day. Yet Midol contains no narcotic and it forms no habit. But don't be misled by ordinary pain tablets sold as a specific for menstrual pain! Midol is a special medicine, offered for this particular purpose.

You will find Midol in any drug store, it is usually right out on the counter.

So, look for those trim, aluminum boxes that make these useful tablets easy to carry in the thinnest purse or pocket.

SPANKY MacFARLAND

Stealing the acting honors in The Trail of the Lonesome Pine is the feat of little Spanky MacFarland, just seven years old. What Shirley Temple is in the ranks of feminine child stars, Spanky soon will be among the opposite sex. A veteran of Our Gang comedies, he suddenly emerges as the find of the year. The secret of his success is explained in an editorial on page 90.

Stenographers Burn Up

FIVE of us stenographers went to see Jean Harlow in Wife vs Secretary, and were we all burned up? What business has Jean wearing such clothes as she does in that picture? It's a cinch that none of us rake in enough money every week to afford such duds, no matter how hard we try to stretch our budgets. We all feel that we are lucky if we can afford such clothes for our "Sunday best." Please, Jean, next time you are a secretary, don't wear such gorgeous office clothes. It's too hard on those of us who are real and not reel secretaries.—Pauline Raymond, P. O. Box 775, Parkersburg, W. Va.

We Can't Agree

IT WAS with something akin to grief that I read a recent article telling of Wallace Beery's refusal to give his autograph to a gang of Texas College boys. I'm sure that it is annoying to any star to be pestered while dining, but those college kids didn't realize that. During Beery's visit to Texas late in 1934 for the filming of West Point of the Air, he enshrined himself in the hearts of Texans fortunate enough to see him and talk with him. Hospitable, kindhearted Texans who threw open their homes to Beery will grieve over his actions.—Mrs. Talmage Watkins, Crane, Texas.

One writer's assertion that Wallace Beery refused to give his autograph need not indicate that he is not generous and kind-hearted. Without knowing the circumstances, we would say that the incident does not do Mr. Beery justice.—Editor.

"Some nit-wit—"

WHEN one enjoys a picture as much as I did Thanks a Million, it is difficult to pick a flaw. But please warn the copy-cat film makers that many of us are trying to teach safety in the driving of high-powered cars. We rather resent that wild, silly drive which ends Dick Powell's picture. It was unnecessary and a little like George Cohan's flag-waving. Some nit-wit, with a high-powered car and a low-powered brain, may try it in real, not reel, life!—Redfern Brown, 914 Ivy St., EE, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Hepburn's "Trite Roles"

WHAT a pity that Katharine Hepburn should be so decidedly miscast in Sylvia Scarlett. Granted that she made a delightful "boy"—there is nothing but disappointment for her admirers in the frothy, often silly scenes which seem to compel her to be guilty of over-acting throughout. If Hollywood cannot produce worthy new material for this delightful actress, surely it is more logical to let her repeat such fitting rôles as The Taming of the Shrew or Jeanne D'Arc, in which she would have been delightful, rather than to have her bright star dimmed in a succession of trite rôles.—Ruth Bracker Stone, 555 Edgecombe Ave., New York City.

Be Fair to Laughton

THIS campaign to "humanize" Charles Laughton is a well-intentioned gesture, but nevertheless a gross misunderstanding of genius. People must realize that Laughton's success was mostly due to the type of rôles he has played. He has earned a large following of admirers because of the admirable way he portrays abominable nature. The fact that he has made enemies because of his characterizations is proof conclusive of his genius and should not be construed as a liability.—John Decker, 3105 Hamilton St., Bellaire, Ohio.

"Knocking Them Dead"

AT LAST an air picture that is up-to-the-minute and without a "Dog Fight" or hint of battle maneuvers. Ceiling Zero is knocking them dead in San Francisco and, I suppose, all over the country. It is the most perfectly done aviation picture I have ever seen. And it proves, too, a sad but encouraging fact (from the plane passenger's standpoint) that the old "thrill artists" days are over and that flyers today are professional men—navigators, engineers. Pictures like this seem to me to mean progress and education for the public.—T. Rose, 521 Post St., San Francisco, Calif.

Always Her Favorite

I WANT to tell the world about meeting Mary Pickford. She was in Seattle last May on a business trip, and during her stay she came up to the Orthopedic Hospital to visit the children. I was then a patient there, and remember being very thrilled when Mary Pickford stood beside my bed, asking me how I was and wishing me a quick recovery. I want to thank her publicly for the autographs she sent me. I will always be her sincere admirer.—Clarice Miller, 339 S. Wenatchee Ave., Wenatchee, Wash.

Do You Ever Wonder

Whether the "Pain" Remedy You Use Is SAFE?

Ask Your Doctor and Find Out

Don't Entrust Your Own or Your Family's Well-Being to Unknown Preparation

THE person to ask, whether the preparation you or your family are taking for the relief of headaches is SAFE to use regularly, is your family doctor.

Ask him particularly about Genuine BAYER ASPIRIN, and go by what he says.

He will tell you, we are sure, that millions of people take it, year in and year out, without ill effect.

He will tell you, too, that before the discovery of Bayer Aspirin, most "pain" remedies were advised against, by doctors, as upsetting to the stomach. And often; as bad for the heart. Which is food for thought; especially if you seek safe relief as well as quick relief.

BAYER ASPIRIN combines these two factors — quick relief and gentle relief in a scientifically proved way.

"Quick relief" because scientists rate it among the fastest methods yet discovered for the relief of headaches and the pains of rheumatism, neuritis and neuralgia. And safe relief, because the experience of millions of users has proved it safe for the average person to use regularly.

You can get it at any drug store — at a new and radically reduced price — 15¢ a box — simply by asking for it by its full name "BAYER ASPIRIN." Make it a point to do this — to ask for Genuine Bayer Aspirin and to see that you get it. There is no longer any reason — thanks to Bayer's present low price — to accept an unknown preparation in its place.

This story will interest many Men and Women

NOT long ago I was like some friends I have...low in spirits...run-down... out of sorts...tired easily and looked terrible. I knew I had no serious organic trouble so I reasoned sensibly...as my experience has since proven...that work, worry, colds and whatnot had just worn me down.

I had been listening to the S.S.S. Radio Program and began to wonder if my trouble was not lowered strength in my blood... I started a course of S.S.S. Tonic Treatment...at the end of ten days I noticed a change...I followed directions faithfully... a tablespoonful before each meal.

The color began to come back to my skin ...I felt better...I did not tire easily and soon I felt that those red-blood-cells were back to so-called fighting strength.

The confidence mother has always had in S.S.S....which is still her stand-by when she feels run-down...convinced me I ought to try this Treatment...it is great to feel strong again and like my old self.

Much more could be said...a trial will thoroughly convince you that this way, in the absence of any organic trouble, will start you on the road to feeling like yourself again. You should soon enjoy again the satisfaction of appetizing food...sound sleep ...steady nerves...a good complexion... and renewed strength.

There is no guess work in the S.S.S. Tonic Treatment...decades of popular acceptance and enthusiastic words of praise by users themselves speak even louder than the scientific appraisal of the progressively improved S.S.S. product which has caused millions to say to their friends—

MARY PICKFORD pressed down a gadget on the mysterious-looking mahogany box on her desk and almost instantly a voice resounded from a round opening in the upper right-hand corner of it.

"Yes, Mary," said the voice.

"Mr. Lasky," Mary replied, "I want to read you a clipping."

As she unfolded a fragment torn from a newspaper, I thought: "These inter-office communicating systems are truly modern magic. You push a key and the person you want answers—positively uncanny!"

Leaning closer to the box, Miss Pickford began to read:

"Inasmuch as Universal has practically changed its entire personnel and studio set-up, it has decided to change its trademark—that is, if it can find a new one. In other words, when the change takes place, you will no longer see an airplane buzzing around a globe which, of course, signifies Universal Pictures encircle the world!"

Let this new department help solve your personal problems

By FAY WRAY

PARAMOUNT among the essentials of stardom is the knowledge of how to act, not only before the camera, but before the critical eyes of Hollywood ever eager to appraise culture in the myriad of screenland's social functions.

SCREEN BOOK has sought out those stars whose impeccable taste, behavior and understanding of social niceties has justified their firm position in filmdom society. They have been prevailed upon to conduct this column themselves. A different star each issue will answer your questions and solve your problems in connection with social etiquette and manner of dress.

This month's columnist is the charming star and perfect hostess, Miss Fay Wray.

A very good friend of the family whom I call Bill has given me a position as stenographer in his office. Should I continue to address him as Bill at the office or should I call him Mr. Wellborn?

A business office is for the purpose of conducting business; consequently it embraces a strict etiquette of its own. It is not only good taste but good business to address your employer, Bill, as Mr. Wellborn during the working days. Regardless of whether he addresses you by your given name or Miss—as is correct and proper.

My employer and his wife soon will celebrate their silver wedding anniversary. As his secretary should I send them a gift?

Though occasionally done it is not correct. On the other hand, if it has been your experience to meet the employer and his wife socially, the sending of a card express-

Evalyn Knapp's Grand Fish Story

A dish that will delight the hearts of your guests. Take a tip from this famous Hollywood hostess

By Grace Ellis

IT TAKES a fisherman to cook a fish! No one will argue that point who has ever sat at a fisherman's table.

Not that the fish-lander needs to cook his own catch. But having spent hours in wooing these Lords of the rivers and seas, he has without intention absorbed special knowledge of fish merits and flavors.

When I first heard Evalyn Knapp murmur, "Cover with sour cream," I knew that I'd eavesdropped on a "fisherman." And I had. One of the most enthusiastic in the movie colony.

No rented boats, or casting from the dock, for Evalyn. She has her own forty-five-foot sailboat, a husband who loves their Catalina-channel weekends. And a picturesque old yarn-spinning captain who mans the boat.

When duties at the studio keep these fishing-enthusiasts on shore, Evalyn still manages frequent fish-dinners, prepared by her competent cook—Burma Anderson—but supervised, always, by herself.

At the top of the page is a typical Knapp fish-dinner favorite. Baked Whole Fish, stuffed with dressing, and served with lemon and taste-tingling stuffed eggs.

It's a dish for a king. And it's preceded, always, by a nippy seafood appetizer—preferably lime-tuna cocktail. And followed by Burma's luscious Orange Angel Pie.

A masterpiece! Evalyn Knapp presents Baked Whole Fish, prepared with the aid of her wonder cook, Burma Anderson

The cocktail and baked fish recipes follow. (Directions for making the pie have been printed on handy little recipe filing cards. They're free, as long as they last. But don't forget postage.)

LIMA-TUNA COCKTAIL

(A taste-tingler)

1	No. 1 can tuna
½	cup diced celery
¾	cups tomato ketchup
	Juice of one lime
2	teaspoons prepared horesradish
¼	teaspoon onion juice

Flake the tuna, mix with celery and place in lettuce-lined cocktail cups. Drench with lime juice. Blend remaining ingredients, and add 1 generous tablespoonful to each cocktail glass. Serve very cold.

BAKED, STUFFED FISH

(Evalyn Knapp Style)

1	4-5 lb. haddock, salmon or pike
4	tablespoons butter (melted)
1½	cups bread crumbs
2	tablespoons pickle relish
1	teaspoon each, chopped parsley capers and onion
	Salt Pepper Paprika
1	cup thick sour cream

Wipe fish with damp cloth and remove

After the fish is prepared, stuffing of blended butter, crumbs, pickle, parsley, capers and onion is placed in. Evalyn stands by with needle and thread

Evalyn Knapp looks on as the thick sour cream is spread over the outside. Then the fish is baked in a moderate oven for more than an hour, depending on its size head and tail. Split down middle, clean and remove backbone, using a sharp knife. Sprinkle inside with salt and pepper. Make stuffing by blending butter, crumbs, pickle, parsley, capers and onion. Season with salt, pepper, paprika to taste.

Put stuffing between two halves of fish. Sew up with cordstring, threaded through a darning needle. Place on a strip of parchment paper. Lay in shallow baking pan. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Spread with sour cream. Bake in a moderate oven—350 degrees F.—from 70-90 minutes depending upon size of fish.

Lift from pan to platter. Tear away parchment paper. Serve surrounded with lemon quarters, stuffed eggs, crisp lettuce leaves and sprigs of parsley.

Accompany such a fish-dish with only simple foods. After the cocktail—creamed potatoes, feathery hot rolls, and strawberry jam, perhaps. And bring the meal to a close with Burma's Orange Angel Pie. Miss Knapp and SCREEN BOOK's food editor agree that there is no finer fish-dinner ending.

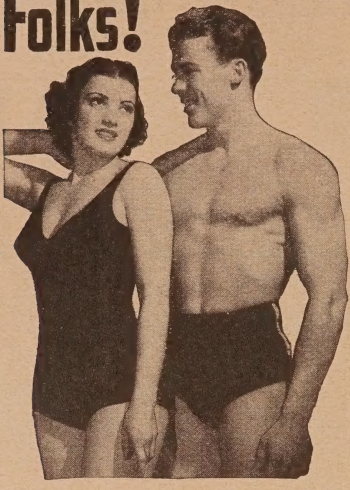
Weak, Rundown Nervous, Skinny Folks!



Without Cost—Make This Amazing IODINE TEST!

Within 1 Week Sea Plant IODINE in Kelpamalt Must Give You Tireless Energy, Strong Nerves, Pounds of "Stay-There" Flesh or the Trial is FREE . . . It Costs You Nothing!

KELPAMALT, the new mineral concentrate from the sea, gets right down and corrects the real underlying cause of weakness, skinniness and nervous rundown conditions—IODINE STARVED GLANDS. When these glands don't work properly, all the food in the world can't help you. It just isn't turned into flesh. The result is, you stay weak and nervous, tired out and skinny.

The most important gland—the one which actually controls the body weight—needs a definite ration of iodine all the time—NATURAL ASSIMILABLE IODINE—not to be confused with chemical iodides which often prove toxic. Only when the system gets an adequate supply of iodine can you regulate metabolism—the body's process of converting digested foods into firm flesh, new strength and energy.

To get this vital mineral in convenient, concentrated and assimilable form, take Kelpamalt—now recognized as the world's richest source of this precious substance. It contains 1300 times more iodine than oysters once considered the best source. 6 tablets alone contain more NATURAL IODINE than 486 lbs. of spinach or 1387 lbs. of lettuce.

Make this test with Kelpamalt. First weigh yourself and see how long you can work or how far you can walk without tiring. Then take 3 Kelpamalt Tablets with each meal for 1 week and again weigh yourself and notice how much longer you can work without tiring, how much farther you can walk. Notice how much better you feel, sleep and eat. Watch flattering extra lbs. appear in place of scrawny hollows. And if you don't gain 5 lbs. this very first week the trial is free. 100 jumbo size Kelpamalt tablets—four to five times the size of ordinary tablets—cost but a few cents a day to use. Get Seedol Kelpamalt today. Kelpamalt costs but little at all good drug stores. If your dealer has not yet received his supply, send $1.00 for special introductory size bottle of 65 tablets to the address below.

CHARM SECRETS of Hollywood MOTHERS

By Janet
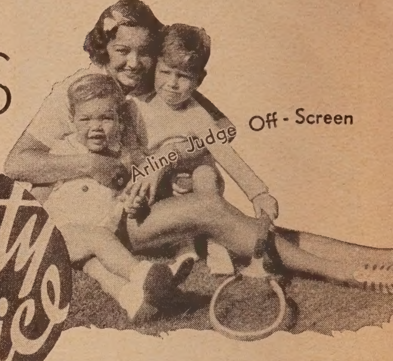
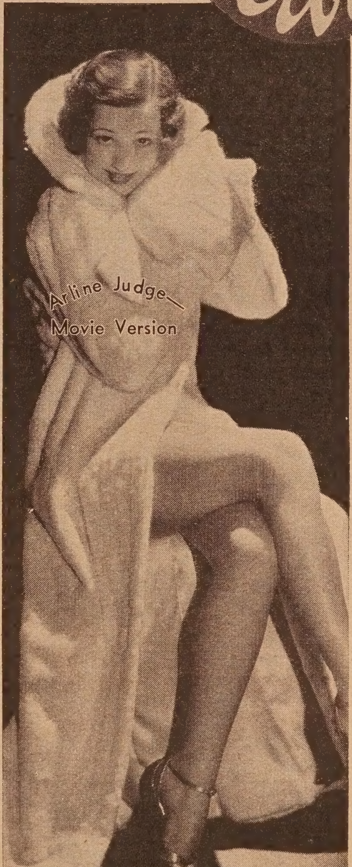
Lynn

Beauty Service



Lovely Arline Judge with her son, Wesley Ruggles, Jr., and a playmate. Arline is one of the many Hollywood mothers who know how to stay beautiful



A recent studio portrait of Arline Judge. Few mothers in real life can remain so attractive of face and figure, except those who know the beauty secrets of Hollywood's young matrons

ONE of the nicest things about this frank, modern age we live in is that the married woman of, say, twenty-seven, can be just as attractive as the girl of seventeen.

How awful it must have been to live in the days when women married in their teens and were old and matronly looking by the time they were in their middle twenties!

I think that the movies have helped immensely to prove that marriage and motherhood needn't rob a woman of her charm, allure and good looks. For many of the lithe, lovely creatures you see on the screen, like pretty Arline Judge, make no attempt to hide from the public the fact that they are the mothers of husky boys and girls. And, naturally, their example proves to the vast audiences of women movie fans, that you can go on being lovely even after you've become a "Mrs." and the mother of twins!

A diet that includes more fresh vegetables and fruits than fats and sweets, plenty of moderate outdoor exercise, and daily attention to hair, skin, hands and nails—that is the method which the stars follow to keep themselves attractive, not only to their husbands and children, but also to their critical movie audiences.

Sally Eilers, Joan Bennett, Marlene Dietrich and Joan Blondell are only a few of the famous actresses with children, who combine the duties of a household along with careers. These stars have, as a rule, less time than the average mother but they see the advisability of keeping youthful, vibrant and abreast of the times.

Of course, we all know that women immersed in the cares of a house have relatively little time or thought to give to the problem of self-improvement; but they are being very short-sighted when they do not deliberately set aside part of each [Continued on page 68]

How GINGER ROGERS Was Cured of Temperament!

Ginger Rogers has seen too much of the ill effects of temperament to let it ruin her own career

Her Determined Mother Did It!

By Viola Mercer

GINGER ROGERS started life with something of a firecracker temperament, probably because she was born in Independence, Missouri. She was a spunky little child as are most youngsters who amount to anything in later life.

The occasion which finally cured Ginger of the wrong kind of temperament occurred at a time when little Miss Rogers was engaged in what is commonly known as "sassing" her mother. Mrs. Rogers had asked her to do something, and instead of complying Ginger tilted a determined chin and said: "I won't do it—so what do you think of that?"

Mrs. Rogers promptly expressed her thought on the matter by delivering a motherly slap to Ginger's cheek. Whereupon Ginger, who had been reading stories of heroines who were willing to die for a principle, took on a proudly injured air and cried: "Very well, Mother. I'll turn the other cheek."

Then, to her utter astonishment, Mrs. Rogers gave her other cheek a resounding whack.

"That little episode about cured me of temperament," says Ginger. "I probably had the makings of a very spoiled child, and I've always been grateful that my mother had sense enough to nip it in the bud."

Today, Ginger is not given to stalking off sets, hurling invectives at writers or indulging in any of the self-patronizing pastimes so typical of stars who are building themselves up to a terrific letdown. Probably this is because Ginger has seen every possible variety of temperament from the time fifteen years ago when as a little red-haired green-eyed kid she stood in the wings of a Fort Worth, Texas, theater and watched every move and gesture of the troupers who appeared there.

Ginger's mother, you see, was the society and drama editor of the Fort Worth Record. When she went backstage to interview some celebrity, Ginger went along to watch the show. And if there happened to be any hoofers on the bill she was pretty certain to be able to duplicate their dance routine by the time their act was finished.

One night Mrs. Rogers went to the theater to interview Eddie Foy. While she was waiting in his dressing room for him to finish his act, Ginger tip-toed out into the wings. Foy's routine fascinated her and unaware that he could see her she started imitating him. Foy saw her, however, and when he was called back for an encore he pulled Ginger out on the stage with him and together they did a dance which Fort Worth still remembers.

"This kid's a born dancer," Foy told Mrs. Rogers later. "And mark my word, she'll go places."

Eddie Foy was not the only one who recognized Ginger's talent. When she was about

SHIRLEY EXHAUSTED—Waiting with Slim Summerville and Guy Kibbee for the next shot on the set of Captain January, Shirley yawned while the author of this story slyly snapped a picture

SHIRLEY TEMPLE

By
Anthony Ugrin

As told to Harry Lang

SHIRLEY TEMPLE scowled at me just as I pressed the bulb. She had been playing with some kid extras on the set of Our Little Girl and at the moment just didn't want to be photographed. But on this occasion, as on others, the result was one of the most unusual pictures I have ever taken of Shirley.

For the past two years it has been my job to shoot "off-stage" pictures of little Miss Temple. There have been exasperating moments, some of which I will relate in this story, but on the whole it has been one of the grandest experiences of my life.

The first picture in which I worked with her was Stand Up and Cheer. I shot the Baby Take a Bow number that "made" Shirley. Poor kid—at that time she was afraid of cameras, directors, studios, everything. But today she is one of the most clever, alert actresses on the Fox lot, and she is far more "camera wise" than any other star I have photographed. Today we call her "One-shot" Shirley—and this is how it came about:

Shirley has always liked to play. When I was ready to snap her, she'd run out of focus and hide. It was a game with her, but her unconscious rebellion put me on the spot, because I had to produce pictures of her—or else. So I reasoned with her. She laughed. I pleaded. She ran away and hid. I chased her and caught her.

"I don't like to pose for pictures," she told me.

She meant it interfered with her play. Between "takes" on the movie was playtime for her, and I got in the way. So I reasoned with her—not as with a kid, but as with a woman.

"Shirley," I said, "I've got a job and I'll lose it if you don't help me. But I know you want to play. So listen—when I want a picture of you, I promise I can take it in just one shot—poof, like that!—if you'll help me, and it'll only take a minute of your playtime. Please, help me Shirley."

She never forgot it. To this day, when I set up my still camera at her, she grins that grand famous smile of hers, and holds up one finger. It's our code. It stands for "one shot!" It's never failed us yet. Except now and then, but don't ever tell Shirley, because then I play a trick on her. I pull out my negative, as though accidentally, and then say: "Oh, Shirley, I've fogged that swell shot of you." Invariably she says: "All right, Anf'ny; we'll do it over—in just one more shot!" The "just one more" never fails!

But believe me, a cameraman doesn't have to be a wizard to win with Shirley. She is today a perfect camera subject. She knows a pose automatically—better than nine out of ten expert cameramen—and can and does strike a right one the minute the camera is trained on her. She knows this, too. One day I shot Shirley in a group of famous people at the studio. After the "just one shot," one of the women in the group—a woman herself camera-wise—said to Shirley:

"Don't you think we'd better shoot another?"

Shirley looked her straight in the eye. Then she walked off, and as she

As You Never See Her

The studio cameraman who knows Shirley even better than do her own brothers reveals a remarkable new side of her character

SHIRLEY UNCAMOUFLAGED—A wide grin displays the hole left by a vacant tooth. As her baby teeth fell out, "shells" were used to permit Shirley to smile during actual filming

SHIRLEY GIVING ALL—Because of a great fondness for Anthony Ugrin, with whom she plays, poses and sometimes quarrels, Shirley frequently does even better for the still camera than she does for the screen did so, she jerked her thumb in my direction.

"No. That one was perfect for me—if he didn't make a mistake."

SHE just loves it when I do flop. I guess I've interfered with so many hours of her playtime that when I do make a mistake, she can't help but crow. Her gleeful scream: "Anf'ny can't work his camera!!" has cost me no end of embarrassment, because you can hear her yell it in every corner of the stage when I do go wrong.

During Our Little Girl, Shirley got out of line, though. She caught it from Jimmy Dunn, who was her big crush then. Jimmy, a swell guy though he is, is notoriously bad for still men; he doesn't like to pose for them, and sometimes walks out on them. Shirley caught the idea from her hero, and began to walk out on me, or refuse to smile, or strike bad poses deliberately. So I quit. I wouldn't take bad pictures of her. Another still man finished the picture.

Shirley must have gone to her mother, for when they came back from Honolulu, Mrs. Temple said Shirley wondered why I wouldn't work with her any more. I told her, frankly. Mrs. Temple went to Shirley.

"Shirley," she told the youngster, "Anthony has work to do. He doesn't want to spoil your fun, but he has to do what they tell him and if he doesn't, he loses his job. You make it so hard for him that he can't do his work."

I was asked back to the unit, and went. The very first day, Shirley came to me.

"Anf'ny," she said, "I'm awfully sorry I've been bad to you. I'll always help you after this. Honest!" She never has broken that promise.

SOMETIMES Shirley gets tired. What little girl doesn't? Her mother tells her never to forget to look her best because there are people watching and maybe cameras, but sometimes little girls can't always remember. On Captain January, while she was sitting on Guy Kibbee's knee beside Slim Summerville, waiting for a tedious "set-up" to be finished, the sand-man got to her. It so happened, I was shooting a "grab-shot" of her, but just as I clicked the shutter, she yawned. The result (photo on page 30) is one of the funniest—and at the same time most natural and real-kid pictures of Shirley I ever secured.

Not always does she wear full make-up and all her pretties when she poses for me. One day she was opening a box sent her from Australia, containing a gift of some dolls with every imaginable sort of clothes to fit. At that time, she had no make-up on—not even the "shell" which is used to cover her baby teeth and the holes where they're falling out. And if you'll look at the picture I got that day (photo left above) you'll see Shirley as she really looks "everyday"—without make-up, trimmings or anything except just swell little Miss Temple herself.

She loves to "clown" for me. I asked her for some "gag shots" during Captain January.

YOU Can Have What It Takes—says GRACE MOORE

Grace Moore in a romantic scene with Franchot Tone from her most recent picture, The King Steps Out

Many famous singers might balk at singing a solo while milking a cow. Not Grace—she thought it a lark!

By
Marion Campbell

IT WAS on a Sunday morning sixteen years ago that Grace Moore's glory road began—that she, a frightened youngster in mended white robe, stepped into the choir loft of a little church in Jellico to sing her first solo. It was on a Sunday evening only a few weeks ago that she sat with me before the fire in her rose and gold living room and, while dusk came in through the tall windows, went back in memory along that road, reviewing the mileposts along the way.

I was visiting Grace Moore in her home to ask her questions: "What is your advice to young singers who are, as you were, fired with the desire to be a great prima donna? You are at the peak of success, now. What pitfalls have you found in the climbing? Can you tell others what it takes to be a great star?"

She paused, and I waited for her to answer, watching the log on the fire disintegrate into crimson coals. At last she spoke, and her words were a challenge. "My first rule is: Don't expect something for nothing! The person who begins that way," she said, "is beaten before he starts.

"I have been besieged with requests to give money, to use my influence, to use my friends, even, in behalf of singers who desire a career. They write to me: 'You have wealth; you have success. Why don't you send a check to me? You would never miss it . . .'

"No," she went on, "I should never miss it! And I have helped many a young singer striving for a career, but never until they have proved that they are capable of helping themselves. I should be defeating their own interests if I did . . . You see, no one sent me any checks back in the days when I was alone in New York, working, almost starving, sometimes, to pay for my singing lessons. Now, I am glad of it. Because the thing I was working for becomes more desirable, more worth while because I was building it myself, and because I was free to build as I wished, unham-

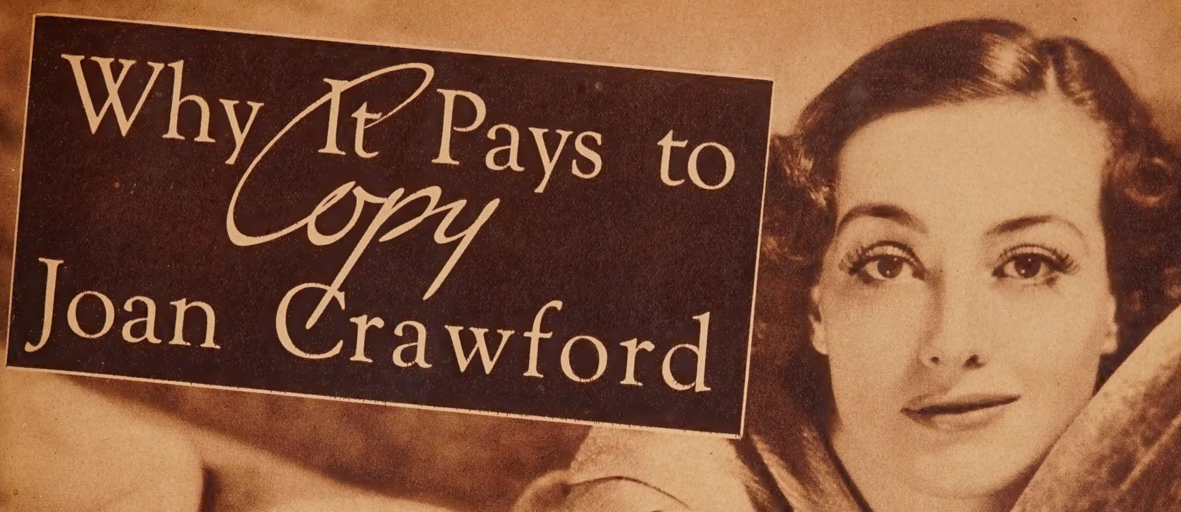
Why It Pays to Copy Joan Crawford



The glamorous actress who has helped hundreds can help you too!

With Franchot Tone, Joan Crawford has found complete happiness, but only after years of bitter experience and a previous marriage that failed

By Muriel Standish

ONCE she was strangely different from accepted standards of beauty. Now she is beauty's criterion—Joan Crawford.

Once her long bob, her wide mouth, her slenderly arched eyebrows, her broad shoulders and narrow hips, her flair for ultra-plain clothes, were unique. Now she is the most copied girl on the screen. Girls the world over yearn to look like Joan and to be like her. Feminine fans the world over are doing their level best to fulfill their heart's desire. Why?

"Just one of those things," you might say. But an artist recently come to Hollywood, famous for his portrayals of beautiful women and his analyses of their charm, offers another and interesting explanation.

"It is because Joan Crawford has glamour," he says, "greater glamour, perhaps, than any star on the screen today."

Endowed with physical beauty, Joan has matched this with mental and spiritual beauty of her own creation. Just as nature made her body lithe, graceful, symmetrical; her skin lovely and her features attractive, she, herself, has made her mind keep pace—developing within herself keenness of wit, quickness of thought, intelligence of perception which, complementing nature's gifts, have formed a personal magnetism felt by all with whom she comes in contact.

There is, too, a deep friendliness, a desire to be liked, within Joan Crawford which contribute much to her personality. Time was when this quality shadowed her life with tragedy. An eager, sensitive girl in a snobbish school, Joan was hurt many times because her desire for friends was met with the cruelty of indifference characteristic of the very young and thoughtless.

But today, the scars of those deep hurts are turned to charm. In her eagerness for [Continued on page 67]

JEAN HARLOW Answers 10 Disturbing Questions

In which one of Hollywood's most alluring women answers ten vital questions every girl should ask herself

WHEN you meet a new man, or if you still care enough for your current heart-throb to take pains, do you often wonder: "What does he really think of me?"

If you could read his mind you might receive some rather startling surprises. They might indeed be the answer to why the "date" you were so anxious to make a good impression upon never came back; or why the romance that was sailing along on floating power suddenly began to miss fire and finally stalled completely. For while he may have been attracted to you because of the warmth of your smile, your gay, sparkling conversation or because you're a good dancer, thoughts like these may have sifted through his mind: "I like Mary—but I wish she would pay a little more attention to her personal appearance. She never seems to look neat. I wonder why she is so obvious with her make-up? I wish I dared tell her that she would look better if she wore less rouge."

Because a man doesn't say these things out loud, don't kid yourself that he doesn't have his thoughts about them. Men of course vary in their tastes and prejudices and, fortunately, no girl is required to please every man in the world. But if you want to be popular you must certainly please every man you go out with. So, if you're smart, you will check up on yourself and if your score isn't as high as it ought to be you will do something about bringing it up to par.

To help you be a good checker-upper, Jean Harlow answers ten questions which every girl should ask herself. Jean's answers are the result of experience and observation. And since a screen star naturally has opportunity to meet more different types of men than does the average girl, these answers are important to you.

1. When a man meets a girl for the first time or when he calls to keep a date, what is the first thing he notices about her?

"Her personal appearance," says Jean. "If a man thinks enough of you to take you out to dinner, to dance or to a show you owe it to him, as well as to yourself, to look as attractive as possible. This does not mean that your dress must be an expensive model or that it be the last word in fashion. The chances are ten to one that your 'date' will have no idea whether it cost $50 or $10.98. He won't know whether it is an advance style or a last year's model but he will know whether it is neat and well pressed. What you wear is not nearly as important as the way you take care of what you wear.

"Careful grooming is the best charm insurance that any girl can have. The foundation of careful grooming is absolute cleanliness. And to use plain language, this means a body that has been scrubbed with plenty of hot, sudsy water, followed by a cold shower, hair that is shampooed at least once every ten days—blondes need shampoos oftener than that—nails that are carefully manicured and teeth that have been scrupulously brushed.

"Men notice effects rather than details. If a girl looks fresh and immaculate, if she is becomingly dressed, other things being equal, he will rate her as being attractive."

2. Do you think men really dislike make-up?

"Only when it is too obviously applied. Make-up should be used to reveal beauty, not to create a new face. It should accentuate your good points and camouflage your bad ones. Cheeks that are too obviously painted on, eyelashes that belong on a shop window

What Do Men Dislike About Women?

Jean Harlow says—"Cheeks that are too obviously painted on. . . . Eyelashes that belong on a shop window dummy. . . . Gaudily painted nails. . . . The girl who is always trying to be 'coy'. . . . Women who are too aggressive. . . . Pestering phone calls about trivialities. . . . Girls who complain about masculine habits or mannerisms.

dummy, give an artificiality which every man, I believe, dislikes."

3. Should a girl stop wearing brightly painted fingernails if the object of her affection expresses a prejudice against them?

"I think that is something each girl must decide for herself. If she really likes brightly painted nails and feels that they make her hands more attractive, I see no reason why she should not continue to wear them. But if she thinks enough of the man to want to please him, giving up the fad, or at least toning down her nails to a less violent hue, shouldn't really be much of a sacrifice. Personally, I have never known a man who did not loathe gaudily painted nails. Mostly, I think, it is because they look so artificial. And, as I said before, men dislike artificiality."

4. In selecting a dress, should a girl choose a color to match her eyes or a color which appeals to her personally?

"Choose the color that does the most for you. It should be flattering to your hair and skin as well as your eyes. The colors that appeal to us most are frequently colors which we have no business wearing. I, personally, adore red and I would love to own a bright red dress. I know, however, that with my shade of hair red would make me look cheap and tawdry. Consequently I never wear it. Many girls seem to have the idea that an outstanding color will make them look outstanding whereas it only makes them look conspicuous."

5. What colors do men prefer?

"From my personal observation, I am inclined to believe that men are not really very observing about color. Again it is a case of their noticing 'effects' rather than 'details.' I have heard men comment on a

PAULETTE GODDARD

● Modern Times may be Charlie Chaplin's picture, but a large share of the spotlight is stolen by lovely Paulette Goddard, whose portrayal of the picture's ragged little gamin is as honest and forthright as any bit of acting ever done before the cameras. Little is known about Paulette, except that she is surpassingly beautiful, supposedly Mrs. Chaplin in private life, and a girl who, before she came to Hollywood, spent most of her young life as a convent student

JOAN BENNETT

Because the doings of the Bennett sisters are always news let it be known that Joan, the youngest, wants to put an end to her sweet young thing character on the screen and go in for sophistication. Portrait is first evidence

CAROLE LOMBARD

Storm center of a studio tiff. George Raft walked out on Princess Comes Across allegedly because the cameraman had a habit of giving her the best breaks in close-ups. Carole denied it, but the chances are that any cameraman would be inclined to focus more often on such a dazzling personality than on her leading man, no matter how handsome

NORMA SHEARER

Norma's return to the screen after a long absence is the month's best news. What makes it better still is that Romeo and Juliet is the picture and Leslie Howard and John Barrymore her newest leading men

CLARK GABLE

Because he is one of the day's most capable actors, it is not to be considered a miracle that Clark Gable remains Hollywood's Number One leading man in prestige and popularity. Perhaps two such leading ladies as Jean Harlow and Myrna Loy in such a picture as Wife vs. Secretary may have something to do with his secure position, but the astute observer is more inclined to believe that Clark deserves everything he has attained. In the life of every man there are dramatic moments he can never forget. Clark Gable reveals his in this interview

GABLE Talks About HIS PAST

By Dick Mook

The Clark Gable of five years ago as he appeared with Norma Shearer in A Free Soul

"The only reaction I got from my first screen test was 'Your ears are too big!'"

CLARK GABLE and I faced each other in his dressing room on the set of San Francisco. Clark grinned. "You've done eight or ten stories on me besides the hundreds other people have done. What is there left to write about me? Isn't the public sick of reading about Gable?"

"It seems to me," I answered, "there is nobody in pictures with a more colorful background than you have—semi-orphan, timekeeper in a tire factory, callboy in a theater, worker in the oil fields, roustabout in a lumber camp, lineman for the telephone company, clerk in the want-ad department of a newspaper, carrying instruments for surveyors, actor. I know the outline of your history but how about giving me some of the high spots? Tell me some of the dramatic things that have happened to you."

Clark shook his head. "It would be silly to say nothing has ever happened to me. Plenty has happened. But the things you want are the very things I want to keep for myself. I like to trot those things out in my mind's eye every once in awhile, look at them, then wrap them up again and put them away. If I told you about them and you spread them across the pages of a magazine they wouldn't belong to me any more. They'd belong to everyone who read them and they couldn't mean to your readers what they mean to me. And yet, because they'd been printed they'd be spoiled for me."

Clark the sentimentalist! You can jeer, as I did, but when a man's honest with you you can't help respecting his feelings. "Come on, Clark," I coaxed urgently. "Just the climaxes—a few of them."

"You've always been pretty decent to me," he answered, "and I'd like to show my appreciation, but I don't know.

"Life doesn't come to us suddenly," he went on slowly, "in smashing climaxes or crushing defeats. Often we don't realize we've reached a climax until it's behind us. I think it was Elbert Hubbard who said, 'Life can't be always at the high-water mark. Our ability to feel strongly any emotion depends on the intervening periods when we haven't felt anything at all.' Perhaps I don't even remember some important things in my life because my mind was saturated with some less important thing that had occurred just prior. Probably many of the things I remember best wouldn't seem important to you at all."

"Well, tell me about them, anyhow," I urged.

Clark grinned once more. "All right. But remember, you brought it on yourself.

"THE first thing I remember has to do with a chicken and tomatoes. My mother died when I was seven months old. My father was in no position to take care of me so he took me to live with my mother's parents.

"I was sitting on a stool in the kitchen of their big farmhouse one afternoon, watching my grandmother stir a kettle filled with old fashioned tomato ketchup. Outside there was a blinding snowstorm. One lone, half-frozen chicken was hopping across the yard, lost in the blizzard. I ran out and got it. I came back into the kitchen and climbed back on the stool. As I sat and listened and smelled the warm, spicy steam from the kettle, my grandmother talked to me. 'You can be as big or as small as you think you are, Clark,' she said.

"I have never smelled the odor of cooking tomatoes since then without remembering [Continued on page 62]

Gladys Swarthout and her husband, Frank Chapman, Jr., to whom she gives unqualified credit for her success

A studio hairdresser adjusts the loose rolls of hair that distinguish her new and unusual coiffure

"Marriage Is My Success Secret"

—says Gladys Swarthout

Give Us This Night*, starring the lovely Gladys Swarthout and the European tenor, Jan Kiepura, is Gladys' second screen appearance

TODAY, Gladys Swarthout is the screen's newest star and sensation—and there are reasons. One of the most important is her marriage to Frank Chapman, Jr.

In her first two pictures—Rose of the Rancho and Give Us This Night—Gladys has proved that she has the greatest natural singing voice of any woman alive. (Music critics discovered that, long before the movies did.) She has lustrous brunette beauty, so individual that artists call her the only one of her kind. She has poise, charm, emotional radiance. She dresses with attractiveness that few women ever achieve. But all of these things, added together, would not have made her the opera, screen and radio star that she is—if she had not fallen in love with the right man at the right time. She, herself, says so. And this, I would have you know, is news. New feminine stars, new sensations just don't credit their husbands with their success.

If they have acquired marital mates in advance of their rise to glory, that fact is usually considered regrettable enough. But for a new star to state, for publication, that she actually owes her success to her husband—who ever heard of such a thing? You haven't, and I haven't. But then Gladys probably would insist that no other actress—except Grace Moore—has ever had a partner of Frank's calibre. And she probably would be right. Gladys, you see, was lucky enough to fall in love with a man who loved not only her, but music. . . .

Music was the miracle that brought them together—a miracle that was not written in the cards for either of them. Gladys was born in a modest home in a small town in the Middle West—a home and a town not especially addicted to music. Frank was born in a city hundreds of miles away, the son of one of America's most famous archeologists. (How did they ever chance to meet?)

The dark-eyed little girl, Gladys Swarthout, growing up in the quiet mid-west town, had an older sister who was studying voice and who, in the thrill of self-expression, taught the younger Gladys everything that she, herself, learned. The archeologist's son, given every cultural advantage, discovered that he liked music more than archeology and decided to develop that interest. She never dreamed of marrying, someday, a New York boy. (The local suitors were pretty persistent.) He had no visions of marriage with a golden-voiced girl from the Middle West. (After all, New York girls had their attractions.)

THE years passed. The girl and the boy grew older. Gladys' sister, gifted as a teacher, urged her to go to Chicago for an opera

—Claudette Colbert

Claudette Colbert with Victor McLaglen and Ronald Colman in a stirring scene from her newest picture, Under Two Flags

By Ruth McTammany

TEN years ago a pretty little French girl, dressed in somber black, used to wind her way through the streets of New York. She occasionally mounted the steps of an impressive brown stone mansion and rang the bell. An austere butler would open the door, and with head high and demeanor low would say, "Madam has a headache and cannot take her French lesson today." Sometimes the door of a Fifth Avenue apartment was opened by a maid who was a little more sympathetic as she said, "Madam regrets that she had to leave suddenly for Europe and cannot study any more French." But a check was never left to pay for the lesson which was not important enough to cancel.

The pretty little French girl in somber black was Claudette Colbert!

I too studied French with Claudette Colbert, but not in a brown stone mansion or a Fifth Avenue apartment. I was one of a group which met in a Women's Club on West Forty-ninth Street. Being business women, perhaps we understood better the difficulty which she had, trying to make a living in a vocation which was at the mercy of the whims of society. On one of Miss Colbert's discouraging days she asked me to hear her sing.

"I think I ought to try the stage—musical comedy. I don't like teaching French; it is no pleasure to travel up to the Bronx on a winter's day and find that Mrs. So-and-So is not at home and no word left for me. I would be better off in the chorus of a Broadway show."

"Why not try drama," I suggested, "you are an unusual type and your speaking voice is most certainly of French timbre."

"Drama!" And the little Miss Colbert laughed, "why, I could no more play a rôle in drama than I could—well—fly."

"You are pretty," I persisted, "you wear your clothes with a certain 'chic' and you have personality."

She blushed; she hung her head with embarrassment [Continued on page 72]

WHEN you talk of love to Olivia de Havilland, speak lightly. She knows more about it than you may think she does.

Olivia is sweet nineteen and she's been kissed—by experts.

In addition to this, there is somewhere in the world a man to whom she was once promised in marriage. She may be yet. She isn't sure and no one else seems to know, either.

She was born in Japan and her parents, following the ancient custom of that eastern country, "betrothed" her to the infant son of another temporarily expatriated American family.

Olivia doesn't remember him and has little idea that the "engagement" will ever result in marriage between them, but it makes an easy "out" for the young actress when suitors become too insistent. She can lower her eyes, blush (she does it very prettily) and say:

"I'm sorry. You see—I'm already engaged."

The Warners studio restaurant is not the best place to talk to a pretty young woman about the problems of love and marriage. There is too much confusion, too many neighboring ears, a tendency to concentrate on the mundane business of eating.

But it was the studio restaurant or nothing because Miss de Havilland was working in the

Can a GOOD Girl Be Happy in Hollywood?

Rochelle Hudson admits that even with a fine salary and a beautiful home a "good girl" can have her miserable moments

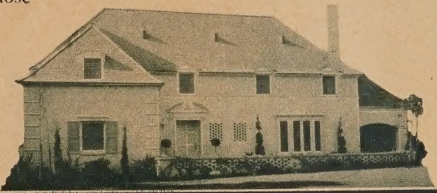
By
Harmony Haynes

"IF YOU think so," Rochelle Hudson smiles grimly, "then you should try living my life for a while. Why, even the air I breathe sometimes seems to be filled with don'ts, can'ts and mustn'ts!"

Of course, Rochelle never intended to be dubbed "Hollywood's good girl." That reputation just slipped up on her unbidden and now she has to live up to it to keep from disappointing those who saddled her with the title.

All of Rochelle's life she had been considered a regular. And there were many things in her life that might have given her an entirely different rating. To begin with there was a private school that shoved her three grades ahead of her normal age, there were private instructions, there was a home better than the average, and a mother who taught her that being a lady was something more than living on the right side of the tracks.

Yet none of this robbed her of the right to enjoy life right along with the rest of the youngsters she went to school with. She roller-skated, rode her bike, and stood on her head and no one ever thought of reminding her that "nice girls don't do such things."



Being human and natural didn't seem to affect her piano lessons or her dancing or her French, so her broad-minded mother encouraged her to be herself, knowing full well that an active mind must be complemented by an active body.

If Rochelle hadn't become a motion picture star she would probably have grown up to be the most popular girl in her set, a ring leader in all the fun and frolic as well as the more intellectual side of social life, but fate stepped in and started her off on another path.

Rochelle was always advanced mentally beyond her years so when she, at the age of thirteen and a half years, told the Fox executives that she was sixteen they believed her and permitted her to sign a motion picture contract.

She had everyone in the studio perplexed, and especially the executives. One minute she would rattle off French, take them to task on dramatic interpretation, or discuss, intelligently, any subject they might bring up, and the next minute she would be teaching some youngsters on the set how to dance or turn cartwheels.

Those first few years in pictures were a lot of fun. The workers looked upon her as a kid and treated as such. She was, to them, a regular fellow and a swell little trouper. Someone they could clown a bit with and yet discuss things with if they felt in a more serious frame of mind.

BUT while she was "that Hudson Kid" to the workers she was fast becoming "Rochelle Hudson" at the box office and to thousands of new friends all over the world.

Rochelle never knew just how it happened but she [Continued on page 59]

The MAGIC EYE—

—peeks backstage on the set of Dancing Pirate, where a sensational dance is being filmed NEVER has there been a cinema event of more colorful importance than "Dancing Pirate." The "Magic Eye" photographs on this page were snapped during the actual filming of the picture and show Charles Collins dancing with Steffi Duna. "Dancing Pirate" is Pioneer Pictures next big Technicolor picture, rated by studio observers as one of the most important of the season's new pictures.

ACTRESSES EXTRAORDINARY—Yvonne, Cecile, Marie, Annette and Emelie Dionne romp through a scene from The Country Doctor with Jean Hersholt

A LOVE THAT ALMOST FAILED—Merle Oberon and Joel McCrea in a scene from These Three, a screen version of The Children's Hour, the story of a scandal inspired by a vicious child

HOW PICTURES ARE RATED

★★★★ Perfect Picture. ★★★ Good Entertainment. ★★ Not Bad. ★ Ho Hum! SCREEN BOOK'S strict standard of rating is applied without discrimination to all pictures. Readers are urged to remember, however, that even in the "Ho Hum!" classification may be occasional scenes to make a movie-goer glad he didn't stay home with the cat. You read the reviews and take your choice.

These Three

★★★½

Adult Drama—Because one vicious little child attending a girl's school imagines an illicit love affair between one of her teachers and a young doctor, three lives verge on disaster. Merle Oberon and Miriam Hopkins have the major feminine rôles and Joel McCrea, who by virtue of this picture shows signs of becoming an actor, plays the young doctor. Bonita Granville is the child who causes all the trouble, but it is Marcia Mae Jones, her unwilling accomplice, who delivers a sensitive, dramatic performance, the like of which the screen has never before seen. Critical Comment—Only an incredible moment or two keeps this from perfect rating. That the story is not quite believable at all times is no fault of the producers who necessarily had to change the stage play because of its indelicate theme.—Produced by Samuel Goldwyn for United Artists.

The Country Doctor

Five Stars for the Quints; Two for the Picture—As an excuse for giving the world a peek at the Dionne quintuplets, The Country Doctor is satisfactory, if not epic. Only in its closing moments does the film's real punch develop. Then is presented perhaps as hilarious a comedy scene as recently filmed in which Jean Hersholt officiates at the birth of the quintuplets as sheriff Slim Summerville waits outside to arrest him for practicing without a license. As the anxious father, John Qualen is a literal panic, doing even better than in Whipsaw, which had him as the jittery father of twins. The quintuplets themselves give performances that should guarantee them an Academy award. Jean Hersholt delivers a fine, sensitive performance as the gallant country doctor.—Produced by Darryl Zanuck for 20th Century-Fox.

Love Before Breakfast

★★★½

Intoxicating Comedy—When any comedy can make a hardboiled Hollywood preview audience hold its sides, its producers can take a day off and celebrate. Love Before Breakfast is a swift, highly amusing farce comedy with Carole Lombard as the hard-to-get girl pursued by the villain who in this case is Preston Foster, a millionaire who is convinced that he can buy everything, including a girl like Carole. He abuses her terrifically throughout the picture in the absence of Cesar Romero, her first love. Then when Carole's absent fiance returns she discovers that life is empty without Foster—so with typical feminine reasoning she continues to snub him until brute force changes the course of true love. Carole Lombard is absolute tops in her rôle. Janet Beecher, as Carole's mother, stands out in the supporting cast. Most amusing scene—Carole examining a black eye acquired when the lights go out during a night club brawl. —Produced by Universal.

By Carl A. Schroeder

ROUGH STUFF for Freddie Bartholomew, but he needs more. Read the review of Little Lord Fauntleroy, a splendid picture, in this department

CAROLE LOMBARD TAKES A BEATING— In fact, she takes a number of them from her tempestuous lover in Love Before Breakfast. The pup in Carole's arms is "Pushface the Killer." Read about him on page 90

GABLE'S TEMPTATION in Wife vs. Secretary is Jean Harlow, and Myrna Loy is the wife who struggles silently against a love affair she only imagines

DRAMA—A picture of such surpassing excellence that it must be rated as one of the finest achievements in screen history. Certainly no film in recent months has been such a field day for character actors who, like the unknown soldier, are apparently remembered but once a year. Although Freddie Bartholomew is the star it is C. Aubrey Smith as the gouty old Earle of Dorincourt whose colorful personality dominates the story. As the child who is whisked out of drab poverty in Brooklyn to a castle in England where he becomes Lord Fauntleroy, Freddie Bartholomew delivers an excellent performance, but there are times when his diction and appearance are too painfully perfect. He could stand a few rough edges. In the rôle of Fauntleroy's beloved "Dearest," Dolores Costello Barrymore returns to the screen, lovely and appealing as ever. Best scene—C. Aubrey Smith in the great hall of his castle pointing out portraits of his ancestors to Guy Kibbee. —Produced by David O. Selznick. Released by United Artists.

Wife vs. Secretary

DOMESTIC DRAMA—Clever and amusing throughout. The story of a wife's silent struggle against her husband's too-tempting secretary is nothing new, but in this case the plot has several new twists. Gable is the successful young publisher who just can't do without Jean Harlow, his flashy, competent private secretary. Through the whole story they are too busy to get around to hand-holding, but people will talk, and when Myrna Loy discovers that Jean and Clark are in the same bedroom in Havana at two in the morning, there is the devil to pay. Best scene—Clark enthusiastically kissing the tip of Myrna's deliciously tilted nose. CRITICAL COMMENT—Gable seems a little too athletic in his interpretation of the gay and witty young man. Jean Harlow delivers a fine performance and her voice is much improved. Myrna Loy rather corners most of the picture's honors.—Produced by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Follow the Fleet

MUSICAL COMEDY—A merry, nonsensical story about a sailor who is "sick of the sea" and wants to get back to shore, particularly to patch up a quarrel with his ex-dancing partner. The plot also concerns Randolph Scott, a sailing buddy of Fred Astaire's, who is a lion with the ladies and who scorns the love of Harriet Hilliard in the rôle of Ginger Rogers' sister. In spite of the superb dancing by Rogers and Astaire and the sweet warbling of Harriet Hilliard, it must be admitted that a lion's share of

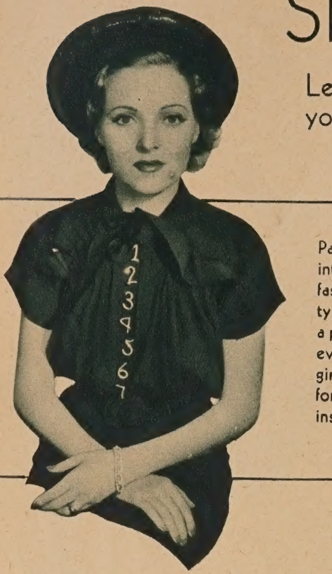
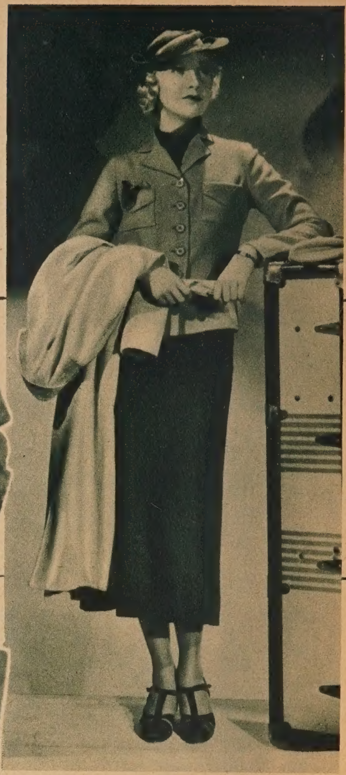
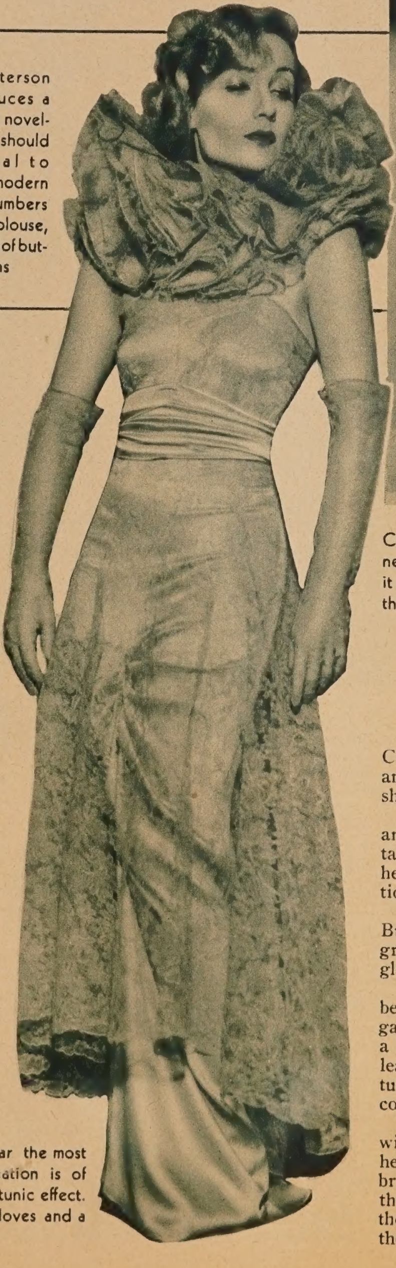
Let a famous fashion authority keep you in touch with the latest clothes gossip straight from Hollywood



Pat Paterson introduces a fashion novelty that should appeal to every modern girl—numbers for a blouse, instead of buttons



Clever girls can copy Una Merkel's dashing new spring suit. Girls not so clever can have it copied with the aid of a dressmaker and the description in the accompanying article



Trust glamorous Carole Lombard to wear the most alluring gowns! This Travis Banton creation is of powder blue lace which falls in a circular tunic effect. Its beauty is enhanced by elbow length gloves and a Pierrot ruff about the neck

By Grace Mack

MIX your colors! That is the season's style slogan. Combine them. Interchange them. And let your accessories accent them. This is more than just a fad. There's a smart idea back of it. By choosing colors that will "mix" you can, with a little forethought, convert one outfit into two or three.

One of the smartest outfits I've seen is the three piece suit Una Merkel is wearing. (Illustrated at upper right.) A soft basket weave wool is used for this suit. The short, slightly fitted jacket is in a desert red—that's a red with quite a lot of yellow in it. The tailored skirt is a rather bright, almost turquoise blue and the top coat is oyster white. The tuck-in scarf and the felt hat match the blue of the skirt. The jacket would be just as effective worn with other skirts. It would be grand with white or beige flannel. And the blue skirt could be worn with a jacket of another shade—or with sweaters. The top coat would be good with practically anything. In other words it is one of those "convertible" outfits which should be in every smart girl's wardrobe.

An interesting color combination for a suit of this type would be two shades of blue with a top coat of chartreuse (this is a color combination which Joan Crawford favors) or tangerine, brown and beige. Your accessories, naturally, should accent one color.

And speaking of accessories, if you are one of those who invested in a gray tailleur for spring and early summer, here are some smart accessory suggestions.

Wine suede gloves and boutonniere. Burnt rose scarf. Hat, shoes and bag in gray. Or, a mustard silk blouse, chamois gloves and boutonniere.

And for the days when you want to be as appealingly feminine as an organdie ruffle, wear a dotted Swiss blouse, a hat of shiny black straw, black patent leather bag, white doeskin gloves and tuck a yellow or a red flower in your coat lapel.

The girl who likes feminine things will adore Una Merkel's dinner suit of heavy beige crêpe trimmed with dark brown lace. The skirt is floor length and the ruffled lace goes down one side of the skirt and forms a dust ruffle around the bottom.

by clearing skin irritants out of the blood

Don't let Adolescent Pimples keep YOU from looking your best

JUST when good looks make such a difference in good times—from about 13 to 25 years of age, or even longer—many young people become afflicted with ugly pimples.

During this time, after the beginning of adolescence, important glands develop and final growth takes place. This causes disturbances throughout the body. The skin, especially, becomes oversensitive. Waste poisons in the blood irritate this sensitive skin and pimples appear.

Fleischmann's fresh Yeast helps to give you back a good complexion by clearing these skin irritants out of the blood. Then—pimples go!

Eat it regularly—3 cakes a day, before meals, plain, or in a little water—until your skin is entirely clear. Start today!

The short-sleeved blouse is made entirely of the brown lace and has a frilly lace jabot. Over this Una wears a very tailored waist length dinner jacket of the beige crêpe.

THOSE of you who have written to ask me what you can wear to make you look shorter will be interested to know that Travis Banton is doing a lot of tunic things for Carole Lombard. Banton, you know, does all of Carole's personal wardrobe as well as the things she wears on the screen. When Carole feels a clothes urge coming on she dashes over to Banton's office.

"What do you have in mind?" he asks.

"Well, I want something for street, a couple of evening things and a dinner dress and a sport suit."

"Any choice as to color or materials?" ask Banton.

"No, Travis," Carole assures him. "You just go ahead and do whatever you think I'd like. You know I adore being surprised."

One of the things which Banton recently surprised Carole with was a powder blue lace evening gown over a draped satin, form-fitting foundation. The lace falls in a circular tunic effect which is fairly short in front and very full and long in the back. With this Carole wears a Pierrot ruff of lace and elbow length gloves. The draped foundation and the tunic of uneven length are both decidedly new. Banton also did a very lovely evening thing for Carole in beige chiffon. It has a knee length tunic banded with sable, and a short sable coat. Now of course I'm well aware that tunics banded with sable don't synchronize with clothes budgets. The "idea," however, can be copied.

If you want to come out with something that is newer than new, then have numbers on your blouse instead of buttons! Pat Paterson (she's Mrs. Charles Boyer, you know) has a very smart black crêpe street frock featuring this amusing conceit. Little jeweled numbers from one to seven march right down the front of the waist. Then Pat has a street frock of tan wool which has bright shiny pennies (they're real, too) for buttons.

And now, before I say adios, thanks a miliion for all the letters you've been writing to me. Your answers to our fashion quiz seem to indicate that the majority of you girls want to know about the stars' personal wardrobes rather than their screen clothes. So if there are readers who DON'T want to hear about personal wardrobes, better hurry up and write your order now—or forever after hold your peace.

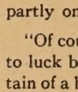
HOLLYWOOD'S BEAUTY

by DORIS DUMONT

Spring is the time to look for new hairstyles and new beauty ideas so I decided to visit several of the leading lights of the Motion Picture Hairstylists Guild. The members of this organization compose the hairstyling departments of every studio in Hollywood. They are the most distinguished, most highly paid group of hairstylists and beauticians in the world today. Every lovely star you see on the screen has been beautified by a Guild member. It has been said that this Guild is Hollywood's "Book of Knowledge" on beauty.

At Paramount Studios I talked with Leonore Sabine, the head hairstylist who is responsible for the lovely glamorous coiffures worn by such stars as Carole Lombard and Marlene Dietrich. Miss Sabine is president of the Motion Picture Hairstylists Guild. We discussed permanent waves and I asked why the stars always have beautiful waves, while so many of us ordinary mortals feel we have to depend partly on luck. Miss Sabine replied:

"Of course the stars cannot afford to trust to luck but any woman can be equally certain of a beautiful permanent if she will have her hair waved by the method selected by the stars."



At United Artists Studio I asked head hairstylist Nina Roberts for more information. She it was who cut off those famous curls when Mary Pickford decided to wear a bob. Also to her credit are the famed Merle Oberon hairstyles. When I asked what waving methods are being used by the stars, she replied:

"We have tried them all but nearly every star you see on the screen has her hair waved by the Duart method, for only Duart gives individual heat control to each curl. In the Duart method each heater is regulated by a separate thermostat and the smaller curls get less heat than the larger ones. This produces an absolutely uniform wave with never a danger of those ugly frizzy ends."

Thanking Miss Roberts for this valuable bit of information, I hurried over to see Helen Hunt, head hairstylist at the nearby Columbia Studios. When I arrived Miss Hunt was designing a new hairstyle creation for Grace Moore, whom you will soon see with Franchot Tone in "Cissy." When I told her that I was looking for beauty news, she replied:

"Well, you'll live a long time before you get any bigger news than this," and she handed me an attractive jar labeled "Creme of Milk." "Here at last is what every woman in the world has been looking for," she continued. "It is a beauty creme actually made from milk. Real, honest to goodness, pure, fresh, dairy milk! Hollywood's cosmeticians say it is the greatest scientific discovery ever made in cosmetics. Already you will find this new creme on the dressing table of almost every star in Hollywood and of course we hairstylists are using it too and telling all our friends about it."

Never have I seen anyone in Hollywood show such enthusiasm over a new beauty product, for here we have a cosmetic factory on every block and some sort of a new cream is born every minute. But never before has anyone succeeded in making a beauty creme from milk, the finest skin beautifier that has ever been known. This new product is being advertised on this page for the first time anywhere—better send for a jar.

I haven't space here to tell you about my visits to the other studios but all the hairstyles I selected are in the book shown above. It is packed full of the smartest, most alluring coiffures Hollywood has ever produced. Send for this book and take it to your hairdresser—she will be able to copy one of the hairstyles for you. In the Duart Permanent Wave advertisement at the left, there is a coupon which you may use to send for this booklet.

CREME

Milk in a Beauty Creme! It has been done at last!

Screen stars, Hollywood cosmeticians, and beauty editors pronounce Creme of Milk the greatest scientific cosmetic discovery ever made. Think of it—all the famous beautifying qualities of pure fresh dairy milk have been compounded in the form of a new all-purpose facial creme. Now in this one amazing creme made from milk you will find everything you need to cleanse your skin more thoroughly than ever before, and to banish dryness, roughness and blemishes. Your skin will be kept so smooth and soft that your powder will cling perfectly for hours and hours. No other powder base will be necessary.

Hollywood has taken Creme of Milk right to its very heart. The Head Hairstylists at United Artists, Paramount, Columbia, MGM, and Universal Studios report that already a jar of Creme of Milk is to be found in almost every star's dressing room.

"All are enthusiastic," say the hairstylists, "about the discovery of Creme of Milk and are using it to remove their makeup and protect their skins from the loss of natural oil which occurs with the use of ordinary cremes."

You can begin to enjoy this thrilling new beauty creme at once. Mail your coupon today! Creme of Milk is so new stores haven't yet had a chance to buy it. So we are sending a full 20-cent size jar for only 10 cents.

picture, Anthony Adverse, at the time, opposite Fredric March, and Mervyn LeRoy, the director, is a serious-minded young man who doesn't like to have visitors talk to his players about frivolous things during working hours.

Not that Olivia considers love frivolous. She admitted that she considers love very important and she is sure that when it comes to her she will recognize it as the most vital thing in her life. But just now she has "other fish to fry."

"I'm really glad I'm heart free," she explained, very seriously. "I guess it's safe to tell you that I am. You're not going to propose to me, are you?"

No, we were not going to propose to her. Not at all. But if the interviewer had been fifteen years younger, the story might have been different from this point on.

"All right," sighed Olivia, "then I'll answer your questions."

"She's just a child," volunteered the waitress. "Better not try any of your tricks."

"There isn't any sweetheart back home in Saratoga, California," she explained, in answer to the first question.

"No boy friends?"

"I have lots of friends," she smiled. "But no prospective husband."

"You've never been in love?"

She flushed. "Of course I've been in love. Several times. But so far I've always managed to recover."

The militant waitress was back with the trays. "The poor child can't even eat her lunch in peace," she declared, to nobody in particular.

"They take such good care of me here," giggled Olivia.

We waited until the waitress had retreated to another table.

"This prince charming—when he arrives and is recognized, will he be like Dick Powell, James Cagney, Errol Flynn or Fredric March? You've played opposite those. Which would you pick as a model for the man you would marry?"

"You left out Joe E. Brown," grinned Olivia.

"Consider him included."

Olivia ate in silence for a moment. "The man I would marry," she said slowly, "needn't be like any one else."

"What should he be like?"

Again Olivia waited before answering.

"I like to think of him as being tall and strong," she said finally. "And I would want him to be strong-minded, too, a man who would take care of me and not expect me to mother him."

"Like Errol Flynn?"

"A little, perhaps."

"Or Freddie March."

"A little like Mr. March, too."

"And Dick Powell?"

"Perhaps. But it won't turn out that way, I suppose. I'll probably marry a little man, a timid soul. A man who will ask me for advice."

"Like me, for instance?"

"I thought you said this was not to be a proposal."

"It isn't. Go on, please."

"It will not be an actor," she said positively. "That's the one thing I'm quite sure about. Actors are fine friends. I'm not so sure they make good husbands."

"A GIRL is entitled to a few secrets of her own, isn't she?" Olivia demanded suddenly.

Miss de Havilland, it seemed, was living up to her reputation as an actress. "One in a million," Director Lloyd Bacon had said in our hearing one day at the end of a difficult love scene between Olivia and James Cagney in The Irish In Us.

"The best actress of her age in America," Mervyn LeRoy had agreed, half way through the picture Anthony Adverse. "And she doesn't know it," he added gleefully.

The waitress returned with the menu and we ordered dessert.

"Have you had any proposals since you came to Hollywood?" we asked.

"Only in my fan mail," said Olivia—"and if there had been others I wouldn't tell you. Really I wouldn't."

"Do the fan mail offers of marriage annoy you?"

"Of course not. I'm human. I'm tickled pink at every one of them. There have been two, I think, maybe three."

"But no real one, from men in Hollywood?"

"That's an unfair question."

"Well then; suppose the most eligible bachelor actor in Hollywood should propose tonight. What would you say?"

"I suppose you mean Dick Powell."

"There are others, just as eligible. What if one of them 'popped the question.' What would you say?"

"I would say, 'Thank you.' And then I would explain that I am already engaged. But it won't be Dick Powell—or any one else, so far as I know."

PEOPLE kept coming by to talk to Olivia. Directors, players, writers and others. The noon hour was gone before we knew it. It may have seemed long to Olivia. To the interviewer the time galloped by.

"I'm through with Adverse Saturday," explained the actress as we left the restaurant Green Room, "and I'm going up home for a week or two."

For just a fleeting instant she looked suddenly very tired.

"I've been so excited for more than a year," she confessed. "So much has happened to me. Up home I can rest and think it all over, slowly, step by step."

"But you are not seriously interested in love?"

"Of course I'm interested. It just hasn't happened to me yet."

"And the boy up in Saratoga?"

"There isn't any 'the boy'."

"Here's the check," said the waitress politely but firmly. "I know Miss de Havilland is in a hurry." She had followed us out into the studio street.

"One more question, please. Does this young man, the one who was betrothed to you as a baby, does he write you letters?"

"No," said Olivia. "I know where he lives and it's a long way off. But we have never corresponded. Really, you just can't find any romance in my life—yet. Goodbye."

She was gone—but the intrepid waitress lingered on. We paid her and stomped away.

"How can I be More Attractive?"

a thousand women a day write Ginger Rogers audition. She "made good" as a beginner, continued on to New York and found minor rôles in Metropolitan Opera waiting for her. Frank, meanwhile, had won a reputation as one of America's most promising singers. And still they might not have met, if each had not decided to spend a summer in Italy. There they discovered each other—and love.

Put yourself in the predicament in which Gladys might have found herself that summer. Convince yourself, with the help of famous singers and famous teachers, that you have a great career before you—if you do not allow anything to distract you from your ambition. Ask yourself if you should steel your heart against love. Ask yourself if both a career and a man can have your devotion . . . but Gladys Swarthout did not find herself in any such predicament.

"I might have," she says, "if I had not fallen in love with a man who was as mad about music as I was. Love is demanding. It demands your time, your thoughts, your energies. It is jealous of distractions — even more jealous than ambition is. But, in our case, everything was simplified by the fact that all of our other interests were mutual interests. When we were apart, I wasn't living in a feminine world while Frank lived in a masculine world; we both were living in the world of music. We simply couldn't be jealous of each other's 'outside interests,' because those interests were completely parallel, just as our ambitions were parallel. And the more we were together, the greater those ambitions became—until finally we became convinced that marriage, far from handicapping either of us, would inspire both of us."

So Gladys Swarthout, promising young operatic soprano, became in private life Mrs. Frank Chapman, Jr., wife of the well-known concert singer. And shortly thereafter the musical world began to take note of the fact that Chapman concerts, despite their popularity, were becoming less and less frequent and that the Swarthout fame was steadily, speedily, increasing. And this is the explanation:

"MARRIAGE is a game of give-and-take," says Gladys, with all the earnest seriousness of which she is capable, "and one always gives more than the other. It is not that one loves more deeply than the other; it is that one has greater talent for giving than the other. Certainly, I feel that my love for Frank is every bit as great as his for me yet he is the one who gives more, and has given more. If I am a success today, it is because Frank's work—added to my own—made me one.

"He has given up his own career to devote himself to mine. I did not ask such a sacrifice, he insisted upon it—and refused to let me call it a sacrifice. I cannot be too humble about that gift, the gift of his fine intelligence, his keen, constructive criticism, his knowledge of music, his full time. He will work with me for hours, developing one little effect. And when Frank says that I have achieved it, I have supreme self-confidence. I trust his judgment. Not only in music, but in everything else. I never have to worry about contracts or business details, Frank takes care of everything. He is a genius."

A Paramount representative, sitting in on the interview, comments, "That sounds like a large order of orchids for Mr. Frank Chapman, Jr." And Mr. Frank Chapman, Jr., sitting across the room, smoking a pipe, reddens a bit as he explains, with a smile, that the buttonhole in his coat lapel wasn't designed for orchids. Out of her chair bounds Gladys toward her husband, and bending to kiss him, asks, "Am I embarrassing you, darling? You know, I mean every word of it."

Back in her chair, and momentarily self-conscious about her spontaneous demonstration of affection, Gladys continues, with a smile, "I hope you don't think this is a little 'act' I originated for Friday interviewers. It isn't. It is the real thing. I can't express too strongly my indebtedness to Frank. Few men would have been big enough to do what he has done—no matter how much in love they might have been.

A modest woman, and a beautiful and talented one, is Gladys Swarthout. Her dark brown hair is bobbed, with a loose roll of hair framing her face on each side. She wears little make-up, and that little so skillfully applied as to be practically invisible. Her wide smile reveals even, shining teeth. There are tiny circles under her eyes—but they will be erased by a trip to Nassau, on her first vacation in two years. She does not dramatize her lovely figure, having a fondness for trim, tailored suits. From tip to toe, there is no artificiality about Gladys Swarthout.

THOSE tiny-circles-under-the-eyes are partly explained by the strenuousness with which she worked in Hollywood. For several days she worked on two pictures at once—Give Us This Night in the mornings, and retakes on Rose of the Rancho in the afternoons. She is undisturbed about the debate over the quality of her first picture. (There has been no debate about the four-star rating given to her, personally.) She is just as happy that she did not start her screen career with an undisputed hit. She would much rather be working up to great glory, than trying to live up to it. And she feels that Give Us This Night has more to offer than her first effort did—both in operatic music and in amusing touches. And if Jan Kiepura, her co-star, is as temperamental as rumored, you won't hear about it from Gladys. She has only compliments for his artistic sincerity.

She will be back in Hollywood as soon as the Metropolitan season is ended. And this time, maybe the gossip writers won't welcome her with rumors that she and Frank are on the verge of divorce. That welcome on their first trip dumbfounded them. They thought the whole world knew about their partnership. New York did. But Hollywood is three thousand miles from New York. And Gladys' success story was unknown there. Well, here's the story.

By JAMES REID.

Can a Good Girl Be Happy in Hollywood?

one day awoke to the fact that she was being hailed as "Hollywood's good girl."

"I won't be another nice girl!" she declared. "I won't be branded a goody-goody. I'll do something—I'll smoke a cigarette—I'll dance every night—I'll go with a different man every time!"

But Rochelle's early training forbade any of those things. She couldn't smoke because cigarettes left a bitter taste in her mouth, she couldn't dance every night because she had too much worthwhile work to do at home, and she couldn't go out with a different man every night because—well, there weren't that many eligible young men in Hollywood.

So she gave up the idea as a bad one and continued to try to be herself, while her reputation as a good girl grew by leaps and bounds until even she had to recognize it and bow to it.

Rochelle is naturally a good girl. She always has been and simply couldn't be anything else if she tried but being an ordinary good girl and being Hollywood's good girl are two entirely different things.

If she were just an ordinary good girl she could go with the same young man all the time and merely be considered conventional or she could go with several young men and only thought popular. But can she do that in Hollywood? Ah, no! Here, if she is seen with the same man twice, she's engaged to him—if she goes with several men, she's a play girl.

Rochelle just completed Music Goes 'Round opposite Harry Richman. Harry is lots of fun and Rochelle enjoyed working with him and also enjoyed his wit and humor between scenes. She attended several social functions where they were both guests and appeared on a radio program with him.

There was nothing unusual—nothing strange about that, but Rochelle was Hollywood's good girl and Harry was Broadway's play boy so the columnists hinted at a love affair. Harry has, for years, had his name romantically linked with numerous beautiful girls of the stage and screen. He was a play boy and a rumored engagement was expected of him. But not so with Rochelle—she was Hollywood's good girl and her fans didn't want her engaged or even rumored engaged to the man of many loves.

When Rochelle read their letters she burst into tears and said, "Mother, can't I have any fun at all? Can't I have friends? Can't I do what other girls my age do and still be considered a good girl?"

Mrs. Hudson's mother heart aches for her girl at such times but what can she do about it? Nothing, save soothe her and remind her that everything has its price and that public opinion has to be lived up to even if it does mean sacrificing many girlish pleasures.

The Wrong Shade of Face Powder Will Make You Look Years Older Than You Really Are!

BY Lady Esther

Are you using the right shade of face powder for you?

That sounds like a rather needless question, doesn't it? For there is nothing a woman selects more confidently than her color of face powder. Yet, it is an actual fact, as artists and make-up experts will tell you, that many women use altogether the wrong shade of face powder.

The shade they so fondly believe makes them look their youngest and most attractive does just the opposite and makes them look years older than they really are!

Brunettes think that because they are brunettes they should use a dark shade. Blondes think they should use a light shade. Titians think they should use something else.

Choose by Trying

The fact is, you shouldn't choose a face powder shade according to your "type" or coloring, but according to which one is the most becoming for you. After all, a brunette may have a very fair skin while a blonde may have a dark or olive skin or any shade between. The only way to tell, therefore, is to try all five shades which, experts agree, accommodate all colorings.

So fundamentally sound is this principle that I want you to prove it to yourself at my expense. I will therefore send you all five shades of my Lady Esther Face Powder free of charge and obligation. When you get the five shades, try all five on. Don't think that your choice must be confined to any one or two shades. As I say, try on all five. Maybe the very shade you think least suited to you is really your most becoming, your most flattering.

Stays on for 4 Hours

When you make the shade test of Lady Esther Face Powder, I want you to notice, too, how smooth this face powder is — how evenly it goes on and long it holds. By actual test, you will find this face powder adheres for four hours or more.

Write today for all five shades of Lady Esther Face Powder which I offer free. With the five shades of Lady Esther Face Powder I will also send you a 7-day tube of Lady Esther Face Cream. The coupon brings both the powder and cream.

Gable Talks About His Past

that day and my grandmother's words—without being vaguely conscious of a strange feeling of homesickness and depression.

"The next thing I remember clearly was the moment I first met my stepmother. My grandmother had never told me any of those crazy stories about mean stepmothers so I had no prejudice in my mind when I met her. She just leaned down, picked me up and kissed me. I loved her from that moment. She couldn't have been kinder to me in all the years I lived with her, nor I more devoted to her if she'd been my own mother.

"THIS next incident probably won't seem important or dramatic to you but it was highly important to me. It was only that the first year I was in high school I was selected to catch on the first baseball team. Usually only juniors or seniors get that spot. And did I feel big!

"The next thing happened a number of years later when, for the first time in my life, I was taken backstage in a theater. It was only a two by four stock company. I realize that now. But then it seemed to me the grandest theatrical outfit imaginable. It fascinated me and that was the start of my theatrical ambitions. Since then I've never wanted to be anything but an actor.

"Eventually I got a job with them as callboy and finally as an actor. The night I went on for my first speaking part is a never-to-be-forgotten occasion. The play was The Bird of Paradise. I don't remember what part I played. Probably I had only a line or two to speak, but the traditional figure of Edwin Booth has never seemed as important to me as I seemed to myself that night."

There was a silence for a moment and Clark's face clouded. "Another incident that's etched indelibly into my brain," he half-whispered, "occurred while I was with that same company. It was almost curtain time one night when I received word my stepmother had passed away. There was nothing for me to do but go on and play my part. But now I never hear the expression, 'The show must go on' that I don't think of that night."

He paused and gazed reminiscently into space. I knew he was living over again those years when he trouped in small companies all over the country. Oft-times the companies were stranded and the townspeople had to give benefits to raise funds to get them to their next stop. It was in Butte, Montana, that one of those companies finally gave up the ghost, disbanded, and left him stranded there.

"The next thing," Clark continued as if divining my thoughts, "happened in Butte, Montana."

"I know that one!" I cried.

Clark hung around Butte for several weeks. It was winter and there are few colder places in the country than Butte. The wind bit through his clothing and he ached from head to foot. Each day he climbed the mountainside to the post-office, looking for a letter containing money. As he went up the mountain his hopes were high. There was always the feeling, "this is my lucky day." As he came down his spirits sank lower than the thermometer. The letter never came.

About five o'clock one afternoon in March, Clark climbed aboard a freight train. The sky was a dull gray and it was snowing. He and a tramp whom he didn't know, lay on top of a refrigerator car and shivered. The lights of Butte flickered uncertainly in the winter dusk, grew dim and finally faded altogether. There was nothing to be seen save the bleak countryside almost obliterated by the whirling snow, and a very miserable boy being carried on to an unknown and most uncertain future. Nothing to be heard save the click of the train wheels and his own chattering teeth.

Clark hooked his arm around the walk on top of the car. The monotonous click of the wheels and the cold made him sleepy. The train lurched suddenly around a curve and he woke with a start. He had almost slipped off the roof. He let out a yell that woke the tramp who pulled him back to safety.

Towards morning a brakeman found him frozen half stiff on top of the car and threw him off. He was in a town called Bend, Oregon. The tramp had disappeared in the night.

"BY GRADUAL stages," Clark went on, "I worked my way down to Los Angeles. I managed to get several jobs with stage companies but I could never get anything more than extra work in pictures. I finally left Hollywood and went to Houston, Texas, as second lead in a stock company there.

"I stayed in Houston a little over a year and then went to New York armed with a letter of introduction to an agent. I had only been in town a few days when he got me signed for the male lead in a play called Machinal that Arthur Hopkins (at that time the most important producer in New York) was putting on. Can you imagine what it meant to me? My first metropolitan appearance under his management!

"We rehearsed several weeks and I had that part down pat. My delivery, timing, feeling—everything—was perfect. I didn't need anyone to tell me that. Then we opened in New Haven and I lost it all. I was giving a rotten performance and knew it. And no matter what I did it didn't improve as the week wore on. But Hopkins didn't seem worried. He said, 'You'll get it back.' But I didn't. Didn't, that is, until the night we opened in New York.

"If I'd known then what I found out afterwards — exactly how important he was—that all the bigwigs of society and the theatrical world attended his premières—I don't believe I could have given any performance at all—let alone a good one. But I didn't know. And the minute I stepped out on that stage it all came back to me with a bang. I think that first night of Machinal I gave the best performance I have ever given."

HIS voice trailed off and I took advantage of the break in his reminiscences to ask him a question. "I know you had a lot of tests in New York before you came out here. Didn't they mean anything to you? Weren't you excited over the prospect of getting into the movies?"

"Naw," he laughed. "I wasn't inter-

This is one for your album! The baby is Ginger Rogers at the age of one year and sixteen days. Her name then was Virginia Katherine ested in the movies. I'd been in Hollywood and got nowhere. I was in New York and I was doing all right. If it hadn't been for my agent I wouldn't even have made those tests. But I knew if I refused to make them he'd quit trying to get me jobs in the theater."

"Didn't you get any offers from the tests?" I queried.

He laughed again and shook his head. "The only reaction I got from my first screen test was 'Your ears are too big!'

"There's one other thing stands out clearly in my mind," he continued. "That's my recent South American trip. People don't begin to realize what a place that is. Buenos Aires is like New York and Rio de Janeiro is the most beautiful city in the world, I think. The most thrilling part of it all came when I flew from Santiago, Chili, to Buenos Aires. It was almost the same flight I made in a picture called Night Flight—only this time it was real. For almost an hour we climbed steadily to gain altitude. When we reached twenty or twenty-five thousand feet we started to cross the Andes. The plane isn't made that's powerful enough to climb above them so you have to fly in the ice canyons between them. You wonder constantly how the pilots know which canyon to take—why they took this one instead of that one. Midway of the flight there's a terrifically large gilded cross on top of one of the peaks. It's called 'Christ of the Andes.' Sometimes the whole cross would be visible with the sunlight glinting on it. Other times only the top part and head of Christ would show above the clouds. That was really thrilling!"

The assistant director stuck his head in the door. "We're ready for you on the set, Mr. Gable."

"Be right out," Clark nodded and turned to me. "And there, my friend, you have practically the complete story of my lurid past."

"I don't know about the 'lurid'," I muttered, "but it's certainly been a dramatic one!"

● "Listen—you're my twin and best pal—but it'll be a cold day when I go traveling with you again! Crab—whine—boo-hoo . . . all the way home! I know what you need though—watch me unpack our suitcase and get it!"

● "Now stop your whimpering! I know you're chafed and hot and cranky—I don't feel any too comfortable myself. I am hurrying, aren't I? I'll find it if I have to dig clear through to China!"

● "There you are! Now will you take back what you said about me? Sprinkle yourself with that soft downy Johnson's Baby Powder and smile for a change. And then give some to Sister!"

You Can Have What It Takes Says Grace Moore

pered by obligation. I wanted to sing. I wanted to sing in the Metropolitan opera house. I knew discouragement, even despair, sometimes, but so great was my desire, that—well, I did. And that triumph is more precious to me because I won it by my own efforts."

Again she stopped and again I waited for her to go on. When she spoke again, it was to summarize rule No. 2 for young singers who would win success.

"You must be loyal to your ambition, if you would be a great artist," she said.

"Does that mean never deviating from the course chosen?" I asked her.

She smiled. "Well, it depends upon what you call 'deviating'. For instance, I wanted to be a Metroplitan star, and I never lost sight of that desire. But in the ten years between the time I went to New York, a naive, bewildered small town girl, and the time I stood upon the stage of Metropolitan opera house, my ambition realized, I 'deviated' many times . . .

"For instance, I 'deviated' to a job in a little old dingy, greasy cafe called the 'Black Cat', where I literally sang for my supper. This wasn't the Metropolitan stage, but there would have been no supper at all if I hadn't sung there.

"And I took a rôle in a musical comedy, a road show at that, and was glad to get it even though my chief solo, far from being a great aria from opera, was nothing more elevating than a ditty called First You Wiggle, and Then You Waggle.

"We travelled across the country, sometimes playing one night stands, and finally went broke in one of the Dakotas. It was in the middle of the winter and my chum and I had just enough money to get back to New York. Still, when we got there, we managed, somehow. I think my next job was singing in a tea room. Anyway, I got along. Sometimes with not any too much to eat. Sometimes with the soles of my shoes perilously thin. But it wasn't so bad. I could sing. I believed in myself. Life was good . . ."

"Then you were never discouraged?" I put the question tentatively.

SHE answered me quickly. "Yes, I've been discouraged," she said. "You see, there came a time when misfortune struck like a bolt of lightning. Because of bad teachers, I lost my voice. I thought I should never sing again. I could not even speak . . ."

"What did you do?"

"I went to a great specialist. He told me he was afraid for me, but that there was one chance. He said that if I would shut myself away for six months and would not speak one word in all that time, perhaps my voice would come back.

"I did it. I went to a lodge in the woods. I read, studied, listened to my phonograph. In all that time, I never spoke. I would write even the shortest sentence to my companions on slips of paper. And when the six months were over, I was cured! My voice was better than it had been before.

"That experience," she went on, "taught me a great lesson and one I should like to pass on to every singer who is beginning a career. It is this. . . .

"Be careful; be very careful in choosing a teacher! I think it is a crime, the way in which some teachers, or pseudo teachers, ruin a young voice. The human voice is so delicate an instrument. It should be handled carefully and gently!

"It is difficult to advise as to how to select a teacher, but I think this would be a safe rule: Choose a teacher who already has taught fine singers."

She turned then, into happier vein. "If you would be a singer, never lose sight of the joy there is in singing," she charged. "That is what singing is: an expression of inner beauty. When you sing, sing, not notes, but the emotion that is within you. That is the boon that singing grants you. It allows you to open your soul as well as your throat." With the eagerness that is so vital a part of her, she seemed to be talking, not to me, but to some young disciple of music, sitting, shadowy, at her feet.

"I have one other rule, you might call it," she said— "perhaps the most important of all . . .

"If you would be a singer, be patient. A great voice is not perfected in a day or a month or a year. The foundation must be firm, and right. Have patience with the slowness of its building. Have patience with the exercises that are vital to success. Practice them hour after hour, day after day, year after year.

I REMEMBER a story told me when I was only beginning to study and that helped me through all the tedious, exacting, sometimes gruelling work that I did.

"A young singer was studying with a famous teacher. Day after day, he came for lessons—lessons that were costing him every cent of money he could muster. Day after day, he practiced exercises, breathing exercises, tone exercises, range exercises, nothing else. A year went by, and the exercises went on. Two years went by. Not once did he try a bit of melody, not even a bar.

"Then, one day, came the beginning of his fourth year of work. He felt discouraged, hurt, a little defiant. He respected his teacher—a man who had trained many a great voice—but he felt he could stand exercises no longer.

"'I want to sing a song!' he cried. 'Why cannot you teach me a song?'

"And then the teacher shook his head slowly, and opened the student's music book to a new set of exercises.

"'My son,' he said, quietly, 'when you are ready to sing a song, you will have no more need of me . . .'"

Grace Moore, the great singer, the lovely screen star, the fine, thoughtful woman, rose, now, and held out her hand. "I hope I have helped," she concluded. "I hope what I have said will aid someone, somewhere to find his—or her—heart's desire.

"Moreover, I do not see why a young singer truly imbued with the urge to succeed should fail, these days.

"No," she repeated, "If you really want success as a singer, then there is no excuse for failure. All you have to do is want it sufficiently."

HANDY-QUICK RECIPE BOX

Iris Adrian, popular young Hollywood beauty, displaying the handy indexed recipes which she uses in her kitchen

FOR a tasty luncheon, Iris Adrian prefers a green salad with a simple French dressing. What is more, she likes to prepare her own dressing just before she tackles the crisp lettuce and fresh tomatoes which go to make up this health inspiring meal. She uses one part vinegar to four parts olive oil then adds just enough salt and pepper to make it appetizing. This dressing goes nicely on dozens of other salads for which Iris keeps neat little cards in a gadget especially designed for just such a purpose. The Pompeian Olive Oil Co. can furnish you a card indexed box just like Iris has.

How Ginger Rogers Was Cured of Temperament!

twelve Adolf Bohm, the great ballet master, saw her dance in a local talent show in Dallas. So impressed was he by this dynamic child with the rhythm-filled feet that he immediately sought out her mother and made her a most astonishing offer.

"I CAN make this child one of the greatest dancers of our time," he told Mrs. Rogers. "She has more than talent. She is the very soul of rhythm. Of course," he went on to say, "to truly develop that soul she would have to belong to me so that I could mould and dictate her life. Please Mrs. Rogers—will you let my wife and me adopt her, bring her up as our own child?"

"You mean take her away from me entirely?" asked Mrs. Rogers.

"Naturally, you would be permitted to see her at frequent intervals but her real devotion would be dedicated to the ballet."

There are mothers perhaps who would have given serious consideration to such an offer. But Mrs. Rogers, fortunately, is a very level-headed woman.

"Of course I was impressed that a master like Bohm should see in Ginger a potential Pavlowa," says Mrs. Rogers, "but as for allowing him to adopt her and bring her up in the rigid routine of the Russian ballet, I would sooner have sold Ginger into slavery."

Personally, I'm glad that Mrs. Rogers was so sensible. I am sure that Ginger, dressed up in feathers, doing a dying swan, would never have thrilled me half as much as Ginger in satin slacks, doing a dynamic tap routine.

The story of Ginger's introduction to Hollywood, however, has not been told. And because it furnishes an excellent illustration of the Rogers' variety of humor I'm going to let you in on it.

Ginger had been appearing in a Broadway musical comedy called Girl Crazy. The show finished its run on Saturday night and she had visions of a grand vacation at the beach. She and her mother had rented a beach shack and armed with enough canned goods to stock a grocery store they set forth for their summer retreat. Scarcely had they finished their first breakfast, however, when the telephone rang. It was Hollywood calling, offering Ginger a three picture contract.

"So we gave away the groceries," laughs Ginger, "and set out for Hollywood."

On the train with them was Harold Ross, editor of the New Yorker. He and Ginger had long been friends and when, as they neared Hollywood, he received a wire from a studio supervisor inviting him to a party, he asked Ginger to go with him.

Ginger had met the supervisor in New York but when she and Ross arrived at the party it was obvious that he did not remember her. (Imagine any man forgetting Ginger!)

"This is a swell set-up for a gag," Ross told Ginger. "I'm going to tell this guy that you're a New York heiress, on your way to Honolulu. Your name will be Elizabeth Du Pont of THE Du Ponts."

Nothing pleases Ginger more than a gag, so in the twinkling of an eye she became every inch a Du Pont. The Marx Brothers, who had known Ginger in New York, helped to build the gag, and taking the supervisor aside told him that this Du Pont girl certainly looked like a good screen bet, and that if he was smart he'd make a screen test of her.

The supervisor was skeptical but Ross and the Marx Bros. finally built him up to the place where he asked "Miss Du Pont" if she would be interested in making a screen test.

"Thank you so much," said Ginger in her best Park Avenue manner, "but I'm really not interested in a picture career. Sunning myself on the beach at Waikiki appeals to me a great deal more."

The pay-off came the following night. Ginger attended a picture première at the Chinese. As she got out of her car the radio announcer said:

"Miss Ginger Rogers, Broadway musical comedy star who has just arrived in Hollywood to make a picture, is just entering the theater. Just a minute, folks. I'm going to try to get her to come over to the microphone and say hello to you."

Ginger said a few words into the mike. "Hold it for a picture please, Miss Rogers," shouted a cameraman. Ginger looked toward the cameraman. Standing beside him, his face a deep magenta, was the supervisor who had so generously offered to give "Miss Du Pont" a screen test. Even today an occasional ribber will kid the supervisor about that Du Pont girl who turned down his offer.

DURING Ginger's recent visit east that poise was put to a severe test, particularly when she was in Washington as one of the star attractions at the President's birthday party.

The schedule for her various appearances at clubs and hotels where the numerous parties were being given was announced over the air. The result was that in spite of her battalion of motorcycle cops who tried to clear the way for her as she went from party to party, poor Ginger was nearly mobbed. She faced battery after battery of cameras, and was the cynosure of all eyes as she was presented to the First Lady of the Land.

"We were supposed to chat for a few minutes," says Ginger, "but our chatting consisted mostly in shaking hands and smiling at the cameras. Each time we started to talk some cameraman would interrupt us with, 'Please, Mrs. Roosevelt, would you mind shaking hands with Miss Rogers again?' 'Certainly not,' she would say and taking my hand in her's she would say laughingly: 'So once again we shake hands Miss Rogers.' I think we must have shaken hands with each other at least fifteen times."

It was not until she reached the last party—a breakfast at which some of the most important political figures in Washington were present—that Ginger showed signs of cracking under the strain.

"Do you know what I'd like to do?" she said to her mother just before they got out of their car. "I'd like to give one of Johnny Weissmuller's big long Tarzan screams. I feel all tight inside. I believe a good healthy scream would do me good."

Needless to say, she didn't give in to the impulse. She has been cured of temperament.

Why It Pays To Copy Joan Crawford

friends, Joan learned the priceless art of making friends—of shaping her own interests to the interests of others, of meeting each new acquaintance with intelligence, sincerity and forgetfulness of self which are unique in a very selfish world.

The net result of this mental and spiritual accomplishment is that priceless quality called glamour.

JOAN and I had been talking, casually enough, about dieting. Everybody talks about dieting in Hollywood, where extra poundage is a formidable and common enemy. A mutual friend who had joined us was regretting the chocolate pudding she had eaten for lunch.

"I know I shall gain five pounds," she complained.

Joan laughed. "You should be glad you had such a good dessert," she said. "I haven't eaten very much chocolate pudding for a long, long time."

I surveyed her trim figure, smart and svelte in plain gray suit and white silk blouse. "Surely, you don't have to diet," I remarked.

"Well, I do and I don't," she said. "I don't diet at all when I am working because I use up so much energy then. But when I am not working—well, there isn't anything like chocolate pudding on my menus."

"What do you eat when you are being careful of your diet?" I asked her.

Joan laughed again. "Would you like a complete menu for the day?" she teased.

"I would indeed!"

"All right. Hot water and lemon juice when I first wake up. Coffee and fruit juice for breakfast. For lunch, health wafers and a mixed salad. For dinner a thin soup, meat, two vegetables, and sometimes a salad."

"Don't you ever 'break over' and eat cake or candy or other tabu things, promising yourself you'll make up for it later?"

Just then we were interrupted. They called Joan back on the set for another shot. As she moved away, she smiled over her shoulder at me. "No," she said in answer to my question, "not ever . . ."

Well, I have known Joan Crawford for a long time, and I know that is true. I know she keeps all promises to herself; that she does not make excuses to herself. I know she maps out a certain program of procedure for each day and that she sticks to it.

Now, to eat certain things and to refuse other, no matter how tempting they are, takes will power. But such is her habit of doing what she says she will that it never occurs to her to "break over."

THE rest of her program for maintaining physical well-being is the same. She has set apart a certain period in her day to swim or to take other healthful exercise and she does it. She knows she requires a certain amount of sleep in order to look and feel her

Charm Secrets of Hollywood Mothers

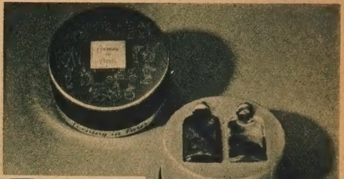
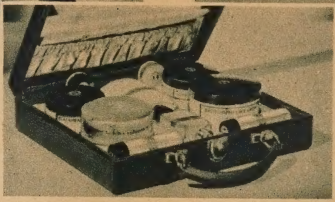
An unusual Mother's Day gift is a set of Violet Sec Dusting powder and Eau de Cologne by Richard Hudnut. Any modern mother would be delighted with such a gift



There is secret, seductive charm galore hidden in the Bourjois offering — Evening in Paris and Springtime in Paris perfume, with delicately scented powder



For mother, or daughter, Helena Rubinstein's Stowaway Kit is ideal for traveling day to care for their hair, skin and nails, to take healthful exercise as figure insurance and to freshen up their wardrobes. Otherwise, they are making the mechanics of housekeeping more important than the fundamentals of their own health and attractiveness.

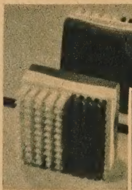
If you are a mother, I hope you will regard all this as sincere advice rather than criticism; and if you are the daughter of a mother who "doesn't care how she looks," I hope you will start a campaign to get her out of that mental rut. You'll find that a little coaxing now and then, a little persuasion in the shape of beauty aids, and an appeal to her devotion will work wonders. . . . Mothers are usually pretty weak in daughter's hands, provided the girl shows tact and understanding.

NOW that Mother's Day is almost here, you ought to plan on getting your mother a gift that will be personal and a bit frivolous, yet practical, too, to coax her into growing young again. (Don't make the sad mistake of giving her a new electric iron or draperies for the living room!) And what could fit that description better than toiletries?

For instance, there's that gift set of Violet Sec Dusting Powder in a pale violet metal box and Violet Sec Eau de Cologne made by Richard Hudnut. The tall, graceful bottle, as you can see in the illustration, has an atomizer top to speed application for busy women.

Violets are so popular this Spring, what with clusters of them on lapels and hats, that this set assumes a seasonal smartness. And it's ideal for mothers who have a firm conviction that more seductive scents should be left for their daughters! The box in which the gift set comes is nicely decorated with an old-fashioned bouquet of violets and the inscription, "To Mother." The set costs only $3—and if your mother becomes devoted to the violet fragrance (as she undoubtedly will) you can buy her other Hudnut toiletries with the same Violet Sec perfume—toilet water, face powder, sachet, bath salts, talcum or soap.

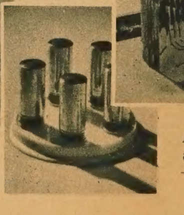
If you have a good job and a mother who likes to visit her relatives, you could scarcely find a lovelier gift for her than the $10.50 Stowaway Kit made by Helena Rubinstein and filled to the brim with ten of her nicest beauty aids. The only objection to this kit as a Mother's



A Kent brush is ideal for for hands and nails

Right, above: Luxor Hand Cream will beautify the hands of mother and daughter alike

Pretty, vivacious eyes benefit by use of cleansing and refreshing Murine



Left, above: Mothers and daughters of every type are pleased with Tattoo lipstick

An important aid to beauty —Campana Dreskin

Every woman can insure personal daintiness with Ultra Dew, Instant Dew or Dew Creme Deodorant

Day gift is that you will never be able to leave it alone, unless your mother hides it or buys you another one!

It's light and easy to carry, and small enough to be tucked away in a suitcase, if you like. The covering is of cowhide grain fabric in black or brown and on the inside cover are a large mirror and a roomy pocket for a comb, hairpins and tissues. Tucked neatly into an enamel tray are the following Rubinstein beautifiers: Pasteurized Face Cream, Youthifying Tissue Cream, Herbal Muscle Oil, Skin Toning Lotion, Blackhead and Open Pore Paste, Town and Country Make-up Film, Complexion Powder, Rouge En Creme, Hand Lotion and Eyelash Grower and Darkener. The preparations can be selected to suit dry, oily or normal skin conditions, of course.

If your mother is young and chic of her own accord, she'd adore that full size box of Bourjois Evening in Paris

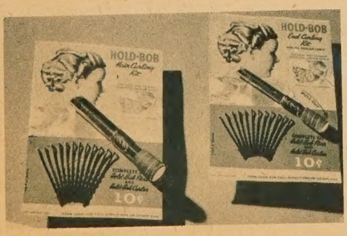
Maybelline Mascara, an ideal aid to alluring eyes, may be refilled economically



Women of all ages have found that Hold-Bob Curling Kits are ideal for flattering roll curls

Every woman should make this "Armhole Odor" Test

If you deodorize only—because it is easy and quick—you will always have an unpleasant, stale "armhole odor"—test yourself tonight by smelling your dress at the armhole

THE more fastidious you are, the more surprised and shocked you may be when you realize that you cannot prevent "armhole odor" unless your underarm is kept dry as well as sweet.

Tonight, as soon as you take off your dress, smell the fabric under the arm. No matter how careful you are about deodorizing your underarm, you may find that your dress carries the embarrassing odor of stale perspiration.

This is bound to happen if you merely deodorize. Creams and sticks are not made to stop perspiration. They do not keep the underarm dry, so perspiration collects and dries on the fabric of your dress.

And the very next time you wear that dress, the warmth of your body brings out an unpleasant, stale odor.

Only one way to be SURE

Women who care deeply about good grooming know that there is no short cut to true underarm daintiness. They insist on the complete protection of Liquid Odorono.

WOMEN who want to be sure their dresses are free from "armhole odor" gently close the underarm pores with Liquid Odorono.

With Odorono, not even the slightest drop of moisture can collect on your dress to spoil the pleasant impression that you would otherwise make.

Odorono's action is entirely safe . . . ask your doctor. It works by gently closing the pores in that little hollow of the underarm. Perspiration is merely diverted to less confined parts of the body where it may evaporate freely and inoffensively.

No more ruined frocks

It takes a little longer to use Odorono, but it is well worth your while. In the end you save, not only embarrassment but your lovely clothes as well! You do away forever with those horrible underarm stains that even the cleaner cannot remove, that can ruin expensive frocks and coat linings in just one day's wearing. And there is no grease to stick to your clothes and make them messy.

Odorono comes in two strengths. Regular Odorono (Ruby colored) need be used only twice a week. Instant Odorono (Colorless) is for especially sensitive skin or emergency use—to be used daily or every other day. On sale at all toilet-goods counters.

If you want to feel the utter security and poise that Odorono brings, send for the two sample vials and leaflet on complete underarm dryness offered below.

IN BETWEEN other activities will be a trip through Beverly Hills with guides to point out the homes of famous Hollywood people. All this entertainment in Hollywood provides the high point of the two weeks vacation, but the remainder of the journey is almost equally as exciting.

On the way to Hollywood the Movieland Tour goes through the heart of Ranier National Park, provides motor trips through Seattle, San Francisco's Chinatown and many other points of unusual interest. The special train will carry only two hundred persons, which means that anyone planning to go must make an early reservation. If, by chance, any who cannot join the July 19th tour, has an opportunity for a later vacation, an equally interesting tour called The Movieland Special will begin on August 9th. Universal studios will be hosts to the second tour. Fill in the coupon below.

Face Powder containing a test flacon of Evening in Paris perfume and one of Springtime in Paris. Bourjois advises Springtime in Paris as a sparkling daytime scent and Evening in Paris as a more alluring, mysterious fragrance for "after five" functions. The face powder, delicately scented with the evening perfume, comes in ten flattering shades. This triple-threat gift costs only $1.10.

NATURALLY, the tasks of dishwashing and cleaning that fall to a mother's lot, make it hard for her to keep her hands and nails looking well, but if she has the proper hand-beauty aids, she can defeat the effects of housework. Brushes for scrubbing stains and embedded dirt from fingers and nails are certainly part of the proper equipment. And one of the cleverest I've encountered is the new Berkeley Square Hand and Nail Brush made by the famous London firm of Kent. Only two inches square, it has bristles half white and half black; the black, slightly stiffer, are for the nails, and the white for the hands. This two-way brush costs $2 but its sturdy construction warrants the price. The bristles are from Siberian boars and are set firmly in bright-colored moulded backs—white combined with sapphire, emerald, oxblood, flame and black.

When you present the hand and nail brush as a Mother's Day gift, don't forget to include a hand emollient, to keep the skin lubricated and white. I can recommend Luxor Hand Cream, in that simple green and white jar with the Spring flowers beside it. In addition to its softening oils, it contains a delicate perfume that is also very lasting. A few quick motions, and Luxor Hand Cream is spread smoothly all over the hands, leaving not the least suggestion of stickiness. The jar illustrated costs only fifty cents.

You may have to break down lifelong prejudices to get your mother to use a soupcon of eye make-up, but that's no sign she doesn't need it! Eyelashes and brows have a tendency to become grey and colorless after forty—but this can be remedied by mascara artfully and sparingly applied. The application of Maybelline (the grandpappy of all modern mascaras) is easy to master, even after forty, for its consistency can be controlled by the amount of water used on the brush. The latest improvement in Maybelline (they've been improving it constantly for sixteen years) is refills for the scarlet and gold metal case. Now, instead of buying another seventy-five cent box when you've used all your Maybelline, you can buy a thirty-five cent refill with a new brush and tray. Illustrated in this article are the metal box, the carton in which the refill is sold, and the refill itself.

Whether your mother has blonde, brunette, red or grey hair, she will find one of the five shades of Tattoo Lipstick becoming—and so will you! The permanence of this lipstick is pretty universally known, the case much admired and the moderate price (a dollar) lauded; but you may not have known that there

the Linit Beauty Bath provides Instant Results

The alert girl or woman today in her quest for beauty, through the cultivation of charm, personality and good health, should not overlook the first requisite of loveliness—a perfect skin.

The smart woman will be glad to know of this simple way to attain a beautiful skin—the way so many fastidious women of today are acquiring it.

One of the most remarkable skin beauty aids is the Linit Beauty Bath. Imagine stepping into a bath as soft and luxurious as rich cream, bathing as usual and, after drying, finding that your skin is soft and satiny smooth as a rose petal.

To enjoy the refreshing luxury of the Linit Beauty Bath, you merely dissolve some Linit in a tub of warm water and bathe. It is such a simple means of keeping the skin alluringly soft, that there is no excuse for any woman, who takes pride in her personal charm, to have anything but a clear, soft, smooth skin.

Once you try Linit, you will be happy to make it the daily feature of your bath. Parents will be glad to know that Linit is a valuable aid in bathing the baby and children, for in many cases of irritation the Linit bath is most soothing to the skin.

YOUR DAINTY UNDERTHINGS will be refreshed and restored to their original loveliness when laundered with Linit. Just follow the simple directions on the package.

I Knew Claudette Colbert When—

and stammered a reply which was really a dismissal of the subject.

THE Claudette Colbert of ten years ago was naive—timid and very schoolgirlish. In her dressing room at the Paramount Studios, a few days ago, I reminded her of this.

"You are the only one in Hollywood who knows that and I wish you would tell them here at the Studio because they will not believe me," she said.

"Have you changed so, Claudette Colbert?"

"Anything can happen in ten years and a great deal has happened to me. Yes, I have changed—I had to and every one who gets to the top of this profession, does so at a certain sacrifice. I suppose one would say I contributed my good disposition and my blushes to the altar of fame. But it is worth it. I know that I have become hard; I know that I am not always agreeable. You cannot battle your way up to all this by saying a docile 'yes, thank you,' to everyone who has a part in your career."

Miss Colbert spread her hands in dramatic gesture which embraced the blue and silver of her dressing room, the waiting town car and chauffeur outside and the submitted scripts on her desk.

"I took your advice years ago and applied for a small part in a Broadway dramatic production and no one was more surprised than I when they accepted me. And I was glad to give up the French lessons. As a matter of fact, I was not a good teacher. Although we always spoke French in my home, I was not prepared to teach it and each night I had to study the verbs and grammar harder than my pupils. At least that was one joke on the 'Madam who was seldom home' and who considered me an expert French teacher."

One quality is outstanding in Miss Colbert's character today; appreciation of the success she has had. When she came out of school and found herself in the position of having to make a livelihood, she began a period of struggle and discouragement. But she had determination and that determination is what she terms 'hardness.' If she does not forget the snows of New York streets—the doors of its residences closing on her and the whimsical fads of rich women—it is because she wishes to place a value on her station of security today.

"It is the French in me which has planned that security," she says laughingly," and it is the French in me which causes the rub when I make new contracts. If the philosophy here is 'each man for himself' and it seems to be that, then I have tried to handle my career accordingly."

'And without doubt, you have succeeded," I said.

"So they say, but there is a long road ahead for me—and a time is coming soon, perhaps, when the public will prefer the blond beauty of a continental star or the allure of a dusky Hawaian maid—you can't tell. But, although I won't relinquish my stardom with the sweetness of ten years ago, I hope to accept it as fate, and retire to—"

"New York?"

"No, no! Hollywood—always Hollywood."

"That's true," I said, "Now you are a bride in a new home—Mrs. Pressman!"

She lowered the big brown eyes and blushed.

"You are blushing, cherie," I said.

She rose to her feet—laughed loudly and long into the mirror of her dressing table.

"I am," she cried, "really, I am. Be sure and tell them."

"Tell who?"

"Everybody—anybody," she took my hand. "Seriously, though—perhaps—perhaps I am not as hard as I thought."

"Claudette Colbert, you are the little French girl I knew ten years ago—you could only be, as you were then, fascinatingly beautiful and keenly intelligent."

"Merci bien, can I drive you anywhere?"

We walked out to her car—it was late, and she still had many things to do.

"I am happy," she said, quite unexpectedly, and then laughed.

I left the slender, hatless girl—her hair wind-blown—standing beside her car, in the dusk.

that," said Mr. Lasky. "It certainly accents the importance of trade-marks. By the way, our contest is bringing in thousands of suggestions, they tell me."

He was referring to the Thousand Dollar Trade-Mark Contest, sponsored by Fawcett Publications, Inc., which is now running in SCREEN BOOK, Hollywood, Motion Picture, Screen Play and Movie Classic. The purpose of this competition is to get an unusual trade-emblem for Pickford-Lasky Production, Inc., the company organized recently with Jesse L. Lasky as president and Miss Pickford as vice president.

"You'd be surprised," Mr. Lasky continued, "how all are growing trade-mark conscious on the set. Even though they cannot compete, Francis Lederer, Ida Lupino, Hugh Herbert—in fact everyone in One Rainy Afternoon, is trying to work out a trade-mark, just for the amusement of it."

Earlier in the day, Mr. Lasky had told me how the old Keystone Comedies trade-mark originated. It was back in the summer of 1912, at Luechow's Restaurant in New York City. Kessel and Beauman, then reaching out for power in the picture industry, had lured Mack Sennett—future King of Slapstick—away from Biograph and tucked him under their production wing.

Kessel, on the point of leaving for Philadelphia, drew a Pennsylvania Railroad time-table from his pocket to see when his train left.

Sennett took one look at the time-table and exploded, "I've got it, I've got it!"

"Got what?" exclaimed Kessel in amazement.

"The trade-mark for our new comedy

Robert Taylor and Janet Gaynor were seen together at the Screen Actor's Guild Ball, but both deny that there is a romance on company!" Mack pointed to the Keystone emblem on the time-table which the "Pennsy" had made famous among travelers. "If it's good enough for a big railroad, it's good enough for us."

His partners agreed and thus the Keystone Comedies—one of the most popular brands of pictures in the days of the silents—got their name and symbol.

Judges of the trade-mark contest will be Miss Pickford, Mr. Lasky and Capt. Roscoe Fawcett. They unite in urging all prospective contestants who have not yet submitted their emblem ideas to get busy and do so at once. Every mail is bringing in its volume and the judges are kept busy grading them, as they are received. An unusual number received at the last moment will only delay the final decision.

The simple rules governing the contest follow:

1. The contest opens February 1 and closes April 15, 1936.
2. All persons are eligible to compete, regardless of whether they are subscribers or regular readers, except employees of Fawcett Publications, Inc., Motion Picture Publications, Inc., and Pickford-Lasky Productions, Inc., and their families.
3. It is not necessary to submit a drawing of your suggested trade-mark, if you describe it adequately in words.
4. Do not submit fanciful or decorated designs.
5. Winners will be announced as soon after the contest closes as possible. Watch this magazine for the exact date.
6. In case of ties, duplicate prizes will be awarded.
7. Address your entries to Pickford-Lasky Contest Editor, SCREEN BOOK Magazine, 7046 Hollywood Blvd., Hollywood, Calif.
8. The decision of the judges will be final. No entries will be returned.
9. Prize-winners agree to sign over to Pickford-Lasky Productions, Inc., all rights and title to winning entries, and to accept the prize-money as full compensation for the same.

The thousand dollars appropriated by Pickford-Lasky Productions will be divided into six prizes—five of $100 each to winners of the individual Fawcett magazine contests, and the grand prize of $500 for the best trade-mark of all. This makes $600 for the Grand Prize Winner!

What makes a girl "Click"?

JOAN is pretty. She is smart. And she is asked everywhere.

Barbara looks at Joan with secret envy. For Barbara, too, is pretty. And she is smart. But evening after evening, she is left at home alone.

Why? What makes one girl "click" socially and another fail, when both are equally good-looking?

The truth is, Barbara could be just as popular as Joan if it were not that she is careless—careless about something no girl can afford to overlook.

You can't blame people for avoiding the girl or woman who is careless about underarm perspiration odor. It's too unpleasant to tolerate in anyone, no matter how pretty she may be.

There's really no excuse for it these days when Mum makes it so easy to keep the underarms fresh, free from every trace of odor.

Just half a minute is all you need to use Mum. Then you're safe for the whole day!

Use it any time—after dressing, as well as before. It's harmless to clothing. It's soothing to the skin, too—so soothing you can use it right after shaving your underarms.

Depend upon Mum to prevent all unpleasant perspiration odor, without preventing perspiration itself. Use it daily, and no one will ever have this reason to avoid you! Bristol-Myers, Inc., 630 Fifth Avenue, New York.

are five luscious shades, the latest one a warm, thrilling red (that stays red) called Hawaiian. Coral is nice for redheads, Exotic for medium types, Natural for brunettes and Pastel for grey or white-haired types.

I don't believe it's too early to call your attention to several preparations that will help you to make the summer months real beauty months. In the photo on page 69 containing two bottles and a round white jar, you see three reliable perspiration correctives—Ultra Dew, which checks perspiration and gives protection for several days; Instant Dew which gives shorter protection but is quicker to use and Dew Creme Deodorant, which deodorizes but does not retard perspiration. Moderate in price and attractive in packaging, these three Marion Lambert products merit a sheaf of editorial orchids!

Campana's Dreskin, the invigorating skin freshener and cleanser, has a de luxe new container, shown in the photo. This octagonal bottle of sparkling, crystal-like glass has depressions in the center (pinch bottle fashion) which enable you to grasp it firmly. A good idea, for it would indeed be a shame to break this bottle! Dreskin, as I have said before, is unusually nice in summer, because it leaves the skin so cool and fresh and reduces large pores, which always seem more apparent in warm weather. The de luxe size costs $1.

WHEN summer heat begins to play havoc with your end curls, you'll appreciate my telling you in advance about the convenient new Hold-Bob Hair Curling Kits seen on page 69. There are two different size curlers, one large enough for roll curls high on the head, another smaller, for end curls. Each one comes mounted on an instruction card containing twelve Hold-Bob Bob Pins, which are used to secure the hair after it has been rolled up on the curler. Rubber ends on these metal curlers prevent them from slipping out of your fingers. Only ten cents a card for these handy little grooming gadgets.

Murine is also much appreciated when one spends lots of time out of doors, collecting dirt and dust along with suntan. This excellent lotion is safe and sanitary to use for it comes in a dropper bottle. A drop or two in each eye after a crying spell, a tennis game or a long ride in somebody's rumble seat—and your abused eyes will be cleared and rested immediately.

the picture's honors belongs to a curious little monkey named "Beppo." Critical Comment—All around, the picture is certain to please, but the more critical moviegoer may find the story a bit on the order of hodge-podge.—Produced by Pandro S. Berman for RKO-Radio.

Trail of the Lonesome Pine

Drama—Those who have a yen for simple, highly emotional drama will find this story of feuding mountaineers appealing, particularly because it is filmed in Technicolor, which for the first time adds rather than detracts from a picture's entertainment value. The plot concerns the Tollivers and the Fallins in whose hills thar is more lead than gold. Henry Fonda is Dave Tolliver, pledged to marry his cousin, Sylvia Sidney. Into their simple lives comes Fred MacMurray, a mining engineer. Sylvia falls hard for MacMurray, bringing out the jealousy of her mountain swain, and bitterness mounts rapidly to the real climax in which little Spanky MacFarland is killed when a locomotive on which he is playing is dynamited sky high by a hate-crazed mountaineer. Ashamed of killing the child, the clans murder only two more before the film ends on a bleak note with a simple-minded backwoods crooner singing his lament into a Technicolor sky. Critical Comment—On its debit side, the film has several moments in which emotional touches are overplayed to the point of being ridiculous. To its credit, the picture has several hair-raising moments that will excite even the most critical moviegoer. Too much cannot be said for the color, which is easy on the eyes and in itself recommendation enough for the picture. Spanky MacFarland, Fred Stone and Beulah Bondi give the best performnaces.—Produced by Walter Wanger for Paramount.

Rhodes, the Empire Builder

Authentic Drama, in which Walter Huston interprets the life of one of England's greatest men. Cecil Rhodes is a young man in the Kimberly diamond fields in South Africa, told by a physician that he has but six months to live. Through strength of will he lives to consolidate the diamond interests and later becomes Prime Minister of England. His eventual death is the picture's climax. Critical Comment—The film may seem a little slow for those who demand romance and action in every foot of celluloid, but it is a dignified, valuable addition to important cinema achievements. Walter Huston does a magnificent job, ably seconded by Oscar Homolka and Basil Sidney.—Produced by G-B.

Prisoner of Shark Island

Drama—Because it is masterfully directed and well-acted by a talented cast with Warner Baxter as the star, The Prisoner of Shark Island stands out as an above-average picture. For those who like a change of pace, the film, being heavily dramatic and almost dismal in tone, should please. It is the story of Dr. Samuel A. Mudd, a country

Jean Harlow Answers 10 Disturbing Questions

girl's gown and how attractive she looked but when asked what color it was, they had only a very vague idea. I believe, however, that most men are rather partial to black or white for evening."

6. What particular feminine habits or mannerisms do men find most annoying?

"From my own observation and from what I have heard men say, I think that affectations of manner or speech, pretending enthusiasms which you do not feel and adapting attitudes which are insincere are the things that men find most annoying. Also I believe that most men are annoyed by the girl who is always trying to be 'coy'."

7. If a girl enjoys being with a man, should she let him know it? Or is it better technique to pretend to be a little indifferent?

"I believe that all men like responsive girls. If you have enjoyed an evening spent with a particular man I think he will appreciate it if you say quite frankly and unaffectedly that you have had a good time. This does not mean that you have to act as though your entire happiness depends upon his proximity. But to pretend indifference, as a means of concealing your interest, is a rather childish technique."

8. Is it ever a good policy to call a man on the telephone or is it wiser to let him do the telephoning?

"This depends entirely on whether you have known the man for some time or whether he is someone you have just met. To telephone a man whom you have just met, unless you have a legitimate reason for calling him, such as extending an invitation to a party, is likely to put you in the rôle of the aggressor and I have yet to meet a man who likes aggressive women. When it comes to the matter of telephoning, my advice is: Be sensible. It is never good policy to call a man at his office or place of business unless you are calling him for some specific reason, and even then you should make your conversation as short as possible."

9. What is the greatest error the average girl makes in her dealings with men?

"Making mountains out of molehills! Making an 'issue' out of something which is really inconsequential. If a girl would stop and count one hundred before making a big fuss over some really trival matter, she will usually discover that she is merely dramatizing an unimportant something which doesn't deserve the fuss she has created."

10. If a man has some particular habit or mannerism that is annoying to a girl, should she tell him about it—or just suffer in silence?

"If the mannerism is so annoying that she doesn't enjoy going out with him, then I think she should either call it to his attention or else cease accepting invitations from him. If she cares enough for the man to want to continue going out with him, then I think she should make up her mind to forget about the annoying mannerisms. After all, she may have some little mannerisms which annoy him. If a girl really and truly cares for a man she will like him in spite of his mannerisms or eccentricities. If they annoy her too much, then she can't really think as much of him as she imagines she does."

Next time you feel yourself growing careless, why not re-read the answers Jean has given you? Do you admire your own habits? Aren't there one or two little mannerisms that you know should be erased? Put a question or two to the man you like best, discover his reaction to your clothes and your make-up and your general ways. You may receive some surprises but if you accept them in the right way, they will help you to improve on the girl you are.

Hollywood Home Hints

- Ever try Drano on that balky sink? After all there is nothing quite so irritating as a clogged drain pipe in the sink, and it is unsanitary, too. The dirt that is clogging the drain does not allow the waste water to go completely through the trap and leaves the water in there to harbor germs. One application of Drano will end all your worries about the drain pipe. You can almost see Drano work. As soon as it is applied it starts work on the offending clog and in a few minutes the pipe is clean again.

- Here's a furniture tip. Never store anything away without first seeing that it is properly covered and, in the case of davenports and upholstered chairs, that it is properly moth proofed. Why not go up to the attic right now and check on your stored away furniture? While you are there, look around and see if you have a broken piece stored away. If you should have a piece broken or with loose rungs, a box of Holdems is all you need. Holdems are little pieces of metal with barbs on either side to hold the loose rung in place in its socket and are as simple as that to install. Holdems last forever.

- "I wouldn't attempt to bake anything unless I knew the exact temperature of my oven or, better still the temperature of that which I am baking," says Binnie Barnes. If you ever had a roast beef dinner at Binnie's, you would realize she knows what she is talking about. Here's the secret—it's a little gadget called the Taylor Roast Meat Thermometer. It takes all the worry out of cooking and at the same time, allows you to keep things on top the oven at an even temperature.

A FEW WEEKS AGO I WAS ASHAMED OF MY FIGURE _I WAS SO SKINNY
Posed by professional model

THEN
LOOK AT ME, I JUST TOOK IRONIZED YEAST
OH, IF I COULD ONLY GAIN WEIGHT AND LOOK BETTER
NOW
YOU'RE THE MOST GORGEOUS GIRL ON THE BEACH SINCE YOU'VE GAINED WEIGHT

NEW IRONIZED YEAST OFTEN ADDS 10 TO 25 LBS. —in a few weeks

EVEN if you never could gain an ounce, remember thousands have put on solid, naturally attractive flesh with these new, easy-to-take little Ironized Yeast tablets—in just a few weeks!

Not only has this new discovery brought normal, good-looking pounds, but also naturally clear skin, freedom from indigestion and constipation, new pep.

Scientists recently discovered that thousands of people are thin and rundown for the single reason that they do not get enough Vitamin B and iron in their daily food. Now the richest known source of this marvelous body-building, digestion-strengthening Vitamin B is cultured ale yeast. By a new process the finest imported cultured ale yeast is now concentrated 7 times, making it 7 times more powerful. Then it is combined with 3 kinds of blood-building iron in pleasant little tablets known as Ironized Yeast tablets.

If you, too, need these vital elements to build you up, get these new "7-power" Ironized Yeast tablets from your druggist today. Then, day after day as you take them, watch flat chest develop and skinny limbs round out to natural attractiveness. Constipation and indigestion from the same cause vanish, skin clears to normal beauty —you're an entirely new person.

Try it—guaranteed

No matter how skinny and rundown you may be, try these new Ironized Yeast tablets just a short time, and note the marvelous change. See if they don't build you up in just a few weeks, as they have thousands of others. If not delighted with the benefits of the very first package, your money instantly refunded.

Special FREE offer!

To start you building up your health right away, we make this absolutely FREE offer. Purchase a package of Ironized Yeast tablets at once, cut out the seal on the box and mail it to us with a clipping of this paragraph. We will send you a fascinating new book on health, "New Facts About Your Body." Remember, results guaranteed with the very first package—or money refunded. At all druggists. New Film Notes

A. M. Also, one white, lactable, tractable cow. The underscoring was Mr. von Sternberg's.

But, once they get beyond the milking song, I think you're due for a swell piece of entertainment, what with Franchot Tone and Victor Jory supporting Grace Moore in one of the best light operas yet to be filmed. The plot is rather usual; the King about to be roped in on a loveless marriage who falls in love with a charming girl who seems to be a commoner but ends up being a princess in disguise. However, it gives ample opportunity for loads of color and a half dozen swell songs, some classical, some comparatively new. Unless I miss my guess from the singing I've heard in the picture, you'll like this offering—even if certain members of the cast do wish that von Sternberg wouldn't go in for so darned much realism.

ANTHONY ADVERSE

A Great Studio Produces a Great Story

YOU have to hand it to Freres Warner! They do take on big jobs. As a story, Anthony Adverse was a gag for months on account of its unending length. Well, producing it seemed almost the same kind of a proposition. Out here in Hollywood we all began feeling the same way toward it that Broadway once felt toward Abie's Irish Rose; it was getting to be a permanent institution.

I was on the set one day, talking to Mervyn LeRoy, the director, and asked him what had prompted him in taking on such a tremendous and very long job. He looked at me for a long time in silence, then let go, nervously, energetically with both barrels.

"Anthony Adverse is the story of a boy born out of wedlock as the result of one of the most beautiful and tragic love stories ever written. He is adopted from a foundling's home by a rich merchant who turns out to be his own grandfather. He finds love affairs and adventures in every corner of the world. Wherever he goes dramatic happenings color his life. His only real love is his first one with the beautiful Angela. He lives with her for a single night and adventure again calls him to the far corners of the earth. When he returns still greater drama unfolds in his contact with the Napoleonic court when he realizes that Angela is now Napoleon's mistress—and then meets his own illegitimate son by Angela and takes the youngster with him to even greater adventures.

"The publicity men can talk about it being a sensational best seller, and artistic masterpiece and a literary milestone, but Jack Warner and I like it for the same reason—because it's perfect picture material! Put Fred March in that part, boy, and you've got entertainment plus!"

With that he rocketed away intent upon detail on the set. This one rather amused me; the talented director and a live-stock specialist were intent upon trying to train a goose not to hiss and make passes at March's legs as he walked through the square at Livorno. Directly across the big stage another Adverse company was at work on another set. Young Anthony, played by a newcomer to the screen,

Fredric March as he appears in the title rôle of Anthony Adverse, one of the most beautiful and tragic love stories ever written

Billy Mauch (not March), was going through a scene with an assistant director. Mervyn hopped over there for a second and was gone to a third stage where he had another assistant rehearsing a mob scene of African slaves in a Gold Coast town. To watch him at work was like watching a chess prodigy playing three different games at once against three different opponents. Between the three companies he has a cast of ninety-eight speaking parts to watch headed by the inimitable March, Olivia de Havilland and Anita Louise.

Anita, incidentally, had her first rôle on the screen as a child playing March's daughter. In Adverse she plays the part of March's mother!

But, while on child actors, don't miss this young Billy Mauch. He's ten and a twin—but a twin whose own mother can't tell him from Bobby when they're both in make-up. Billy, in fact, when he became annoyed with having to take Latin lessons for one scene, called his twin who is also his stand-in and sent Bobby in to take the lessons for him! No one ever tumbled to the deception until Billy was called on set and didn't know his speech. It then developed that half the time the wrong boy was acting and the other one standing-in and vice versa! . . . But if the camera and Mervyn LeRoy didn't spot the difference, neither will you—or I!

THE STORY OF LOUIS PASTEUR—Paul Muni in a powerful portrayal of Pasteur, the great French doctor who struggled against tremendous odds in his fight against disease and death.—Warners.

MODERN TIMES—Charlie Chaplin pits himself against the confusion of this modern age in a grand, if somewhat out-dated comedy. Paulette Goddard scores a hit.—United Artists.

CEILING ZERO—Behind the scenes in the lives of commercial flyers, with James Cagney, Pat O'Brien and Isabel Jewell in perfect characterizations.—Warners.

MUTINY ON THE BOUNTY—A bloody page from the annals of British naval history, so perfectly filmed that it cannot help but be chosen as one of the year's best. Cast includes Charles Laughton, Clark Gable and Franchot Tone.—Metro.

ROSE MARIE—Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy warble their way through a colorful musical romance with Eddy as the Northwest Mountie.—Metro.

PETRIFIED FOREST—Leslie Howard and Bette Davis in the screen version of a tremendously successful stage play.—Warners.

THE MILKY WAY—Harold Lloyd as the milk man turned prize fighter. Top flight comedy.—Paramount.

★★★½

ANYTHING GOES—Pleasing musical comedy with Bing Crosby and Ethel Merman. Charlie Ruggles superb in the rôle of a gangster disguised as a clergyman.—Paramount.

CAPTAIN JANUARY—Shirley Temple adopted by a lonely lighthouse keeper who helps her dodge the truant officer. Dancing of Shirley and Buddy Ebsen is outstanding.—Twentieth Century-Fox.

THE LADY CONSENTS—Ann Harding as the discarded wife who fights for her husband and wins him back.—Radio.

KLONDIKE ANNIE—Mae West bumps off a Chinaman and turns fugitive. Victor McLaglen and Phillip Reed are the men in the case. Lusty wisecracks.—Paramount.

DESIRE—Dietrich's best in some time. As a jewel thief she gets Gary Cooper into plenty of trouble.—Paramount.

NEXT TIME WE LOVE—Plenty of suffering in this, but more for the cast than for the audience. Margaret Sullavan is the career woman who seldom sees her husband, but gets around to it just before he dies.—Paramount.

KING OF THE DAMNED—Problem of how well prisoners can be treated, with Conrad Veidt and Helen Vinson.—GB.

THE SINGING KID—Al Jolson as the entertainer, jilted by Broadway, who fights his way back.—Warners.

EVERY SATURDAY NIGHT—Jed Prouty, Spring Byington and June Lang in a pleasing domestic drama.—Twentieth Century-Fox.

MESSAGE TO GARCIA—John Boles in a screen version of the famous old story, with Wallace Beery and Barbara Stanwyck.—Twentieth Century-Fox.

DANCING FEET—Poorly constructed musical, but good performances by Eddie Nugent, Vince Barnett, Isabel Jewell and Joan Marsh.—Republic.

Victor McLaglen and Mae West in a scene from Klondike Annie, Mae's lusty, all-wisecracking comedy

GIVE US THIS NIGHT—Proving that Gladys Swarthout has great possibilities in a straight rôle, but not in a picture about a singing fisherman, particularly when the fisherman happens to be Jan Kiepura.—Paramount.

THE HOUSE OF A THOUSAND CANDLES—Story about an international spy ring. Exciting moments and a good performance by Irving Pichel.—Republic.

HELL SHIP MORGAN—Depicting the thrills of tuna fishing through a nice little story interpreted by George Bancroft, Ann Sothern and Victor Jory.—Columbia.

BOULDER DAM—A boy who has leanings toward cowardice meets a girl who straightens him out. Building of Boulder Dam used as background, with Ross Alexander, Patricia Ellis and Lyle Talbot in the cast.—Warner.

YOU MAY BE NEXT—G-Man story with a new twist about gangsters who kidnap a radio engineer, forcing him to broadcast interference against important programs with the idea of collecting ransom. Ann Sothern and Lloyd Nolan.—Columbia.

THE MUSIC GOES 'ROUND—Story about a big time actor who gets mixed up in small time show business and falls for a leading lady. Film features the 'Round and 'Round song, with Harry Richman and Rochelle Hudson heading the cast.—Columbia.

WALKING DEAD—Another Karloff spook film. This time Boris is a musician, electrocuted and brought back to life to scare the daylights out of the cast and audience.—Warner.

HER MASTER'S VOICE—Cute little comedy about a marriage that displeases everybody but the bride and groom, made laughable plus by Edward Everett Horton and Peggy Conklin.—Paramount.

MUSS 'EM UP—Mystery which begins with the killing of a dog and ends when two chauffeurs bite the dust. Preston Foster and Margaret Callahan.—Radio.

GENTLE JULIA—Jane Withers prevents the city slicker from taking a sweetheart away from the small town Romeo she adores.—Twentieth Century-Fox.

THREE GODFATHERS—The story of three desert rats who adopt a baby. Chester Morris, Lewis Stone and Walter Brennan in the cast.—Metro.

THE LEATHERNECKS HAVE LANDED—Lew Ayres as the fighting marine who can't keep out of trouble. Isabel Jewel is the girl who saves him.—Republic.

ROAD GANG—Grim story of prison brutality with Donald Woods as the young journalist who is railroaded to jail.—Warners.

SILLY BILLIES—Not much to this Wheeler and Woolsey comedy which has the pair as traveling dentists. Gags are weak and the story mediocre.—Radio.

PREVIEW MURDER MYSTERY—Horror murders backstage in a movie studio. Nice scenery but plot unconvincing. Reginald Denny, Frances Drake and Gail Patrick.—Paramount.

F-MAN—Comic story about a soda jerker who turns G-Man. Cast includes Jack Haley, Grace Bradley and Onslow Stevens.—Paramount.

SHALL I ADDRESS HIM "DEAR MR. MORGAN?"
HE MAY THINK YOU FORWARD, JANE. "MY DEAR MR. MORGAN" IS MORE FORMAL.

SOCIAL MISTAKES

That Make a Person Ridiculous

—Princess Rostislav cures them in her new little 20-page booklet "Guide to Correct Social Correspondence"

YOURS TO KEEP—FREE!

Parker gives it solely to introduce Quink, the new quick-drying, pen-cleaning ink!

How should an unmarried girl sign a note to a stranger? To an acquaintance? To an intimate? How should a married woman sign her name? A divorcee? A widow? A gentleman? What salutations and closes are correct? What address on the envelope? What colors of ink are outlawed for social correspondence?

What things must be included in an invitation to a married couple? To a bachelor? In letters of introduction? In congratulations? In notes of thanks? Or from a houseguest? What is omitted from a note of REGRET that should always be in a note of ACCEPTANCE?

Do you write "Warmly," "Hurriedly," or "Cordially yours"? When is it poor taste to include, "I remain" or "Believe me"? When is "Respectfully" NEVER to be written?

Social errors and omissions in correspondence are humiliating, costly, and suggest poor breeding. Write the right thing, in the right way, at the right time. All these courtesies and correct forms, religiously followed by the best social usage, are now explained—with actual examples—in the beautiful Princess Rostislav's "Guide to Correct Social Correspondence."

Here's how to get it, FREE—Simply go to any store that sells ink and for 15c get Parker Qu*ink*—an amazing, new discovery in writing ink. Tear the top flap from the box the bottle comes in. Letter your name and address on the back, PLAINLY. Then mail the box-top to The Parker Pen Company. We'll mail you Princess Rostislav's guide promptly, FREE AND POSTPAID.

But first note this—Qu*ink* is made two ways—(1) WASHABLE, and (2) PERMANENT. WASHABLE Qu*ink*, for home and school, is the only ink that can be spilled SAFELY on hands, clothes, woodwork, or rugs. Soap and water remove it without trace. But PERMANENT Qu*ink* lasts as long as the paper.

Yet both kinds of Qu*ink* cleanse your pen as it writes—a Parker or any other pen. And Qu*ink* will give your writing new distinction. Not watery—but rich and full-bodied, with a brilliancy of color.

Qu*ink* dries ON PAPER so fast you'll throw away your blotters and your present ink. Get Qu*ink* today. Then mail us the box-top for Princess Rostislav's priceless guide. You'll never part with it. The Parker Pen Co., Dept. 717, Janesville, Wisconsin.

The Best GRAY HAIR REMEDY IS MADE AT HOME

YOU can now make at home a better gray hair remedy than you can buy, by following this simple recipe: To half pint of water add one ounce bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and one-fourth ounce of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it yourself at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. Barbo imparts color to streaked, faded or gray hair, makes it soft and glossy and takes years off your looks. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off. Do not be handicapped by gray hair now when it is so economical and easy to get rid of it in your own home.

Poor English!

How much is it costing you in wasted opportunity?

Every day your associates are judging you—by what you say and how you say it! Hazy ideas, ill-chosen words, halting sentences, crude, slovenly speech—these mark a man as loose in thinking. Thoughts clear-cut, words that give true shape and color, sentences aflame with power and originality—these are the things that proclaim ability, that win for their users swift advancement. Stop apologizing for poor English—it's inexcusable! In the quiet of your home—with LaSalle's help—you can learn to speak and write with real distinction, learn to make the words you utter and the letters you compose stamp you as educated, cultured, a power to reckon with in the business world. Complete details in an attractive 32-page book, "Effective Business English," sent you free upon request. Ask for it TODAY.

medico who innocently becomes involved in the assassination of Abraham Lincoln, and for the sin he never committed is sentenced to life imprisonment in America's worst penal institute. His persecution, attempts to escape and final vindication as a result of his heroic battle against the dread "Yellow jack" are simply and realistically told, despite one or two melodramatic moments which might better have been left on the cutting room floor. Lighter moments which are a happy relief to the picture's grey tone are furnished by Claude Gillingwater, the fire-eating rebel grandfather, and Ernest Whitman, the loyal negro servant. Best scene of the picture is the opening shot which shows a mob celebrating the end of the Civil War.—Produced by Darryl Zanuck for Twentieth Century-Fox.

COMEDY — Introducing Irvin S. Cobb as a featured actor for the first time in a pleasing little film story about a retired manufacturer who returns from a vacation to make a comeback in business with his young nephew as a rival. There is also an interesting romance between Norman Foster and Rochelle Hudson. CRITICAL COMMENT—Because Irvin S. Cobb is a humorist and has a likeable, though homely countenance, a comparison with the late Will Rogers is inevitable. On the screen, Cobb lacks the flair for comedy and the ease of manner which characterized Rogers, but he should do well in character rôles if not pushed too suddenly into stardom. Altogether a lively and interesting little feature made worthwhile by the capable direction of James Flood.—Produced by Twentieth Centry-Fox.

complex in the matter of coin flipping. Remember Raft in Scarface? Both George and Clark confess that they do the coin flipping to steady their nerves—and it is a sure cure for that jittery feeling.

JANET GAYNOR and Robert Taylor officially ended their brief romance when Small Town Girl was completed. Inside information is that Janet has always romanced her leading man in every picture on the theory that their love in the screen play would film more like the real thing. If the story is true, Janet gets credit for being a smart young lady.

TULLIO CARMINATI, who played Grace Moore's leading man in One Night of Love was presumed to be making his first screen appearance in that picture. As a matter of record, Carminati was in Hollywood in 1932, playing in five silent pictures. His co-stars were Constance Talmadge, Pola Negri, Florence Vidor and Virginia Valli.

BING CROSBY and Mrs. Bing Crosby anticipate a blessed event! But it's not of the usual sort. The event they are anticipating is that one of Bing's string of horses may win a race before the whole film colony goes broke backing Bing's entries.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

Without Calomel—And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Your whole system is poisoned and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

Laxatives are only makeshifts. A mere bowel movement doesn't get at the cause. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." Harmless, gentle, yet amazing in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name. Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c at all drug stores. © 1931, C.M.Co.

Why It Pays To Copy Joan Crawford

best, and she gets it. Incidentally, another rule of Joan's which any girl in quest of beauty and good health might do well to follow is this:

Leave liquor alone!

Joan never drinks. In a few brief words, she explained why, that day when I watched them film Gorgeous Hussy. "I don't care much for liquor," she said, "and not at all for the after-effects that even the best regulated drinking seems to produce, sometimes . . ."

And that is that. Joan Crawford directs her entire life with the same clear contemplation of what she wants and what she must do to get it; what she does not want and how she must avoid that.

The most glamorous girl in Hollywood. Yet she leads one of the simplest and most wholesome existences! If these pages were reels of film and my typewriter a projecting machine, the pictures of Joan that you would see are these:

Joan, her hair tied up with a ribbon, perhaps, sitting on a stool in front of her victrola, dreaming over her favorite music—the great arias from opera, mostly. Joan in a simple little sports suit driving in her own small car to the top of a high hill, somewhere, to drink in vistas of Southern California beauty. Joan glowing over household affairs with various members of her servants' staff, all of whom adore her. Joan cleaning out her own dresser drawers, completely absorbed in this homely task. Joan curled up in a big chair on the other side of the fireplace from Franchot, reading and studying through many a long, quiet evening.

FRIENDLY, impulsive, sensitive Joan Crawford has made mistakes. She has been hurt—and badly. She has known discouragement. But never has she lost sight of what she wanted from life, nor of the inevitable fact that "where there is a will, there is a way."

"Of course, I fail in what I am trying to do, sometimes," she said to me one day. "But all in all, I believe from my own experience the truth of a certain homely saying I've remembered since I was a child: 'Can't is laziness.' I believe that if you think you can do a thing, then you can. I believe no obstacle is so great it cannot be overcome."

And apropos of this, let me tell you a story about Joan and how, with the very force of her will, she helped one of her best friends to conquer an affliction which was ruining his life.

It was some trouble with his speech, which neither medical science nor his own efforts could remedy, apparently. Then Joan took a hand. She insisted he could overcome the difficulty if he would only have confidence in himself. She kept at him, never accepting his admitted defeat, always urging him to try again. She inspired him with her own confidence until—

He won! He is completely cured, now. And he says with conviction one cannot doubt that he owes it to Joan, the girl who does not know the meaning of the word "can't."

NO ALKALIES FOR ACID INDIGESTION

MILLIONS have found they do not need to drench their stomachs with strong, caustic alkalies. Physicians have said this habit often brings further acid indigestion. So much more safe and sensible to simply carry a roll of Tums in your pocket. Munch 3 or 4 after meals—or whenever troubled by heartburn, gas, sour stomach. Try them when you feel the effects of last night's party, or when you smoke too much. Tums contain a wonderful antacid which neutralizes acid in the stomach, but never over-alkalizes stomach or blood. As pleasant to eat as candy and only 10c at any drug store.

A Valuable Prize For Everyone Who Enters

Can you write a last line to this jingle? It's easy! It's fun! And your "last line" may win one of the 158 valuable prizes! 1st prize—$100.00; 2nd prize—$50.00; 3rd prize—$25.00; five prizes of $5.00 each; fifty prizes of $1.00 each; 50 Eversharp pencils; 50 hunting knives. Every entrant will receive a worth while gift besides. Get your information about TUMS from the advertisement at the left, then read the simple rules.

—— SIMPLE RULES ——

Write your "last line" in dotted line, tear out whole advertisement, and mail with your name and address to the address given below. If you submit more than one entry, simply write your additional "last line" on a plain sheet of paper. But EACH "last line" submitted must be accompanied by the wrapper from a 10c roll of TUMS which you can secure at any drug store.

Elaborateness will not be considered. Only skill with which "last line" is completed, and neatness will count. Every entry will be individually considered and acknowledged with a worth while free gift. No entries will be returned. Judges will be chosen by officials of the A. H. Lewis Co. In event of tie, duplicate prizes will be awarded. All entries must be postmarked not later than midnight of May 31st, 1936. Prize-winners will be notified promptly thereafter.

Address your entries to Contest Department, Room 22-B, The A. H. Lewis Co., 4th and Spruce Streets, St. Louis, Missouri. (Be sure to enclose wrapper from a 10c roll of TUMS.)

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES

This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief Of Pain

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.

The kidneys are one of Nature's chief ways of taking the acids and waste out of the blood. If they don't pass 3 pints a day and so get rid of more than 3 pounds of waste matter, your 15 miles of kidney tubes may need flushing.

If you have trouble with frequent bladder passages with scanty amount which often smart and burn, the 15 miles of kidney tubes may need flushing out. This danger signal may be the beginning of nagging backache, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling puffiness under the eyes and dizziness.

Don't wait for serious trouble. Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills—used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help flush out the 15 miles of kidney tubes. Get Doan's Pills.

Shirley Temple As You Never See Her

She went into an operatic sequence with Slim Summerville and Guy Kibbee that I think are some of the funniest still pictures ever taken—and I think they're funnier than any scene in the picture itself, because Shirley told me: "Anf'ny, I'm 'giving this' more than I did in the picture, just for you!" (See photo page 31).

EVERYBODY knows about the crush she had on Jimmy Dunn, and that was no mere publicity man's stunt either. She was really crazy about Jimmy. And then—she went to work in Our Little Girl with Joel McCrea. Now Joel is a great, handsome, rugged lad for whom bigger and more famous stars than our Shirley would fall. And Shirley transferred her heart from Jimmy to Joel.

The Shirley crushes are kind of hard on her men. She wants them with her all the time. She'd take them home with her if she could. They have to play with her between takes, even. Her crush on Joel was so heavy that I could never get her to pose alone; she always had to have McCrea with her. Joel cooperated with me—when I was ready to shoot, I'd wiggle a finger and Joel would lean suddenly out of range—and I'd have my solo shot of Shirley.

And then came the day Jimmy Dunn arrived to visit her on the set where she was working with Joel!

The whole company, wise to Shirley's fickle heart, watched to see what would happen. Shirley saw Jimmy and with a squeal of delight, ran to him and hugged him and kissed him. Then she looked over her shoulder—and caught a glimpse of Joel walking off the set.

Like an eel, in an instant, she was out of Jimmy's arms—and after Joel! At the gate, she caught him. From that moment on, she watched the two of them like a cat with two mice—and neither one could get an inch out of range. She kept them with her, together, all day long. Just wait until that one grows up!

Me?—oh, yes, she got a crush on me, too. But why, I can't imagine. Because at the close of one day's work, I went to her bungalow on the lot to say good-bye. I'd been given a few days off to go to Yuma to be married. I said good-bye to Shirley, who looked at me, wondering. I said good-bye to her mother. Shirley broke in:

"Where's Anf'ny going, Mommy?" she asked.

"He's going away to get married, dear," Mrs. Temple told her.

Slowly, Shirley turned those eyes on me. There was no famous Shirley smile behind them; only a depth of hurt and resentment. She didn't say another word

Shirley celebrates her birthday on April 23rd, and among her gifts was a set of quintuplet twins from "Pat" Crawford, a five-year-old friend in Toronto, Canada to me; just calmly turned her back.

Mrs. Temple told me later that Shirley saw the pictures in the paper of me and my bride. "Mommy," she asked then, "why did Anf'ny have to go an' do that—just when I liked him so much?" Mrs. Temple explained that not infrequently, marriages do occur, and that it just happened to me this time.

WHEN I got back from my honeymoon, Shirley avoided me throughout each day. I finally caught her—told her my marriage would never, never, never make any difference in the way I felt toward her. She relented—but it was days before we were the same old pals again!

But her heart is big. I remember one other time when we were having a spat. It lasted three days. The fourth day, a dirty little ragged orphan was brought to the studio for some shots to boost a Community Chest drive. I had to take a picture of Shirley taking a ticket to a benefit show from the little urchin's hand. With the same cold disdain with which she'd been cold-shouldering me for three days, she came over for the shot.

In the midst of it, I saw her chin wobble a bit, and there were real tears in her eyes. As they led the orphan out, I saw Shirley look after the departing figure with a strange expression on her little face. A bit later she came to me and put her hand in mine.

"Anf'ny," she said, simply: "did you ever see anybody so—pitiful—as that little boy?"

I shook my head.

"Anf'ny, when I looked at him I nearly cried."

"You did cry, just a little, Shirley," I told her.

A moment of silence.

"Anf'ny—please—let's not fight any more. Ever. Let's be friends." And the squabble of three days was over!

The way kids' minds work is odd, isn't it?

GOOD NIGHT, SISTER!
HAVE A GOOD TIME!

SHE WAS TOO FAT!

And then she made up her mind to get thin and did, without hard exercise or starvation diet

Nobody loves a fat girl—but why mope about it when you can so easily get rid of that excess fat by means of a tried and true corrective, known and recommended by physicians the world over?

Many years ago medical science discovered that obesity—when an abnormal condition—is caused by the lack of an important element which the body normally supplies.

That element—which is the chief ingredient of Marmola—has since been prescribed to thousands of overweight women, with amazingly beneficial results. It is taken with their meals. They do not wear themselves out with exercising, do not starve themselves, nor drain their systems with drastic purgatives. Yet day by day they have felt lighter, more alert, more energetic. Soon they find their weight satisfactory. The excess fat has simply slipped away, revealing the trim and slender figure underneath.

Sounds like a miracle, but thousands of women who have taken Marmola as directed — 4 tablets a day — might well tell you it's a demonstrated fact. Indeed, since 1907, more than 20 million packages of Marmola have been purchased — proof positive that nothing succeeds like success. Marmola is put up by one of the leading medical laboratories of America.

Start today! You will soon experience Marmola's benefits. When you have gone far enough, stop taking Marmola. And you will bless the day when you first discovered this marvelous reducing agent!

Marmola is on sale by all dealers—from coast to coast.

Why Dick Powell Wants Marriage!

three nights a week, after the last audiences had left, we'd rehearse until two-thirty for the next week's show. For seven years, I had to juggle time to get six hours sleep."

"Tough break for the girls," I remarked, kidding him. "I don't see how you could manage many heavy dates . . . and gals demand attention, you know."

"Yes," said Dick Powell, seriously. "That, more than anything else, is the one thing that caused my divorce. It was an impossible situation—unfair to her, and I knew it at the time. But there wasn't anything I could do about it.

I DID try to quit, you know. Once I gave up my job and went to Florida. Tried to be a real estate salesman. But I got there just as the boom was over," he remembered, ruefully. "Another time, I quit again, and went to Chicago as a salesman for the International Harvester Company. But I just couldn't make it go. I made $90 a month—and just playing the banjo and singing, I never got less than $90 a week in the theater, union scale."

In Hollywood, Dick's life is ever more strenuous now than ever. Besides making four or five pictures a year—big pictures, such as Shipmates Forever, Broadway Gondolier, and the present one, Hearts Divided, he does radio work, appears in countless benefits, and takes an hour singing lesson every day.

"Not only that," he resumed, coming back from a lengthy phone conference with his agent, "I rehearse for that radio program every Tuesday and Thursday night, Friday afternoon, all day Sunday—and Thursday afternoon if I'm not working. In my spare moments I'm on a constant search for new songs. And yet"—his eyes lighted up and the famous smile came out again like sunshine—"it's the most fun I've ever had! I'm crazy about all the people in the show, and in spite of all the time it takes, it's just like play.

"And I'll tell you something else. A little while ago, I was offered $7,500 a week for four weeks to make some personal appearances. Think of it! Thirty thousand dollars in four weeks! Why, that's more money than I ever thought of making, in all my wildest dreams. There just isn't that much money! But then I sat down with a piece of paper and pencil and I figured out that if I did go, by the time I'd paid all the income taxes on it, there'd be only $2,200 left. And by the time I'd paid my expenses on the trip, I'd have only three or four hundred a week left for myself. So I said to myself, Fella, you've been doing all right for quite a while now. You're supposed to be worth more than that. Wouldn't it be worth three hundred dollars a week to you to have a vacation instead?" So I didn't sign the contract—but the way it worked out, I didn't get the vacation either!"

"Well then, what will you do, if you do retire at the end of these three years?" I asked Dick Powell. "I bet you'll find you can't ever quit. It's in your blood."

"What did you think I was going to do? Sit in front of the fire all day and get fat?" he demanded. "No—I'll still keep on doing radio work—I hope maybe my voice will be trained enough by then so I can do some concert work, like James Melton. But I'll only try and make just enough money to get along on. And then I can have the things I really want."

A WIFE, and children. Those are the things I think Dick Powell really wants. And the time to devote to them. But he won't try it while there's any danger that a second marriage might also end in the divorce courts because of the long hours, neglect, and inability to take her places, that he admits are so unfair to any girl.

"Why, it's getting so I can't even get a date when I do have time for one," he confided as if he expected me to believe it. "I expect any minute I'll be reduced to taking the cook out. And I really believe that marriage is necessary to every man. Why, look at any man in Hollywood you can name—Joe E. Brown, Warren William, Pat O'Brien, Gable, Paul Muni—haven't they all done their very best work while they've been married?

"I've often been asked whether or not I think my fans would like me to marry. Now, I bow to my fans' wishes in almost every respect. They've put me where I am today, and they have a perfect right to guide my life if they want to. I've always tried to please them, and I promise I always shall. But about marriage—well, that's the one thing I'm going to please myself about. So when the time comes, I'm going to put it up to them.

"'Please, folks,' I shall say. 'You wouldn't want poor old Powell growing into a crochety old man with nobody around the house to keep him company, would you?'

"And I think they'll come through. Darned if I don't!"

Modes and Manners

ing the sentiment of the occasion would be a gesture of thoughtfulness.

Should the gentleman precede his companion down the aisle of a theater or should he follow her?

Precedence in "parading" down the aisle is determined by the seating arrangement. If the seats are reserved the host should go down the aisle first handing the stubs to the usher, his companion or party following in the order in which they will sit.

What is the gentleman's position while escorting two ladies?

The gentleman should take the curb side of the pavement. This applies when walking with one or more.

Let the stars answer your problems on etiquette and manner of dress. This column will be edited each month by a different glamorous movie star. Next month your editor will be Miss Grace Moore. Address all questions to Modes and Manners, SCREEN BOOK, 7046 Hollywood Blvd., Hollywood, Calif.

With the Editor IN HOLLYWOOD

The biased attitude about this and that in the Film Colony

SPANKY MAC FARLAND is the Charles Laughton of Toyland. You can take all the rest of the baby actors back to the kindergartens where they belong. Spanky stole such a big slice of The Trail of the Lonesome Pine that the rest of the film, if run separately, would look like a screen test, and the secret of his appeal is a remarkable fact. Erin O'Brien Moore explains it. "He knows how to listen," she says. It seems that "listening" is something few actors can do, off screen or on, and that's why Spanky should and will become a star in his own right, depending on which intelligent producer grabs him first.

● FRED ASTAIRE has been jittery for months. Publicity gets him, for one thing. For another, he has the feeling that he shouldn't be just the male half of a "team." His logical complaint on that score should be settled, now that his sister, Adele, has arrived on the scene. Without in the slightest detracting from the grace, ability and beauty of Ginger Rogers, there is no denying that Fred and Adele Astaire would be sensational on the screen as they once were on the stage. A pox on Hollywood, if it fails to pair them in pictures immediately!

● SPARE THE ROD—and spoil the child, a saying of ancient vintage, aptly may be applied to the business of reviewing pictures. Too often films are, to quote a phrase recently credited to a Hollywood producer, "just half way between stupendous and colossal," and half empty theaters are mute testimony to the public's opinion of advice from its movie critics. For this reason SCREEN BOOK inaugurates Personally Previewed Pictures on page 48 of this issue. Every film previewed in this department is seen personally by the editor, guaranteeing a uniform opinion. You may agree or disagree, but there will never be a "no decision."

● DICK POWELL is now ready to turn editor. With two feminine star editors of SCREEN BOOK ahead of him, Dick is next to wield the editor's pencil. "What's the matter with you, anyway?" he demanded. "Getting soft in your old age? All right, I'll edit your magazine for you, even if you did ask Ginger Rogers and Carole Lombard first. But don't think I'm going to let you take over my job—I think too much of my reputation." And so the deal is sealed. With the July issue we give you SCREEN BOOK, personally edited by Dick Powell, and from where we sit it looks nothing short of sensational.

● THE NEXT MIRACLE, as described by Robert Jones, color director of Dancing Pirate, will be a device that will bring actors off the flat surface of the screen and right into the audience. "I don't know just how it will be done," he admits, "—probably with mirrors and a gauze screen of some sort, but with color as the current step toward realism, the other must inevitably follow." Jones predicts also a somewhat distant phenomenon that we hope will come within our lifetime. He says that by some device yet to be discovered, everyone can become immediately present to everyone else. For instance, while in Panhandle, Texas, you get a sudden uncontrollable desire to get in touch with Jean Harlow. You just press a button and there she is. Imagine!

Fred Astaire has been "jittery." Now is the time to star him again with his sister, Adele. Photo above shows them as they appeared at the height of their success on the Broadway stage

● STUDIO ROWS have been the pet pastime of Hollywood big-wigs these days. First Jimmy Cagney put out to sea in a double huff. George Raft walked out of a Carole Lombard picture, which is the height of something because it is hard to imagine anyone walking out on that gal. Figuratively, Miss Mae West wrestled with several story treatments and no end of supervisors over her new film, Klondike Annie. Marlene Dietrich long has been nursing sorrows which are too involved to relate here. Of course, there is nothing that clears the atmosphere like a good healthy fight, but a little less bickering and a little more acting might possibly result in better pictures—and that is precisely what fails to happen in most cases.

● BETTE DAVIS has copped the best acting award for her work in Dangerous, and thereby hangs a tale. Hollywood's "doper-outers" insist that she was merely given the award this year because the Academy was more than a little ashamed of not having slipped her the gold statuette for her last season's work in Of Human Bondage. It all sounds quite logical, except for the fact that Bette's acting in Dangerous was clearly better than the best of the year, with Elisabeth Bergner in Escape Me Never as a possible point for argument. To detract from the achievement of a great actress by hinting that she didn't deserve the honor this year is unsportsmanlike. And to compare the genius of Bette Davis with the ingrown naivete of Katharine Hepburn in Alice Adams is incredible nonsense.

● GORGEOUS FEMININITY saturated the Biltmore Bowl on the evening the Academy Awards were made, and much of it overflowed into the bar where your editor sat waiting for the main event, safely out of ear-shot of the long-winded speakers. There were amazingly angular women and a few bloated beauties of yesteryear, too, but for the most part the sweeter sex was superb. We thought that, of all of them, Merle Oberon (picture on page 15) should have had a gold statuette for being the most beautifully groomed lady there. And, if given a choice between taking home for our mantlepiece a statuette or a choice among the beauties, we would have grabbed the blonde and fascinating Virginia Bruce without an instant's hesitation.

● CAROLE LOMBARD is living proof that at least one actress has a delicious sense of humor. Following the release of her new picture, Love Before Breakfast, she did not, as is customary according to Hollywood tradition, buy a full page advertisement to glorify herself in one of Hollywood's "trade papers." Instead, she caused to be inserted among all the other personal pats on the back a beautiful portrait of her Pekingese, "Pushface the Killer." "Pushface," you will remember, had an important, if doggy rôle in Love Before Breakfast, and Carole's advertisement stated that he would be available for future picture work if properly contacted through his agent.

● AS WE HUSTLE this copy to press, we learn that Darryl Zanuck, alert movie wizard, is planning additional pictures starring the Dionne Quintuplets. This is good news for the public, but more particularly for theater owners to whose ears the only music is the tinkle of cash at the box office. With one Quintuplet film annually, the theater men's only worry is years ahead when they will have to build new marquees to satisfy the five little ladies' demands for equal billing.

THIS WINDOW SHADE Yours for 15¢ IS IT "LINEN"?

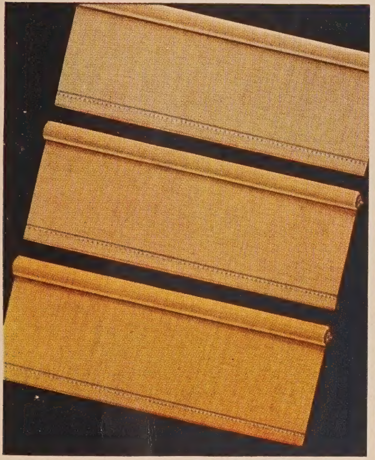
*3 Out of 4 Mistook it for Costly Cloth



Colors available are White, Green, Buff, Light Brown and Dark Brown

Now Replace All Your Shabby Window Shades... BUY 10 FOR THE PRICE OF ONE!

*HERE'S startling proof that you need no longer pay high prices to get beauty and dignified appearance in window shades. A remarkable new process called "Lintone" now gives to CLOPAY fibre shades the actual appearance of genuine linen! In actual test 3 out of 4 seeing a new CLOPAY LINTONE beside a $1.50 shade, only four feet away, thought the LINTONE was the cloth shade!

If no one can see any difference in the looks, why pay the big difference in price? Millions of women have found that CLOPAY 15c shades wear as well as cloth shades. Now they look as well, too. A 15c LINTONE will never crack, ravel or pinhole. It will soil no quicker than the costliest shade and when it does you can afford to change at once—always have spic and span shades at a cost you will hardly notice.

It's not only inexpensive but also amazingly easy to change from costly old-fashioned shades to lovely new CLOPAYS. Use the same rollers. Rip off the old shade and apply CLOPAYS in a jiffy with patented gummed strip. No tacks or tools—no skill needed. As easy as changing pillow slips.

In addition to the new LINTONE shades, CLOPAYS are also available in a wide range of smartly styled patterns and modish solid colors. See them at leading "5 and 10" stores and most neighborhood stores. Write today for FREE SAMPLES of material. Address the CLOPAY CORPORATION, 1572 York Street, Cincinnati, Ohio.

NEW PROCESS Lintone CLOPAY WINDOW SHADE 15¢

NOTE: If new rollers are needed, CLOPAYS can be purchased already mounted as illustrated. Rollers only 10c additional.

TODAY'S GOSSIP

By the Star Reporter

The news behind the news in Hollywood

PERT KELTON, who wears goofy hats, a dizzy smile and made fans laugh in The Bowery and other movies, and now with Hal Roach, is to sing "Micaela" to Ponselle's "Carmen" in the Hollywood Bowl June 25 and 26. While other actresses were "between pictures" Pert was doing her scales. Impresario Maurice Frank of the Hollywood Bowl Grand Opera Festival says her voice is better than 50 per cent of the Micaelas he has heard at the Metropolitan.

JEAN MUIR, Hollywood's plain, intellectual actress has blossomed out in striking gowns designed by Margot Fischer, vivid wife of George Fischer of Warner Brother's Radio department. Jean looked pretty in a bow-bedecked taffeta gown the night of Contemporary Theater's forum at Hollywood Masonic hall. Alas, she got stage-fright and was bewildered when she forgot her lines. But then, Jean's talk followed Rouben Mamoulian, Garbo's admirer and director, one of the most brilliant speakers in the colony. Jean, 'tis said, is smitten on George Brent.

Monopoly has taken Hollywood by storm. Here, three confirmed addicts are hard at work. Jack Oakie is putting over a fast one on Frances Drake as Kent Taylor kibitzes on the set of Florida Special

One of the largest social events of the season was Joan Crawford's party for Leopold Stowkowski. She is shown with husband Franchot Tone and her guest of honor

JOAN AND FRANCHOT TONE, with a coterie of Beverly Hills socialites, have discovered a quaint night spot in a small Japanese theater in downtown Los Angeles' mercantile district. Every night a group from Hollywood "catch" a Japanese movie. A Chinese opera company, which had been stranded in San Francisco, moved into an adjacent theater for a week presenting something of a temporary rival. But, since the Chinese were "in person" and raised the curtain when the actors got there, the element of time worked in favor of Nippon.

ISABEL JEWELL frequents cocktail lounges of Hollywood when she's not working. Her high-powered drinking consists of milk and iced-tea. She's worn a white ribbon since her Lee Tracy romance and won't go places with elbow-benders. Larry Lee, orchestra leader of Beverly Wilshire hotel is background for this elegant Jewell.

JULIE HAYDON, born Donella Donaldson, but re-christened by RKO as a threat to Ann Harding, will be a surprise to admirers when she comes on the screen in The End of the World. It has been a year since Noel Coward presented her in The Scoundrel after seeing her on the stage with Francis Lederer in Autumn Crocus. Julie's bosses at Paramount couldn't find a story for her, so she took time out to build her health and strength. She plays ping-pong, tennis and rides horseback, but must be home in bed by 10 o'clock except on Saturday nights.

NAZIMOVA, once Hollywood's darling, but unfortunate in her love for a movie director, had the old town in the palm of her hand when she appeared in Ghosts at the Biltmore. Everyone wanted to meet her, but she was exclusive as Garbo. Harry Ellerbe, Ibsen's "Oswald," had laughs when friends among the juveniles gave their impression of how Ellerbe went mad. He played with Margaret Sullavan in So Red the Rose and squired dazzling movie beauties to luncheon-spots during his "Ghosts" visit.

Those thousands of "Bright Lights" audiences who demanded another song-and-dance show for Joe have had their way! Warner Bros. went right out and bought that famous stage musical 'Sons O' Guns,' equipped it with an uproarious cast and all modern conveniences including new Warren and Dubin songs, and a passionate apache dance number by Joe that stops the show. The riotous results emerge as the month's top entertainment.

NO PICTURE!

Impossible to print a picture that would make its point and still stay within the bounds of good taste

WE'D LIKE to take some person who had just taken a harsh, over-acting cathartic ... and turn on the X-ray camera. We'd like to show you just what happens within you when you take so drastic a purge.

If you could see a picture like that, you wouldn't be likely to take such medicine again. You'd be super-careful to take only a laxative that is correctly timed. A laxative like Ex-Lax.

WHY HARSH CATHARTICS ARE BAD FOR YOU

When you take a cathartic that over-acts, it throws your entire system out of rhythm. It hurries unassimilated food through your body, causing violent muscular action in your alimentary tract. You have pains and griping. You feel weak afterwards ... all worn out!

Authorities agree that strong purgatives and cathartics should never be taken except upon the advice of a physician.

WHY CORRECT TIMING IS VITAL

Now, what happens when you take a correctly timed laxative like Ex-Lax?

Well, except for the relief you get, you hardly know you've even had a laxative. You take a little Ex-Lax tablet, preferably at night. It tastes just like delicious chocolate. It works easily and gently, taking 6 to 8 hours to be effective! No stomach pains! No distress or nausea! No unpleasant after-taste.

30 YEARS' PROOF

Two of Hollywood's most beautiful sun-bathers are glimpsed on the beach in an "airplane" shot from the camera of Charles Rhodes

KATHARINE HEPBURN in slacks and polo coat of navy blue, breathlessly rushed into the cocktail bar at El Paseo, Santa Barbara. "Slightly Hepburnish," observed a whiskey-sour sipper. "Positively Hepburnish," retorted the star, wolfing a crunchie and hurriedly departing.

JUDITH ANDERSON AND HELEN MENKEN, co-stars of the Pulitzer prize winner, The Old Maid didn't speak to each other, off-stage, during the run of the play. They made up while in Hollywood. Story is going the rounds how Menken, in taking test for Queen Elizabeth in new Hepburn film, thought she was off the sound-track and made a remark that she wouldn't like her friends to hear. It will be preserved in RKO's vaults, never to be released. Her secret is safe!

GRACE MOORE was reported so unhappy in making her last movie that she is reported through with films, confining her art to concert and operatic stage and radio.

FRANKIE VAN, once a lightweight boxer around Cleveland, Ohio, came to Hollywood when his day was done to be a fight referee. Now he is stand-in for Al Jolson.

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS, Jr. was in Hollywood for only a brief period recently but the smart boys and girls of the film colony ribbed him about his English accent. They had him recount his adventures in London. Doug's friends said he was on to the gag and laid the accent on purposely thick.

JANET GAYNOR, the little red head's romances go "round and round." Robert Taylor, Al Scott, a couple of San Franciscans and at this writing Howard Hughes, millionaire. Janet is mostly concerned with her next movie contract after her Twentieth Century-Fox picture is completed. Since Winfield Sheehan is at Paramount it looks like that may be the answer.

MONA BARRIE says about 90 per cent of her fan mail is from the feminine sex. During her career she received but one mash note, from a dairyman in South America who offered her his heart, hand and his cows. Mona has a husband.

MARLENE DIETRICH has found a way to salvage fur coats. When she tires of wearing them she has them made into bed coverings. Make your own wisecracks.

JEAN HARLOW is really an actress who has a book. Now she's in Elissa Landi's class, only possibly at the foot, because Elissa has written many books. Jean's volume is titled "Today is Tonight." Sounds like a Gertrude Stein title.

MARY PICKFORD has eight fur coats in cold storage vaults in New York City which she takes out when she visits Gotham. They've never been seen in California.

CONSTANCE COLLIER moved from a turret apartment in Beverly Hills to the ground floor because her pet pekinese couldn't stand the altitude. Or so they say.

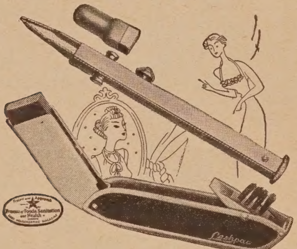
BRIGHT EYE DEAS
by Jane Heath

Do CANDLELIT dinner tables appear in your When-to-be-Beautiful Chart these early spring months? Then make this simple, amusing experiment: First, make up your face. Then, with KURLASH, curl the lashes of one eye. Add LASHTINT to these lashtips and touch the eyelid with SHADETTE. Now light a candle and look in a mirror. Notice how the side of your face with the eye unbeautified "fades away" . . . but how the other seems more delicately tinted, glowing and alive. It's the best way we know to discover how eye make-up and curled and glorified lashes can make your whole face lovelier. KURLASH does it without heat, cosmetics or practice. ($1 at good stores.)



Naturally, the candlelight test will show up straggly, bushy, or poorly marked brows. And that will be your cue to send for TWEEZETTE, the automatic tweezer that whisks away offending hairs, roots and all, painlessly! Probably you'll want a LASHPAC also, with a unique stick of mascara, like a lipstick, to darken lashes and mark brows. It has a clever little brush for grooming too! Each, $1—at good stores.

And What Next?

AND now Hollywood is going "operatic." What next? Not that I don't enjoy Tibbett's voice, but simply that, heretofore, movie heroes have been such that a girl could go home, after two breathless hours of cinematic love-making, with the delightful conviction that she had been kissed. Aside from their faulty love-making, some of the opera stars who have recently invaded Hollywood actually cannot act. And what do they do about that? Exactly nothing. It's no matter if Miss A's eyes are crossed and she repeats her lines like a tired extra; if she can sing, she has a movie career. Now—I ask you—is there no justice?—*Dorothy M. Orchids to Colman

WOULD like to send orchids to Ronald Colman for his marvelous portrait of Sidney Carton in A Tale of Two Cities. Sidney Carton had been the hero of my girlhood; he came to life on the screen. There never has been a time when Ronald Colman over-acted. The picture's beautiful ending should make us all realize that, when our time comes to cross The Great Divide, we will live again. Could anything be more beautiful? "Perhaps in death I receive something I never received in life. It's a far better thing I do than I have ever done. It's a far better rest I go to than I have ever known." By a mediocre actor it could have been tragedy, but with Colman it was triumph!—Margaret Wilcox, Alma, Nebr.

Marjorie Weaver

Out of the South comes a delightful new personality to make a bid for stardom

SELDOM does a talent scout discover so unusual a personality as Marjorie Weaver, whose sparkling beauty and fresh charm have already gained attention in Hollywood.

Marjorie is a Louisville, Kentucky, girl, a genuine Southerner. Her loveliness is well known to people of the blue grass country who have known her as the winner of several beauty titles. Before graduating from her 'teens she was named Miss Kentucky and has twice been selected the most beautiful girl on the campus of Indiana University, where she was a member of the Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority and an active participant in the school's amateur theatricals.

Early last year on a hunch she entered SCREEN BOOK'S Ruby Keeler contest and much to her delight was declared first prize winner, an honor which brought with it an opportunity to study dancing at Jack Blue's famous school in New York City. An independent girl, Marjorie decided that she must support herself while studying. On her arrival in New York she sought and promptly secured work as a photographer's model. Today, her friends recognize her in many a nation-wide advertisement. Soon the studios learned of her beauty and talent; quickly they began spirited bidding for her services. Warner Brothers won out and after two screen tests signed her to a seven year contract. She will soon arrive in Hollywood to begin a screen career—and those who have seen her predict immediate success.

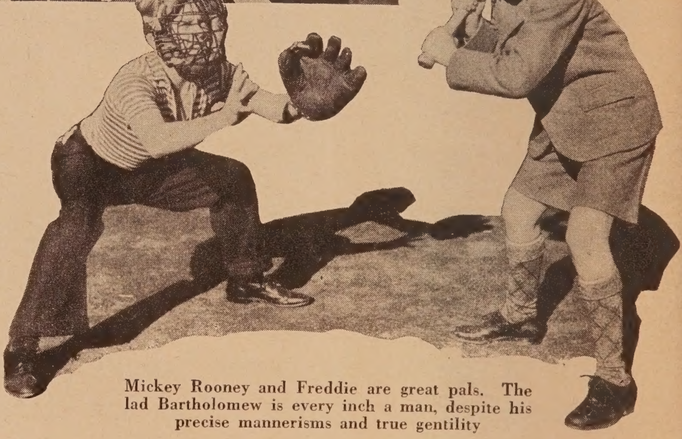
Freddie Bartholomew Can TAKE IT!

"Cissie" and Freddie Bartholomew; together they present a combination that is new to Hollywood—rare devotion and intelligence keep them riding the crest of the waves



Mickey Rooney and Freddie are great pals. The lad Bartholomew is every inch a man, despite his precise mannerisms and true gentility

HOLLYWOOD has it that Freddie Bartholomew is a perfect little gentleman. Freddie's definition of that much-discussed word puts him right in line for claim to the title. Says Master Bartholomew, in his exquisite English accent,

"A gentleman is a stand-up guy who can take it."

And Freddie can.

When long-suffering directors, inured to the vagaries of temperamental darlings of the screen, get together in Hollywood, they still tell the story of the "whipping scene" in David Copperfield. That scene, you remember, was the one in which Basil Rathbone, as the cruel stepfather, viciously beat the small boy, and the original plan was to have Freddie's stand-in, Ray Sperry, act as whipee. That is, it was until Freddie was told about it.

"You mean?" he inquired, "That Ray will take the whipping, but the audience will think it's me being whipped?"

Director John Cromwell explained that that was what he meant.

An inbred, English sense of fair play was manifest in Freddie's reply. So was a newly acquired American sense of vigorous expression.

You will never really know the sensation among child actors until you have read this story

By Marcella March

Freddie Bartholomew at the age of five. He has always been known as a "beautiful" child, but wants his friends to know that he is every inch a rough and ready fellow

"Nix!" Freddie stated. "It wouldn't be fair. And I can take it!"

And so they put pads across Freddie's shoulders, under his suit coat, and told Mr. Rathbone to go to it. He did, daring to be realistic in his beating, because he knew the little shoulders were well padded. Old troupers on the set marveled at the expression of anguish, at the real tears, that appeared on Freddie's face as the beating progressed. You did too, probably. The sequence had to be shot several times. There was a close-up to be made of the wrathful Mr. Rathbone. There was a close-up to be made of the suffering Mr. Bartholomew. With each succeeding take, Freddie looked more and more as if he were suffering. They congratulated him, and called him a swell actor. Perhaps that was the only time that Freddie Bartholomew was overrated.

That night when Miss Bartholomew, Freddie's aunt and "best friend," was giving him an after-bath inspection to see that he hadn't missed any spots with the soap, she was horrified beyond words to find that the swell actor's back was covered with ugly red welts.

"The padding slipped," Freddie explained simply at her outcry. He dismissed her tearful "But why didn't you say so?" with masculine toleration for feminine emotionalism.

"I didn't want to spoil the scene, Cis," he told her, adding, "Never mind, Cis. I can take it."

Freddie was almost as proud of those welts as of his [Continued on page 71]

DO BRUNETTES LOOK OLDER THAN BLONDES

THIS BRUNETTE GIRL IS ACTUALLY 3 YEARS YOUNGER THAN THE BLONDE!

No!

THE ANSWER IS THAT 7 OUT OF 10 BRUNETTES USE THE WRONG SHADE OF FACE POWDER!

BY Lady Esther

If there's one thing women fool themselves about, it's face powder shades.

Many women select face powder tints on the wrong basis altogether. They try to get a face powder that simply matches their type instead of one that enhances or flatters it.

Any actress will tell you that certain stage lights can make you look older or younger. The same holds true for face powder shades. One shade can make you look ten to twenty years older while another can make you look years younger.

It's a common saying that brunettes look older than blondes. There is no truth in it. The reason for the statement is that many brunettes make a mistake in the shade of the face powder they use. They simply choose a brunette face powder shade or one that merely matches their type instead of one that goes with the tone of their skin. A girl may be a brunette and still have an olive or white skin.

One of Five Shades is the Right Shade!

Colorists will tell you that the idea of numberless shades of face powder is all wrong. They will tell you that only five shades are necessary and that one of these shades will flatter your tone of skin.

I have proved this principle. I know that five shades will suffice. Therefore, I make Lady Esther Face Powder in only five shades. One of these five shades, I know, will prove just the right shade for you. It will prove your most becoming and flattering.

I want you to find out if you are using the right shade of face powder for your skin. I want you to find out if the shade you are using is making you look older or younger.

One Way to Tell!

There is only one way to find out and this is to try all five shades of Lady Esther Face Powder—and that is what I want you to do at my expense.

One of these shades, you will find, will instantly prove the right shade for you. One will immediately make you look years younger. You won't have to be told that. Your mirror will cry it aloud to you.

Write today for all the five shades of Lady Esther Face Powder that I offer free of charge and obligation. Make the shade test before your mirror. Notice how instantly the right shade tells itself. Mark, too, how soft and smooth my face powder is; also, how long it clings.

Mail Coupon

One test will reveal that Lady Esther Face Powder is a unique face powder, unparalleled by anything in face powders you have ever known.

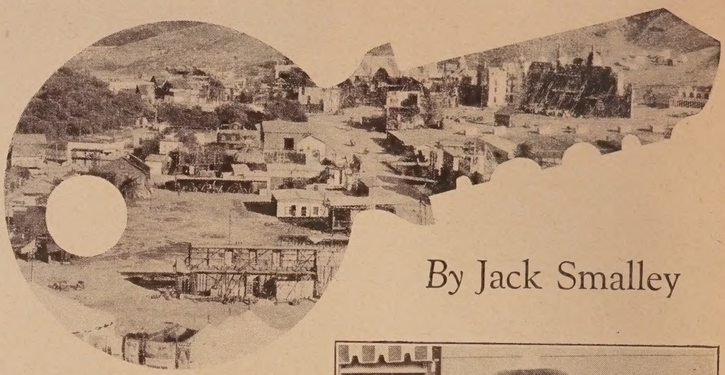
HERE'S YOUR KEY to the CITY!



By Jack Smalley

What greater gate could a key unlock than the gate to a movie studio? Your key to Hollywood will let you into Universal City!

While enjoying the Movieland Tour of the studios, you will also "meet up" with such sights as this: Ken Maynard and his two trick zebras SCREEN BOOK presents to you, dear reader, the key to the city!

That means Hollywood, of course, and we're going to let you unlock all those doors which bar the way of the public to the inner portals of this glamorous colony.

Never before has such an opportunity been offered to visitors to Hollywood as will be found in SCREEN BOOK'S second annual Movieland Tour. In fact the trip last year was so successful that two have been arranged for the summer of 1936.

The first four hundred people who sign up for the two weeks' vacation trip from Chicago to Hollywood and back will have an experience in store which will be long remembered. Are you going to be one of the 400? It's going to be as exclusive as the social 400 of Newport, for that is all that can go on the two trips—200 in each house-party.

The special trains leave Chicago July 19 and August 9.

After leaving Minnesota and Montana, the trippers arrive at Yakima, Washington, where a side trip through Rainier National Park is planned. Then on to Seattle, where a motor tour will present the sights of the city. Next day is a boat trip to Victoria and back. A stop in Portland, then to San You're to attend a party at Paula Stone's house, you know, where you'll meet many of her Filmland friends. Here are some of them—Toby Wing, Paula, herself; Henry Willson and Anne Shirley Francisco, where a tour of Chinatown will be a feature.

Arriving in Hollywood, the party will make its headquarters at the Roosevelt Hotel, a block from SCREEN BOOK's office.

Sunday evening of the arrival will be given over to the first big party, a dinner at the historic Brass Rail where stars will be present and a novel entertainment program presented.

The next day, Monday, is devoted to unlocking those forbidden studio gates, and 20th Century-Fox will be hosts for the first trip, Universal Studios for the second.

In the evening will be the annual banquet, at the Biltmore Bowl, favorite rendezvous of the stars. A floor show, dining and dancing, will feature the entertainment, and again you'll have famed screen players as your hosts.

Tuesday will have two big events—a trip to Ken Maynard's new wild west circus at his ranch for lunch with stars and circus performers, and the annual cocktail party.

Paula Stone, as explained in the April issue of SCREEN BOOK, will be hostess at this party, and you can imagine what fun that will be. Paula has invited oodles of pals to be there, so bring your kodak and take home lots of snaps of your favorite stars.

IN THE evening Max Factor is throwing open the doors of his beauty salon to the trippers, and refreshments will be served while his plant is inspected, and souvenirs given the ladies. Everyone knows the Factor products, and of course the studios couldn't get along without his cosmetics. You'll be amazed at his plant and rooms where the stars are given individual beauty make-up to suit their personalities.

Wednesday is set aside for a boat trip across the channel to Catalina Island, playground of the southland, a spot as beautiful as you'd find anywhere in the world.

And so, with every moment crowded with something to see and do, the Movieland Tour members will set out for home again, to stop in Salt Lake City and Denver before completing this great two weeks' vacation.

The key to this wonderland is yours.

Just write for the handsome, illustrated booklet describing the tour. If you wish to make sure that you will be included, inclose $10 per person for your reservations. Only 200 can be taken on each trip.

Drop a note asking for the booklet, addressing it to Mr. Joe E. Godfrey, Jr., Manager, Movieland Tour, 360 N. Michigan Blvd., Chicago, Ill, or use the coupon below.

JEAN ARTHUR Defeats Her JINX!

By Whitney Williams

TODAY, Jean Arthur stands on top of the world . . . just as four years ago she found herself immersed in doubt.

Four years do not comprise a particularly lengthy period in the cycle of life. For this blonde and extremely capable young actress, however, they have wrought a transformation altogether amazing.

Back in 1931, Jean owned the worst inferiority complex in Hollywood. She didn't think she was attractive, she didn't like her figure, she didn't believe she could act sufficiently well ever to amount to shucks on the screen.

That was four short years ago. All that is discarded now, and in its place a self-confidence reigns second to none in the movie capital. Just what induced this change forms one of the most gripping chronicles of personal triumph ever to come out of Hollywood and reveals for the first time a girl's victory over herself.

Jean started out in life much the same as any other miss. Neither bashful nor forward, she didn't know she possessed either an inferiority or a superiority complex until she entered motion pictures.

After graduation from high school in New York, Jean answered an advertisement and landed a job modelling for a commercial photographer. Her blonde Nordic beauty registered so well and adapted itself so perfectly to the needs of photographers and artists alike that ere long she found herself in constant demand.

For a year or two, she posed for many outstanding figures in this field, among them Howard Chandler Christy, who made her the subject of many of his most famous drawings. Jean became so enthusiastic about her work that she relinquished all thoughts of developing into a teacher of French and German. This had been uppermost in her mind during her high school course.

MOTION picture producers made a practice in those days—1923—of watching the advertisements and art exhibits in their search for new faces for the screen. So often had Jean's countenance been recorded, both through the medium of the camera and pen and pencil, that the screen test which took place was inevitable.

Almost overnight, Jean and her mother left their New York home for Hollywood, the little model clutching in her hand a contract to the Fox studios. Heralded as a magnificent "find," because of the excellence of her test, the studio rushed her into the leading rôle of its Temple of Venus.

"And that is where and why I developed the most beautiful inferiority complex you've ever seen," comments Jean, in recalling those days which wielded so potent an influence over the years that were to come. "Without any experience at all, I was cast in a starring rôle and expected to turn in a highly dramatic performance.

"For our first few days shooting, we went on location on the Santa Cruz Islands, about thirty miles off the coast of Santa Barbara. I was so ignorant of studio ways that I didn't even know I should have taken my mother along as companion. Consequently, I was alone, without a friend to turn to during those awful hours.

"THE director tried for three days to get me to act the way he wanted, but I was so nervous and discouraged by my inability to make anything of the part that I'm afraid I gave a pretty poor account of myself. Anyway, at the end of that period, he decided he wouldn't work with me any longer and notified the studio of his decision. The studio immediately sent out another actress for the rôle.

"About seven o'clock in the evening, he came to me and said, 'There's a fishing boat leaving for the mainland at eleven. Do you want to take that or wait until morning?'

"I wanted so [Continued on page 74]

SECRETS from the KITCHEN of ANITA LOUISE

A dainty dessert that should captivate the fancy of the most fastidious dinner guest.

By Grace Ellis

A baker's delight and served to a queen's taste. Anita Louise, "Queen Titania" of Hollywood's Shakespearian experience presents a jelly roll, prepared by Katherine Welker

It takes just three minutes to mix and but 13 minutes to bake! Miss Welker sifts the flour. One minute consumed

It is simple when one knows how to roll it! There go another two minutes!

IT'S spring. And noon. And twenty-five minutes, exactly, until lunch time. And there are to be guests, cronies who were asked to stay, who answered "Yes!"

"Katherine Welker, could we possibly have jellyroll—strawberry jellyroll?"

Anita Louise—until recently labeled the most beautful young woman in Hollywood, but since Anthony Adverse, admitted to be also a top-notch actress—thrusts another rose into a table bouquet, and queries the clever young person who manages her kitchen.

"Indeed, we could, Miss Anita. I've a whole twenty-five minutes for it. And it's only a twenty minute dish."

"It's so awfully good. The gang'll love it. And there's fresh strawberry jelly for it, too, isn't there? I'll open the jar and set the table while you do the roll."

Anita's strawberry jellyroll is the superlative sort of dessert one would expect to be a favorite dish with a girl whom only superlatives can describe. It can be made in practically nothing flat. It can be filled with any one of a dozen fillings. It tastes like nothing in the world, but its own luscious self!

Let's watch Katherine Welker toss it together. And then keep our fingers off our own mixing bowls, if we can!

First she whisks the oven gauge up to 400 degrees. Then she grasps a flat, low-rimmed cake-pan (about 10 by 15), greases it on the bottom and sides, lines the bottom with waxed paper, greases that—and turns around to flip a recipe card from a convenient file. A peep over her shoulder shows the following:

FEATHERY JELLYROLL

(Miss Anita's Favorite)

¾ cups sifted cake flour
¾ teaspoons double-action baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
4 eggs
¾ cups sugar, sifted
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 glass strawberry jelly, or other filling

Sift flour once. Measure. Combine baking powder, salt and unbeaten eggs in a bowl. Place over smaller bowl of hot water and beat with rotary or electric beater, adding sugar gradually until mixture becomes thick and light colored. Remove bowl from hot water. Fold in flour and vanilla. Turn into greased, lined cake pan (15-10 inches). Slip pan into hot oven—400° F.—and bake 13-15 minutes.

Loosen cake from pan edge with sharp knife. Turn at once onto cloth covered with powdered sugar. Remove paper, spread with fresh jelly, jam, custard filling, or fresh fruit mixed with sweetened whipped cream. Roll, holding cloth firmly about cake. Place wrapped cake on rack. Cool slightly. Unwrap. Place on doily-lined plate. Slice and serve with, or without, whipped cream.

Miss Welker uses the electric beater to mix the roll. The smaller bowl is just of a size so that the water in it covers the bottom of the larger bowl. It takes about 2 minutes for the whirring beaters to whip the egg- [Continued on page 87]

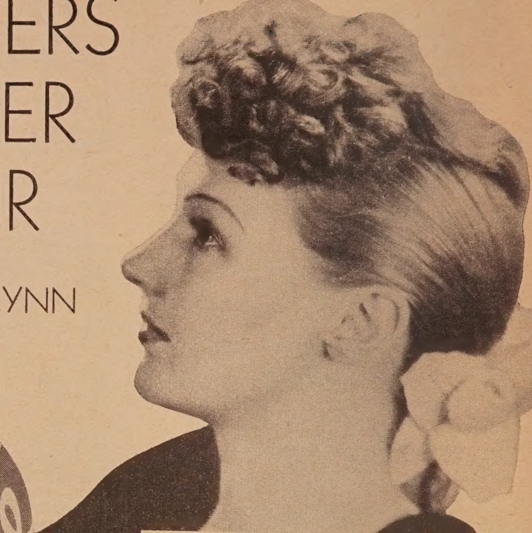
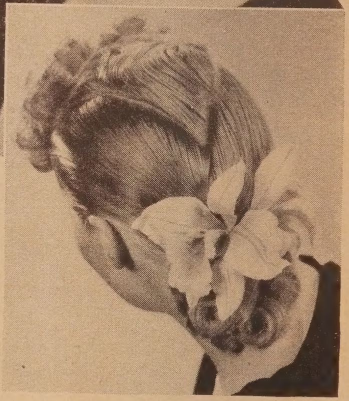
FLOWERS IN HER HAIR

By JANET LYNN

Beauty Service

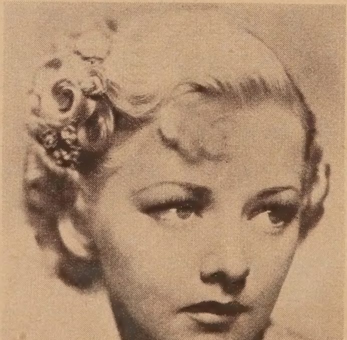


Astrid Allwyn's lovely hairstyle shows masses of curls pinned back by an exotic orchid, separated by a wide expanse of sleek hair and a triangular parting



The orchid, so that it does not protrude but instead seems part of the coiffure, is placed in the natural curve at the very nape of the neck

THESE fascinating new hairstyles worn by Astrid Allwyn, Lois Lindsay and Anita Louise are certainly not suitable for the work-a-day world, but who wants to look as stiff and uninteresting as an adding machine all day long? Much as we modern gals like our jobs, life would be pretty drab if we couldn't forget them one or two evenings a week. . . . And there's nothing like a spray of flowers in our hair to submerge the business automaton and bring out the woman in us!



Pink rosebuds and blue forget-me-nots are woven into the demure yet sophisticated coiffure of Lois Lindsay

But there's a trick to this art of decorating the hair. You can't just grab a rose and graft it onto your ordinary coiffure. It will look as out of place as a dowager at a lunch counter. . . . By studying the photographs of Astrid Allwyn's lovely hairstyle, you'll see what I mean. Notice how the masses of curls are separated by a wide expanse of sleek hair and that odd triangular parting? And how the orchid is placed in the natural curve at the nape of the neck, so that it does not protrude strikingly, but instead seems a part of the coiffure? And isn't the exotic orchid itself much more suitable for this type of coiffure than daisies would be?

This style illustrates another rule in artistic hairdressing that is important. When you have fluffiness or masses of curls on the forehead or top of the head, there should be

GIFTS for BRIDES and GIRL GRADUATES

Aids to beauty that will enchant every woman

IF YOU have a friend who is going to receive a wedding ring or a diploma in June and are wondering what to give her to commemorate the Day, you may find an answer to your problem on this page. . . . At any rate, I hope you'll send cosmetics instead of pickle forks or a pencil set!

For if anyone ever needed gifts of beauty, it's the bride, beginning a lifelong struggle to retain her husband's love and respect, and the graduate, starting out to look for a job. . . .

Husbands like their wives to be dainty, feminine creatures, with an aura of perfume about them, so I can suggest—urge, indeed—a trio of scented bath preparations. What could be more delightful and refreshing than Cheramy's April Showers "Eau de Cologne" (in a smart new bottle), Bath Salts and Dusting Powder (1)? The three can be had for only $3.45.

The first thing a girl should learn when she starts to work in an office is to keep herself well-groomed from 9 till 5—but not to turn her desk into a boudoir. She should keep a kit containing beauty essentials in her desk, then retire with it to refurbish her face. Daggett & Ramsdell's "Beauty-Maker" Kit (2), which looks like a book, contains all that is needed except lipstick and rouge and costs $2.50.

A Ba-bara Bates Basic Manicure Set (3) will be a friend to bride or graduate; for husbands cool when their wives' hands look neglected and employers fire for the same reason. . . . In this $2.75 set are a buffer, nail polish cream, cuticle cream, pusher, nail file and Smoothie (glorified emery board). Ranged beside it are cuticle oil, soap tablets and hand lotion, also by Miss Bates.

Husbands are quite silly about pretty feet, and have a horror of ugly, neglected ones, so it's a smart bride who gives herself regular pedicures and dresses up her toenails as carefully as her fingernails. Dr. Scholl's Toe and Fingernail Requisites Set (4), costing only 75 cents and containing a helpful booklet on the care of the feet, will make this task easy.

INTIMATE SHOPPING TIPS

By MARY PAULINE CALLENDER

Authority on Feminine Hygiene

Naturally, we women can't ask a man clerk about personal hygiene accessories. So let me give you the benefit of my experience on intimate items in which you can have complete confidence. Mary Pauline Callender

For Utmost Comfort

Perhaps a friend has told you about the pinless Kotex belt. It's truly a new design for living! Dainty secure clasps prevent slipping. The belt is flat and thin, woven to a curve that fits. This gives self-balance—you can bend every-which-way without harness-like restraint, without being waist-line conscious! Yet this extra comfort and safety costs nothing extra. Your store has 2 types: Kotex Wonderform at 25c and the DeLuxe at 35c.

For Personal Daintiness

If you've listened to the radio story of Mary Marlin, you've heard me tell how Quest, the positive deodorant powder, assures all-day-long body freshness. And being unscented it can't interfere with your perfume. You'll want Quest for under-arms, feet, and for use on sanitary napkins—it doesn't clog pores or irritate the skin. See how long the large 35c can lasts, and you'll agree this is indeed a small price for the personal daintiness every woman treasures.

For the Last Days

Here's something new that's gaining favor with many women. Invisible sanitary protection of the tampon type—and the name is Fibs. They are a product of the famous Kotex laboratories—the best recommendation I know for hygienic safety. Perhaps you'll want to try Fibs when less protection is needed. They're absolutely secure—may conveniently be carried in your purse for emergency measures. The box of 12 is 25c.

A Gift For You!

In fact, three gifts. One is a booklet by a physician, "Facts about Menstruation." The others are "Marjorie May's 12th Birthday" (for girls of 12) and "Marjorie May Learns About Life" (for girls in their teens). They give facts in a simple motherly manner for you to tell your daughter. All are free—write me for the ones you want. Mary Pauline Callender, Room 1400, 919 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago.

Why Claudette's Love Theory Failed!

By Sonia Lee

CLAUDETTE COLBERT, disciple of the "civilized" marriage while she was the wife of Norman Foster, is now the conventional wife of Dr. Joel Pressman, the distinguished surgeon. It defines her complete change of attitude, of ideas and ideals, and even new values.

Her modern love theories failed, and because she is a girl with an intelligence strong enough and a spirit courageous enough to admit mistakes, she began her second marriage on an entirely different basis from her first.

It marks not only a reversal of conviction, but also the coming-of-age of Claudette Colbert.

She met Norman Foster at the beginning of her ambition, excited by the possibilities in front of her, by the glowing face of success, by all the theories of marriage and of life which the very young hold.

To her a woman's independence was a religion. The maintenance of individuality a creed. Above all, a career was all important and the sacrifice of self not too great a price to pay.

She was dazzled by love, but more dazzled by the future. Because she knew so little of herself, because she was not yet a woman grown, she had no inkling of either the sources of a woman's happiness, nor how to maintain it.

Long before her first marriage ended, she knew that she was missing much in life and in marriage by the way she and Norman lived. In separate establishments, jealously guarding against a blending of personality. Not sharing troubles and tribulations and griefs and disappointments which each encountered.

In constantly turning a bright face to love, they missed the purpose of marriage. Even while Claudette and Norman were passably happy, she realized that that independence of hers robbed her of many of the privileges to which a woman is heir. If she had her independence, she also had no one to make her conscious of her womanhood.

Once she admitted that women were not meant to be independent. That, as a modern woman, [Continued on page 66]

FRED ASTAIRE DANCING

FRED ASTAIRE finds in the morning almost daily letters on the subject of How to Dance. We got to chatting about them recently and this story is the result of that conversation—a sort of general answer to thousands of letters. Fred has been considerably upset about the situation for some time because he's that kind of a guy at heart. But he hasn't known quite what to do about the answers to these requests.

"A dance routine, either taps or ballroom, is no secret," he said as we lit cigarettes and settled down, "but, so help me! I don't know how to explain one, or write about it, so that anybody else could follow it. I'm a lot more used to expressing myself by actually dancing than talking about it. You know, this business of dancing isn't as simple as it might seem. I've worked at it all my life with the result that I'm getting along pretty well right now. Lots of my friends are kind enough to say that they want to learn how to do some of the same things they've seen me do and I'd really love to tell them."

He grinned with that strangely sheepish, boyish quality that he has—especially when he's cornered and made to talk about himself. "It's really quite flattering to have people feel that way, but it makes you feel a little like a heel not to be able to do anything about it. It's not that I don't want to, but, honestly, I don't know where to begin! I've always been afraid that some of them might not understand why they haven't gotten the answers they asked for."

"Sort of puts you behind the eight ball, doesn't it?"

"Behind the eight ball? Don't be silly—there isn't any more room there! Nowadays you have to go behind the nine! But seriously, you can ask a man who has been successful in almost any other line of business how he did it and he can usually come back with some rules like, 'honesty is the best policy', 'go to work early and don't be a clock-watcher', 'never say die' and all that sort of thing as applied to his own line. But theatrical dancing is a different proposition.

"All you can say, really, is that to tap-dance, for example, you just get up there and tap! You probably won't burn up the floor at first, but you've got to keep at it just as a golfer has to keep swinging at the ball to ever develop a good drive.

"One thing about these maxims, though—there is one that definitely does apply to dancing. Never be afraid to work overtime. I've found that some of the best routines and ideas that I've ever had have come a long time after the usual eight hours of work have come and gone. You can't measure work like that in hours, you know.

"MOST people who want to learn this type of dancing seem to start in at the wrong end. An amateur almost always wants to learn 'steps'—where to put their feet when. In a sense, that's almost like a boy just learning to drive a car asking Ralph Di Palma how to skid a racer around a hair-pin bend in a dirt track. One reason for that mistaken approach is that people see a routine that they like. They like it because it's simple—not too full of acrobatics and half-beats—and, because they feel that it is within the realm of possibilities for themselves. They want to go home and try it out if the number really sells itself.

"And that's where the misunderstanding comes in.

"Something is lacking. Then they feel that the thing to do is to ask somebody they feel is expert in the line. I get a few letters and I'm stymied. I don't want to be trite and just tell these friendly people the obvious facts that it takes years of training. Years in which you're trying to harness a vague natural talent that you can never put your finger on, trying to harness it and bring it out. I don't mean just running through a number when a hot tune comes in over the radio. I mean putting in eight solid hours a day working one routine over and over and over again until you wish you'd been better at figures in school and gone into accounting instead.

"Now don't get this wrong. It's important. I don't mean that to painstakingly learn to work through a single short routine is going to take anybody with any natural aptitude years to do. But I do most emphatically say that it will take years to be a dancer. There's as much difference between amateur dancing and professional as there is between a man who can handle his fists and a veteran prizefighter, or between a high school essay writer and a successful novelist.

"Success in any line means the almost unconscious development of style—individual style that sells and marks you apart from competitors in the same field. Now style can't be taught in the usual sense of teaching. And if it could be, I, for one, don't think it ought to be, for the obvious reason that it would stifle all your own individuality that is trying to express itself through dancing in answer to the call of musical rhythm latent in you.

"The result would be a flock of mechanical dancers—and, heaven knows! there are enough of them already. The reason so many of them don't get further along is that the public instinctively realizes that the output is mechanical and therefore a bit inferior. I've been in audiences and watched dancers on the vaudeville stage do taps that for sheer noise and intricate adornment are nothing short of incredible. But they don't sell. I finally came to the conclusion that the reason for it is because they have tried to elevate mechanics to a high art when, actually, mechanics in dancing should only be a means to an end.

By Bill Ulman

A veteran Hollywood writer who scored another fine scoop in securing this authorized story from the screen's foremost dancing star

Gives a LESSON!

You won't be another Astaire after reading this interview, but you will know more about dancing than you ever did before!

ASTAIRE SAYS—

"I do most emphatically say that it will take years to be a dancer."

"I've been in audiences and watched dancers on the vaudeville stage do taps that for sheer noise and intricate adornment are nothing short of incredible. But they don't sell."

"You've got to learn to dance before you can tap or go in for elaborate steps."

"It's like this: The reactions of your muscles and limbs to a certain musical impulse should be mechanically automatic, just as a good driver is never acutely conscious of shifting gears. It's the driver who has to think before each move he makes that usually causes accidents. We say, 'He didn't react quickly enough to avoid the smash.' The trouble was that he had to think what to do. A fighter in the ring is in the same spot. If he has to stop and think, 'Now's the time for the old one-two punch!', he'll probably end that thought in a horizontal position. His opponent may be a much dumber man, but, because he reacted on instinct, he got in there first.

"TO BE brief, you've got to learn to dance before you can tap or go in for elaborate steps. Everyone thinks they have a swell sense of balance because they can usually keep on their feet, but in creative dancing that balance must be spelled with a capital 'B' and it can only be acquired to a fine point by years of seemingly useless and boring practice. A sense of rhythm does not necessarily follow just because you appreciate good stuff for what it is. To be really rhythmical your muscles must be so educated to music that they react almost without conscious volition. And, believe me, it does take years of work to accomplish those two fundamentals—and, strangely, you're never conscious of the change within yourself until somebody says, 'Boy! How you've changed!' and then you come back, 'Changed? What do you mean! You're crazy! I've always been this way!'

"The next step is a lot easier—and that is the step that so many people write to me for help in long before they've accomplished the other two. When you come to harnessing the accumulated subconscious knowledge you've absorbed through the multitude of sweating hours and expressing [Continued on page 86]

What the talented girl they call "Hollywood's finest actress" is really like

DAVID WARK GRIFFITH, veteran producer of Filmdom, stopped speaking and cleared his throat. . . .

Thousands crowded the spectacular Los Angeles Biltmore Bowl that night of the Motion Picture Arts and Sciences Academy ball, but there was no sound among them now. They were waiting for the climax of the night—the awarding of the year's trophy for the best screen performance by an actress.

D. W. Griffith, master of ceremonies, cleared his throat again. The silence, now, was one of those that fancy writers call "deafening." Then—

Bette Davis dancing with her husband, Harmon O. Nelson, on whom she loves to play practical jokes. They are one of Hollywood's most devoted couples

"To Miss Bette Davis, for her work in Dangerous, I—"

But they didn't wait for him to finish, that crowd at the Biltmore Bowl. They clapped and stamped and cheered as the spotlight picked out a little blonde girl and followed her progress from a table near the dance floor to the speakers' platform. . . . A little girl wearing a blue and white print frock with severe lapels —and no jewels. . . . The pretty but simple kind of costume a co-ed might wear dancing on a Friday night.

She stopped before the master of ceremonies. Took the proffered award. Spoke her thanks briefly, generously giving credit to director and producer of the picture that won her this tribute. . . . Returned to her table, the small gold figurine in her hands.

"It—it's a pretty little doll, isn't it?" she said. Flippant words, you're thinking, aren't you? But they were just a game bluff. Bette Davis was as near to crying that moment as she had been, off the screen, for a long, long time. She wasn't meaning to be flippant. She was only trying not to—as she told me later —"break down and howl."

Bette Davis is fond of outdoor sports and "roughing it." She admires courage greatly, and the reason is revealed in this story

You see, there was drama back of that Academy Award for 1935 to Bette Davis. The world knows the story—how she had to wait a year for the tribute that many thought should have come to her last year for her work in Of Human Bondage.

But now that rankling disappointment was over. The award was hers. Academy members were claiming her First Lady of Hollywood. The world, too. Fame is fickle and fortune fleeting, but on this night, Bette Davis had in her possession a tangible symbol of success.

As it happened, the next day I had lunch in Hollywood with a friend from out of town.

Franchot Without JOAN

By James Reid

FRANCHOT TONE and Joan Crawford will never make another picture together. So say the gossips, who point out that few Hollywood couples ever have appeared together on the screen after marriage. But ask Franchot if he and Joan may star together soon, and this is his answer: "I certainly hope so."

A surprising answer, perhaps. But Franchot is a surprising person—one of the best actors on the screen, one of the most popular, and one of the least known.

He is known as an actor, thanks to the screen. He is known as the constant companion of Joan Crawford, thanks to the columnists and news photographers. But he is not known as Franchot Tone, human being. Believe it or not—his whole story has never been told. The story of how he happened to land in Hollywood. I interviewed him between scenes of The Unguarded Hour, in which, as co-stars, he and Loretta Young play man and wife, surrounded by an all-British cast that includes Roland Young, Dudley Digges and John Buckler. He plays a young English lord, a prominent barrister-at-law, who is thrust by a strange set of circumstances into the position of defending himself against the charge of murder. Just before our interview began, he finished a courtroom scene in which Loretta appears as a surprise witness. A dramatic moment, in which he had to portray suppressed emotion, wearing the white wig and long black robe that dignify English law in English courtrooms, even today.

As he walked off the set toward his "dressing-room," a cubicle of canvas erected in one corner of the huge sound stage, he still looked magisterial, despite the cigarette he was smoking. He is easily six feet tall, and draws every advantage from his height with his erectness. That is the first thing that you note, meeting him face to face. Next you note his eyes—brown, alert and appraising. His high forehead. His firm chin. His wide, slow, diffident smile. Here, you instantly feel, is a man who is more sensitive than most, more thoughtful than most, who makes no "snap" decisions, but holds firmly to the decisions that he does make.

That impression is borne out by his story.

"It wasn't until my junior year at Cornell that I thought I might become an actor," Franchot told me. "From then on, it was in the back of my mind. But so was teaching. And so was law.

"The dramatic club crystallized my ambitions. I wanted something to do on the campus, and I decided that I wouldn't be happy until I joined the dramatic club. So I tried that first. And I stayed with it for the rest of college. Professor A. M. Drummond, head of the Public Speaking Department and a great teacher, was the first person who gave me an idea that I might become an actor—that

Save Hollywood's

Says DOLORES

A frank interview with a long-famous star who sincerely believes Hollywood is in danger of losing its magic name

By Arden Russell

DOLORES DEL RIO—It is my good fortune to know her well. And I promise you that it does not matter how often one sees her, tribute to her beauty comes breathlessly with each meeting. That clear, shining beauty which is but more luminous after ten years in Hollywood. I watched as she entered her great living room where I was waiting. Watched the young grace of her as she crossed the black lacquer floor, a gown of soft white chiffon billowing and trailing about her. A gown the Greeks might have envied for their goddesses. Skin of a honey clearness and color. Hair of midnight. Deep black eyes in sooty-lashed frames. A warm scarlet mouth, and a low true voice colored ever so little with the remnants of an accent.

I, who felt that the thing which had happened to Hollywood, was that it was losing glamour!

We sat before the wide chromium faced fireplace in her living room. Her slender hands had exercised their legerdemain among the eggshell china, the shimmering silver of her tea service. I knew as I accepted the cup that my tea would grow cold as my eyes were filled with the warmth of appreciation which Dolores inspires. She who has kept her faith with Hollywood. With her public. With herself!

"Yes, I think a little thing is wrong with Hollywood. A tragic thing may happen, though each day a little prayer-refrain goes through my mind. 'Please don't let it happen. Don't let glamour die!'"

"I do not know exactly why this is happening. I do know how it is happening. In a hundred tiny ways the stars themselves are responsible for the gradual waning of glamour. Suddenly the cry is 'be human' . . . 'be like everyone else', where it used to be . . . 'be different' . . . 'be sincerely yourself'. There is a great energy expended in an eagerness to impress the public that Gloria Gorgeous whose beauty and loveliness on the screen stops one's breath, is just a sweet little girl whose every thought is the same as any Susan Jones in any Cobbs Corners.

"I think this is wrong. I think that the public does not go to see its favorite on the screen because that favorite is like them. They want to feel she is different. They do not want to feel they share the same problems. Perhaps I do not put this too well, but you know the saying . . . familiarity breeds contempt? That is true. Is it true because only a friend 'is one who knows all about you and loves you just the same?'

"It is not necessary to put on an act, as you say. But I deem it necessary to dare to avoid putting on an act. Really, everyone is different. Why should we then suddenly try to be all alike?

"Height, five feet, three inches . . . weight, one hundred and fifteen

Dolores Del Rio has stayed longer in the spotlight than most of her sister stars—and the reason is that she has retained her glamour

GLAMOUR!

DEL RIO

"I shall not become old and sere with the regret of things I have left undone"

Is Dolores Del Rio Right?

"We should never be careless about our obligations to our public. I am no more sincere about anything in my life than I am about that. I do not subscribe to this new fashion of making ourselves as uninteresting as possible."

pounds . . . hair, platinum blonde . . . or, as it is at this moment, brownette? Wear the hair to the shoulders, drive your own car, wear no make-up, live as Susan Jones lives. I cannot believe that is what Cobbs Corners or Susan Jones wants.

"I am a movie fan myself. Truly I am. And I know I want to feel the star dust in my eyes about my favorites. I want them to have something I do not have. I do not want to have what they have. I do not want to know what cold cream they use . . . I do not want to see pictures of them over a cook-stove . . . even if they are good cooks, I do not care to see them cooking!

"We should never be careless about our obligations to our public. I am no more sincere about anything in my life than I am about that. I do not subscribe to this new fashion of making ourselves as uninteresting as possible. As 'natural', they call it, as possible. Why, suddenly, is 'naturalness' synonymous with doing many things which actresses never thought of doing before?

"Why should I change my way of living? I have organized my life for my happiness. I love beauty in everything. In my home, in my garden, in my wardrobe, in my very food! Many people may not love beauty as I do . . . but they will not dislike me for being true to myself. Now, will they?"

SHE paced across the soft white rug of the room, paused beside the low wide, shining crystal coffee table freighted with the tea things and a great bowl of fragrant lilies.

"If I am living honestly . . . then I am living glamorously. I cannot, for the life of me, see any drama, any vitality in living according to a pattern set by someone else. Some one who does not look like you, think like you . . . feel like you.

"Life is so very, very short. I live every moment fully. I do the things I want to do. Each morning I awake to adventure of a new day. I shall not become old and sere with the regret of things I have left undone. I shall not make of my days a memory chain of boredom, unfulfillment. When my life is done, I shall know that it has glittered brightly. With happiness one day. Glittered brightly with tears the next, perhaps. It will not have been fogged with the monotone of 'you must do this, or you must do that.'

"How can an actress retain mystery, allure, in this new scheme of things? They have it on the screen. They are expressing themselves on the screen. Why, oh why, must they be so conscientiously eager to destroy it in their off-screen lives?"

You never see Dolores shopping on the boulevard in slacks, face unpowdered, hair ungroomed, disfiguring dark glasses accenting a failure at disguise. A great, streamlined town car of polished maroon and sparkling chromium glides noiselessly to the entrance of a shop. A broad-shouldered, impassive-faced chauffeur leaps to attention as he swings open its door. There is a pause . . . no wild-haired, nervous, chattering female catapults self-consciously across the walk, but a graceful, exquisitely groomed young woman, of serene assurance, emerges. Youngsters swarm from nowhere . . . grubby bits of paper are held toward her. "Autograph!" The chauffeur hands her a gold pen. She smiles seeingly at each of the signature supplicants . . . the large, angular hieroglyphics of her signature are penned on each piece of paper . . . the crowd smiles shyly and quietly . . . they open a path for her in wide-eyed silence. Del Rio has passed!

"They do not jostle and laugh and kid with her passing. They wonder and go their way with an indelible vision in their memory! She has not lessened the

NORMA SHEARER —from Extra Girl to Stardom!

Norma as she appeared in Pleasure Mad in 1923

The new story of a great favorite whose rise to fame was a Hollywood miracle

Leslie Howard as Romeo and Norma Shearer as Juliet. Of all the women who have played this famous Shakespearian rôle, Norma is the most beautiful, Hollywood contends

THEY are calling Norma Shearer the most beautiful Juliet of them all. And when you consider the album of beauties who have portrayed the immortal Juliet, this is really something. To me, however, the amazing thing is the fact that the girl who rates these plaudits was, a few short years ago, merely an extra.

From extra girl to Juliet—no wonder we call Hollywood a Magical City! It is stories like Norma Shearer's which make it so. A novelist in search of a heroine or an ambitious girl looking for a model to copy might each find in the romantic life story of Norma Shearer a source of inspiration.

Originally, Norma possessed no genius qualities. There was about her no flaming aura which caused those with whom she came in contact to predict that she would go far. Indeed, none other than the great Zeigfeld assured her that she had "nothing to offer." And D. W. Griffith advised her to go back to her home town and forget her dream of being a screen star. "Your eyes are too pale. They can never be photographed successfully," he told her.

But neither of these men took into consideration the three basic assets which Norma Shearer possessed in a marked degree—ambition, a driving energy, and brains. These three attributes would have carried Norma to the top of any profession she might have chosen to follow. That she chose acting as a profession was due, in part, to the influence of an actress aunt who paid frequent visits to the Shearer home when Norma was a little gadget.

But let's tell Norma's story in continuity.

It begins on Grosvenor Avenue in Westmont, a suburb of Montreal. It was here that Norma was born. She was the youngest of three children. Her father was the president of the Shearer Construction Company, a flourishing concern which had been established by Norma's grandfather, who crossed the sea in a wind-jammer.

Her childhood was happy and carefree. Her summers were spent swimming and sailing on the Canadian lakes. In winter, she skiied and skated and went sleigh riding behind her dad's spirited horses. As a youngster Norma wore boys' clothes and played boys' games. She could ride without a saddle and sail a catboat almost as soon as she could walk.

She did not go to school until she was ten. The reason was that Norma didn't want to go to school. Her mother, wisely, did not force her to go. At this time Norma's absorbing interest was music. And she showed such marked talent that her teacher was convinced that she would one day become a celebrated concert pianist.

But Fate, Destiny, whatever you choose to call it, prevented that.

A series of circumstances brought about the collapse of the Shearer Construction Company. Overnight, almost, everything

DID YOU KNOW THAT—

Norma Shearer was once told that her pale eyes would prevent a successful screen career . . . She did not go to school until she was ten years old . . . She once "plugged" songs in a music store . . . Having relatives in the theater, she began at an early age to dabble in grease paint . . . By selling a piano, she and her mother secured enough money to purchase railroad tickets to New York, where Norma's career began and "ended" abruptly?

By Grace Mack

the Shearer family had was lost, including their home. They moved to a tiny house in another part of town. The three children started looking for work.

Norma, who was only about fifteen, talked herself into a job as a song-plugger in a Montreal music store. She who had been brought up on Bethoven and Brahms found herself pounding out such jazz gems as They're Wearing 'em Higher in Hawaii and Naughty, Naughty, Naughty, for ten dollars a week. She confesses that as a hot pianist she was only lukewarm. But she managed to stick it out for nearly a week. During that week she did a lot of serious thinking.

"My mother's brother was married to an actress," says Norma in speaking of the first flutterings of her desire to act. "They had their own stock company and each summer they paid us a visit. I had often sat wide-eyed, listening to their exciting stories of the glamorous world behind the footlights. My greatest thrill, however, had been to unpack my aunt's make-up kit and with her help transform myself into an amazing and, to me, enchanting creature with long, black-beaded lashes and scarlet cheeks and mouth. Dressed in one of her stage gowns I paraded before the mirror, imitating the actresses I had seen in the theater in Montreal.

"NOW that it had become necessary for me to earn my living I naturally thought of the stage as a career. I talked it over with my aunt and she encouraged me. 'But if you're going to be an actress,' she told me, 'New York is the place for you to go. Of course you're too young to go there alone. Your mother would have to go with you.' She might just as well have suggested that we go to the moon for we had absolutely nothing to use for railroad fare. Finally, I had a bright idea. My piano—I would sell that."

The sale of the piano brought enough money to buy railroad tickets for Norma, her mother, and her sister Athole. Armed with a letter which the aunt had given them to a friend who had a rooming house, they set forth.

Monopoly on Beauty

VIRGINIA BRUCE

There may be arguments concerning which Hollywood star comes first in beauty, but few will quarrel over the fact that Virginia Bruce is a leading contender for that honor. An ex-Follies girl and ex-wife of the late John Gilbert, Virginia represents the exotic type of American beauty. It is no wonder that she was selected for an important rôle in The Great Ziegfeld

MARY LOU DIX

At first glance Mary Lou may suggest to your mind the glamorous personality of another star. Dietrich, for instance? Or, Twelvetrees? Columbia directors say she isn't a composite of a glittering bevy of beauties but a definite, provocative individual that you'll get to know better when she appears in The King Steps Out. She was once a member of the famous Goldwyn Girls

CAROLE LOMBARD

Here is the summer girl, the June bride, the gay divorcée, the alluring widow, the sirenic blonde, the scintillating star, the come-hither vixen, the amusing guest, the sophisticated hostess. In short, it is Carole Lombard, posed by an imaginative photographer who harnessed the sun-arcs in his stillroom to bring out devastating lights and shadows and achieve a photographic masterpiece

GLORIA STUART

No list of Hollywood's beautiful women would be complete without Gloria Stuart, a blond vision whose personality is as intriguing as her appearance. Gloria, at present, is working with Shirley Temple in her new picture, Poor Little Rich Girl

ANITA LOUISE

A breath-taking portrait of Anita. You may not believe it, but the costume is a nightgown designed to be worn in Anthony Adverse. Anita thinks it so beautiful that she wants to purchase it for her own personal wardrobe as a hostess gown

Janet Gaynor, who appears with Robert Taylor in Small Town Girl, is somewhat like the girl he may marry, but she's not the one!

ROBERT TAYLOR'S Ideal Sweetheart

You may have some of the qualifications Robert Taylor demands. Read this story!

By Jerry Lane

IN THE spring a young man's fancy . . . turns to his Ideal Sweetheart! And Robert Taylor is no exception. Ordinarily it's as difficult to make Bob talk about women as it is to get a Lindbergh interview, but this time he melted. Maybe it was the fragrance of jasmine floating through the window that did the trick. Or the fresh row of tulips out in his garden. Or Irene Hervey's new spring hat—he'd just come from lunch with her. Anyway, Bob fell to discussing Woman. The Woman who could capture his dreams—and his heart—come leap year or any other time.

"I suppose every man has his Ideal Girl," he remarked. "The one he hopes to find some day and marry. That's only natural. Sometimes he has a distinct mental picture of her. But I think most men only know what they like in a girl and they look for that. Complexion doesn't matter. They don't give a whoop if she's a blonde, brunette or redhead so long as she measures up in other ways. At least that's the way I feel about it.

"I've sort of built up my ideal as I went along. Not from any storybook heroine but from the girls I've known. She is a composite of the qualities I liked best in each one.

"For instance," Bob shifted in his deep arm chair, lit his pipe and stared at the tulips, "there was that little sixteen-year-old blonde back in Nebraska. Boy, she had a number one talent that is irresistible to any mere man," he grinned reminiscently. "She actually listened to you! I don't mean she was in any way the simpering kind but she did make you feel you were the only one. You had her full, complete, and undivided attention. And that, I've learned since, is an art. You take some girls out and their glance is a million miles away. Everything distracts them. No matter what you start to talk about, they veer off the subject like a sailor on ice. But not Marie. She helped along and put you at ease. That's a wonderful gift in any girl.

"Then there was the Scripps College junior I met while I was studying out here in California at Pomona. She was the first real love of my life. I'll probably never be able to forget her entirely. She was small—and I've preferred them that way ever since. She was gracious—another requisite my ideal has to have. And she was wholly feminine. There was nothing of this hail-fellow-well-met about her, although she was a gay companion. No parading of efficiency. If she was brilliant and ambitious she certainly didn't make an issue of it.

"You know," Bob mused, "it's funny how women throw away their biggest asset, femininity. They want to meet a man on his own grounds and I think that in itself kills romance for the majority of men. What's the use of having an Ideal Girl if you can't look up to her and feel she's on some higher level? You want her a little mysterious, a little hard to attain. But not too hard, of course . . .

"That was the trouble with this lady. I asked her to marry me—and she promptly married someone else.

"For three months I was sunk. In fact, I thought I was through with women forever. When I heard our

GARY'S FIRST LOVE

By Clark Warren

His first love and last—not in the ordinary sense—is a love that great men sometimes have

THE line sang through the air and the fly dropped gently on the surface of the pool. The fish doesn't live that would have been startled by that finished dexterity in casting a line at twenty yards.

Gary Cooper smiled contentedly as he ambled forward, smoothly reeling in his line. He hadn't said a word, but if you know your "Coop" you'd have known that he was supremely happy, his eyes gleaming in faint anticipation.

He wasn't in the High Sierras after trout. He was standing on "The Campus," the small enclosed square of lawn and pond within the Paramount studio grounds, testing out a rod and reel. Gary was getting ready to go fishing, I figured, as I watched him. He nodded as he passed me sitting on the steps of his dressing-room.

"Good rod, that!"

I nodded.

He returned in a minute with a new bolt-action .30-06 rifle. It was a pretty gun and he handled it with reverent care, gently caressing the stock of fine curly walnut, his eye dancing as he cast it along the slender, blue-black barrel. He drew a slow, steady bead on the radiator cap of Mae West's car two blocks away, bringing the gleaming object to a fine sight on the crossed hair-lines of the telescopic sights. He grunted in satisfaction.

I waited for him to start talking. Sometimes he does, sometimes he doesn't. I felt that this was apt to be a good day for "Coop" for two reasons. One was that all this preparation signified he was getting ready for another trip; the other was that he had grunted twice in fifteen minutes and had given voice to the remark about the rod. With Gary that approaches the garrulous. He'd rather do things than talk about them.

His mother still tells the tale of Gary coming back from his African hunting trip. All they could get out of him was that "nothing much happened. Just wandered around with a few fellows and got a couple of shots in." The next day mounted heads and tanned hides, elephant tusks and native spears began arriving in drays. Of course, nothing much could have happened while he was in Africa!

But, as I say, I'd just dropped in to see what the gods had in store and it seemed that they were being good. I felt that I might even toss in a leading question.

"Heard you were buzzing off to Bermuda again?"

"Yeah . . . sail fish are runnin'."

"How come the fly rod and carbine on a Bermuda trip?"

"Oh, I dunno. . . . Reckon we might stop off some place on the way." He carefully swabbed the barrel with absorbent cotton, squinted down the graceful sworls of the rifling, each ridge as sharp and true as the day he bought it. Great indication of a man's character, that. Sloppy guns and tackle and you're a sloppy man. He grinned. "You never know when they'll come in handy. . . . Did I

CAST from your mind any thoughts that one must be intricate to be original. There is originality in studied simplicity and good taste in utilitarian design.

Such impressions one carries away after a visit with Samuel Lange, Columbia's latest acquisition in the cinema fashion field. This brilliant designer is outstanding in that his originality springs from basic simplicities rather than bizarre intricacies. His style is developed from a basic theme and his designs possess a smart practical simplicity.

In the first category Lange expresses a new and refreshing idea. In creating his clothes his thought is not only to dress the star in the latest fashion but rather to bring to that star the influence of the country suggested by her personality. For example, Marian Marsh suggests "English" while Fay Wray's type brings to mind the south seas and the Orient. Lange does not believe in bringing the current mode to the star unless, as such, it particularly suits her individual type of beauty. Therefore, even in this day of varied style influences, he chooses from none but instead delves into books on ancient art and history and studies old customs. This "basic" research enables him to bring new and exciting hidden influences into his fashions. By this method he is capable of instilling an entirely new motive in each and

MODEL Your Way

There is one sure way into the movies, and you can travel that route!

Lovely Jane Hamilton attracted attention as a model and won a contract at RKO studios

Statuesque Virginia Reid stepped from her career as a model into the movies. Her newest picture is I Dream too Much, in which Lily Pons scored a sensational success

The most famous of all ex-models—Norma Shearer, whose face appeared in advertisements for automobile tires long before she thought of the screen as a possible life career

Success for you as a model if you can answer yes to these seven questions.

1—Have I perfect features?
2—Am I intelligent?
3—Am I good natured, adaptable?
4—Is my beauty of the natural rather than the artificial type?
5—Am I self-reliant, resourceful?
6—Am I self-critical and can I take constructive criticism from others?
7—Does my beauty photograph well?

IF YOU have what it takes to be a professional model, you have what it takes to get a screen test. And if a screen test is all that you need to convince Hollywood that it needs you—well, we'll be seeing you in the movies!

Norma Shearer modeled for New York photographers before she ever stepped before a movie camera. So did Frederic March, Kay Francis, Barbara Stanwyck, Helen Vinson, Dolores Costello, Constance Cummings. Today, there are nearly half a hundred stars and featured players in Hollywood "who wouldn't be there if they hadn't been in this modeling business first." The quotes are from the one man who knew all of them "when"—when they were unknowns. His name is John Robert Powers. He is head of the oldest, biggest and best models' agency in the world.

He has been called "the Ziegfeld of the modeling business." Actually, he supplied Ziegfeld with many of his beauties. He sees more pretty girls in one year than the late Great Glorifier saw in ten—and has started far more on bright, well-paying careers. For when this handsome, forty-three-year-old, happily married Irishman looks over candidates for modeling, he isn't seeking one certain type; he is constantly looking for new, individual faces and personalities. Which is just what the movies themselves are seeking—if there is talent to back up individuality. Studio talent scouts are constantly asking to test Powers girls. And when John Powers feels that one of his models is ready, in every way for a screen test, he sees to it that she gets it.

For example, that beautiful girl in the cigarette ads, the glamorous soap ads and smart fashion photos. Her name is Anita Counihan. She has been a model for just a year and a half. During most of that time, the see-all columnists have raved about her as the most beautiful example of animated femininity in New York. Talent scouts have long had their eyes on her. A few days ago, Powers felt that she was ready for a screen test and arranged one for her with RKO-Radio. And not only did she photograph like the proverbial million dollars; she also showed that all-essential spark of personality, of self-expression.

Studios, you have heard, won't spend money to teach acting finesse to unknowns these days. Well, RKO-Radio is spending money to teach Anita Counihan—and the teacher is none other than Frances Robinson-Duff, who has been dramatic coach to such stars as Katharine Hepburn and Miriam Hopkins, among others. Anita is worth some expenditure. You see, she has been a model.

Do you remember the name of Marjorie Weaver? You will! Several months ago, she won a nationwide beauty contest conducted by SCREEN BOOK. Her photograph stood out from several hundred, and she was given as a prize, a three-months course in a famous New York dancing school. Soon after her arrival in New York from Louisville, Kentucky, several talent scouts registered interest in her, but did nothing about it. Marjorie not only worked with a will at her dancing; she also studied dramatics, and—she became a photographic model in her spare time. She had posed for a mere handful of photographers when the talent scouts were at her door, insisting on tests. Today she holds a Warner Brothers contract. She is on her way to Hollywood, fame and fortune.

IT ISN'T accidental that so many models win screen chances—or that so many ex-models are today's screen stars. John Powers says, "It would be far more easy for a model to become a movie star than for a movie star to become a model." There are reasons. Ten of them. And again I repeat: If you have what it takes to be a professional model, you have what it takes to get a screen test.

But what does it take to become a model? There are ten primary requirements. Let me tell you about them. Let me tell you about them in the form of ten questions. Ask yourself these questions—answer them honestly. Then, if you think you can answer them to John Powers' satisfaction, he will be waiting to see you. The Address is 247 Park Avenue, New York City—and his office is on the second floor. Don't write or telephone first. Walk in. He can't judge you without seeing you.

These, then, are the ten questions that John Powers would recommend that any would-be model should ask herself:

1. Do you have perfect features—well-balanced

HOW PICTURES ARE RATED

★★★★ Perfect Picture. ★★★ Good Entertainment. ★★ Not Bad. ★ Ho Hum! SCREEN BOOK'S strict standard of rating is applied without discrimination to all pictures. Readers are urged to remember, however, that even in the "Ho Hum!" classification may be occasional scenes to make a movie-goer glad he didn't stay home with the cat. PERSONAL

By Eleanor Barnes

Every picture honestly reviewed at its first Hollywood showing. Follow the star ratings!

Gary Cooper and Jean Arthur, stars of Mr. Deeds Goes to Town, score the best performances of their careers under the masterful direction of Frank Capra

I Married A Doctor

★★★½

COMEDY DRAMA—The rich, human document by Sinclair Lewis, Main Street, has come to the screen under the new title, altered somewhat, but sticking close enough to the original idea to retain its appeal and dramatic values.

It is outstandingly good in adaptation, and the performance of Josephine Hutchinson, as the bride who goes to the small town from the big city, is appealing and graceful. Miss Hutchinson's forté is for this type of thing, but unfortunately, until now, she has appeared too fragile to be clearly etched as a personality.

Surprisingly good is Pat O'Brien, as Dr. Will Kennicott, and here once again is proved that an actor, if given new things to do will escape himself. O'Brien has been hard-boiled so many times that audiences almost expect to see him only that way.

Archie Mayo's direction is smooth and convincing.

Ross Alexander, however, with over enthusiasm, has made the young Swede farmer who wants to be an artist, just a nut. Perhaps he was too ambitious and suffered as the result, thus weakening the structure of the plot.

There are many distinguished names in the supporting cast. Guy Kibbee does a neat job as a leading town citizen; Louise Fazenda's semi-comic Swedish maid is an improvement on her old broad comedy characterization; Ray Mayer, as the town radical is exceptionally good; and Sam Wren, Margaret Irving, Janet Young and others reflect the nice tempo established by the director.

CRITICAL COMMENT: Careful consideration for Sinclair Lewis' classical characters, with a sincere approach to the underlying theme in the book, Main Street.—Produced by Warner Brothers.

Mr. Deeds Goes To Town

ROMANTIC COMEDY—Director Frank Capra goes to town again, in very good company. He takes with him his old side kick, Robert Riskin, whose way of adapting stories to the screen is nothing short of genius, and he carts with him Gary Cooper and Jean Arthur.

This is a picture that embodies all the virtues of a good entertainment. It has a fine theme: the hero is an idealistic, practical man, despite the fact that he plays a tuba in a small town band and writes poems for Christmas cards. His philosophy is kindly and sensible, although at times it has earmarks of being screwy.

It has drama: the hero receives $20,000,000 from an uncle he doesn't know and is lifted from his lethargic life into the active and deceptive environment of a rich man being taken by those who want his money.

It has love interest: a heroine who must decide between her duty as a newspaperwoman and her love for the man. This is excellently worked out by the authors and turned to a delicious brown by the director and players.

PREVIEWS

Leading characters in Hollywood's most ambitious spectacle, The Great Ziegfeld. Luise Rainer, William Powell and Myrna Loy give excellent performances

Shirley Temple succumbs to the DeMille complex and does a bathtub scene for Poor Little Rich Girl. The miniature aquarium is a novel and interesting touch

Josephine Hutchinson discovers just what it means to be a doctor's wife in a small town. A scene from I Married a Doctor, in which she appears with Pat O'Brien

It has fun: a small-town hero experiencing the joys of playing fireman in a big city, and going on a branigan with some newly found acquaintances.

It has pathos: hundreds of hungry and penniless Americans seeking aid from a benefactor, and their explanations of their unfortunate circumstances.

It has satire: meetings of philanthropic and civic groups discussing the deficit in artistic enterprises.

It has circumstantial evidence: the hero defends himself on a charge of insanity because of his hair-brained exuberance over romance. This episode will make every theatergoer think seriously about the amazing way their chickens will come home to roost.

It has fantasy: two old ladies descending upon a courtroom from an atmosphere of the past.

It has suspense: in several scenes, once when the hero discovers himself betrayed by the girl he loves, and again when he is held on a lunacy charge.

It has farce: grand, extravagant moments, scattered throughout the piece.

It has brought back a good, old-fashioned word called pixilated.

Audiences are pixilated with absolute joy when they behold Mr. Deeds Goes to Town.

CRITICAL COMMENT: The most delightful excursion in the theater in months.—Produced by Columbia Pictures.

Sutter's Gold

★★★½

EPIC ADVENTURE—Not attempting to stick too closely to fact, but telling with gripping force and beauty the futile attempt of a man to create an agricultural empire when fate decreed that gold should be found on his property, this film has a potency difficult to achieve in 82 minutes of screening.

Jack Kirkland, Walter Woods and George O'Neil intelligently knitted together this tale that adquately selected high-spots of the glamorous era, concentrating upon sweeping melodrama in the early episode and the pathos of the finale where Sutter, old and broken, is tragically evicted from the land he hoped to restore.

Edward Arnold of Diamond Jim fame, plays Sutter. He does a fine bit af aging, not only through the aid of the make-up department, but in the spirit of the character. His voice, his great bulk and his apparent sincerity stand the test of a difficult rôle.

Lee Tracy, as Sutter's ne'er-do-well companion, who always complains and threatens to quit him, but never does, is a fine complement to the star, Arnold.

Binnie Barnes provides the sexy complications as a Russian siren who leaves Sutter after his power is gone. She is lovely to look at.

Katherine Alexander's sympathetic rôle as Mrs. Sutter, deserves worthy comment.

An amazingly good cast, with William Janney and Nan Grey, Harry Carey, Robert Warwick, James Marshall, Montagu Love, Billy Gilbert and others.

This film is exquisitely treated photographically by George Robinson and the art direction is superb, credit going to Albert D'Agostino.

CRITICAL COMMENT: Painstaking detail has been utilized by Director Cruze, who highlights each episode with delicate irony or human understanding. This film deserves serious consideration by thoughtful movie fans as an intelligent picturization of a little-known phase of U. S. history.—Produced by Universal.

Take the Guesswork out of your permanent wave . .

COARSE POROUS
BRITTLE FINE

Did you ever stop to think that your hair is just as individual as your fingerprint? You know, of course, that some hair is oily—other hair dry; that there is elastic—porous—brittle—coarse—fine—strong and weak hair, as well as many other types.

And to insure absolute success of your Permanent Wave . . . the material used must be scientifically correct for your particular type of hair.

Would you like to take the guesswork out of your next Permanent? Of course, you would. And now for the first time you can be sure before you enter your favorite beauty shop that—

1. Your hair has been scientifically and microscopically tested for tensile strength, quality and texture.
2. The material used for your wave is exactly right for your type of hair.
3. The solution and pads used on your head are your own personal property—fresh and clean.
4. That you have taken every precaution to insure perfect satisfaction with your next Permanent.

HAIR SERVICE, INC. offers you, FREE . . . this scientific test of your hair. Simply cut a small strand of your hair, and send it to us. We agree to diagnose and analyze your hair and will send you a personal permanent wave unit, consisting of the proper solution for your hair and 36 permanent wave pads! More than enough for most heads. Take them to your favorite beauty shop and be assured that the materials used are comparable with those used in giving most $10.00 permanents—that they are hygienically safe, and can be used with practically any permanent wave machine.

Remember . . . you pay only $1.00 for the solution and pads. The personal scientific analysis is FREE. You may pay postman if you prefer.

Don't let Adolescent Pimples be a handicap to YOU

AFTER the beginning of adolescence—from about 13 to 25, or even longer—many young people are troubled by pimples.

During these years, important glands develop and final growth takes place. This causes disturbances throughout the body. The skin gets oversensitive. Waste poisons in the blood irritate this sensitive skin and pimples break out.

Fleischmann's fresh Yeast is often prescribed to help get rid of adolescent pimples. It clears these skin irritants out of the blood. Then—pimples go!

Eat 3 cakes daily—one about ½ hour before each meal. Eat it regularly—plain, or in a little water—until your skin clears. Start today!

DUART WAVES ARE THE CHOICE OF THE HOLLYWOOD STARS

NEW TYPE CREME OVERNIGHT

by DORIS DUMONT

HELP! I'm becoming hysterical. Phones ring, photographers dash in and out, mail pours in by the bagful, four secretaries work at racing speed to keep up. Who would have thought the introduction of this new type creme made from milk would have caused such a tidal wave of interest. Excuse me if I sound breathless and confused. The magazine has just wired, "Where is your article—you are late," so I'm writing this and eating a three o'clock sandwich at the same time (no lunch today), for this copy must make the next air mail.

BEAUTY editors of famous magazines and newspapers all over the country are writing, wiring and telephoning for information to give their readers on this, the first beauty creme ever made from milk. At the same time, stars, social celebrities, and hundreds of others just like yourself, dear reader, are writing in to say that never in all their lives have they used any creme, lotion or soap, that produced such marvelous results—and so quickly. I'm not good at astrology or fortune telling but I predict right here and now that Creme of Milk—that's the name of this new type creme, will revolutionize the whole face creme industry. As you perhaps know there are thousands of brands of face creme, but never before in all the world has anyone succeeded in making a face creme from pure, fresh, dairy milk. Let me pause here and give you briefly the reasons why Creme of Milk is such an overnight sensation.

ABOVE: Gilda Grey, soon to be seen in "The Great Ziegfeld," says, "Every beauty-wise woman knows that nothing can replace milk on the skin."

MILK has been famous as the Number 1 skin beautifier for thousands (yes, thousands!) of years. Scientists have now found out why. Milk contains certain delicate oils that are very closely related to the natural oils of the human skin. You see both the milk oils and the skin's own oil are produced by the same natural process—glandular secretion.

THESE milk oils can penetrate the outer skin tissue and the pores more quickly and more deeply than any face creme ever known before. Besides, the milk oils have a revitalizing effect on the skin and bothersome blackheads, clogged pores, dryness, roughness, oiliness and other skin surface troubles are quickly banished.

BEAUTY IS SENSATION!

ABOVE: Edith Hubner, Guild member and head of the Hairstyling Department at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, says: "Even blase Hollywood has never seen any creme to equal Creme of Milk."

THE skin specialist explains it this way. Ordinary cremes, lotions or soaps remove the natural oil from the skin at the same time the dirt and makeup are removed. Thus, almost every woman today is bringing on skin trouble by actually starving her skin for natural oil. Prove this to yourself, the specialist says, by comparing the skin on your face with the skin on other parts of your own body.

REPLACE the lost natural oil and you will quickly win back the natural beauty of your complexion. It's as simple and easy as that. But then, aren't all the best things really simple?

STORES everywhere are being supplied with Creme of Milk as fast as possible but production is far behind. Best thing to do is write direct to me (I'll hire four more secretaries if I have to) and you'll get your first jar of Creme of Milk by return mail—postage paid. Send fifty cents for regular size jar or $1 for large economy size. Address your letter to Doris Dumont, Hollywood, Calif. P.S.—Creme of Milk will stay sweet and fresh practically forever.

BELOW: Mrs. Peverell Marley, Hollywood socialite and lovely wife of camera expert Marley, snapped at headquarters of the Motion Picture Hairstylists Guild.

AMAZING NEW BEAUTY CREME made from Milk

Milk replaces lost natural oils of the skin—then dryness, blackheads, coarse pores and other blemishes are banished.

No ordinary creme, lotion or soap has ever been able to duplicate the amazing effects of milk on the skin. And now all the beauty benefits of pure fresh dairy milk have been made into a delightful and entirely new type of face creme—Duart's Creme of Milk. This is the quickest, simplest, easiest and most effective beauty treatment ever. Just a minute morning and night. You can almost feel your skin drinking it in. Creme of Milk positively will not grow hair and it will stay sweet and fresh no matter how long the jar sits on your dressing table. Mail our coupon now. You will be delighted and surprised at the thrilling effects Creme of Milk will have on your skin from the very first day.

All Hollywood Praises Creme of Milk

Hollywood's "Supreme Court" of beauty is officially known as the Motion Picture Hairstylists Guild. They are responsible for the beauty care of EVERY STAR in every studio in Hollywood. All 85 of their official members ENDORSE CREME OF MILK, the only face creme they have ever endorsed.

LENORE SABINE, President of the Motion Picture Hairstylists Guild and Head Hairstylist of Paramount Studios says: "Creme of Milk is truly a NEW TYPE of creme. There is nothing else like it—every star I know is using it to protect the beauty of her skin."

NINA ROBERTS, Vice President of the Motion Picture Hairstylists Guild and Head Hairstylist at United Artists Studio says: "Creme of Milk is the greatest cosmetic discovery of our time. Use it just once and you'll never go back to ordinary cremes."

"No more 'tired,' 'let-down feeling' for me."

"I reasoned that my red blood corpuscle strength was low and I simply took a course of S.S.S. Tonic and built it back."

IT is all so simple and reasonable. If your physical let-down is caused by lowered red blood corpuscles—which is all too frequent—then S.S.S. Tonic is waiting to help you...and will, unless you have a serious organic trouble that demands a physician or surgeon.

Remember, S.S.S. is not just a so-called "tonic." It is a tonic specially designed to stimulate gastric secretions, and also has the mineral elements so very, very necessary in rebuilding the oxygen-carrying red corpuscles in the blood.

This two-fold purpose is important. Digestion is improved...food is better utilized ...and thus you are enabled to better "carry on" without exhaustion—as you should.

You may have the will-power to be "up and doing" but unless your blood is in top notch form you are not fully yourself and you may remark, "I wonder why I tire so easily."

Let S.S.S. help build back your blood tone...if your case is not exceptional, you should soon enjoy again the satisfaction of appetizing food...sound sleep...steady nerves...a good complexion...and renewed strength.

S.S.S. is sold by all drug stores in two convenient sizes. The $2 economy size is twice as large as the $1.25 regular size and is sufficient for two weeks treatment. Begin on the upraod today. © S.S.S. Co.

"I COULDN'T TAKE A STEP IN PEACE!

Every Move, Every Position, Cost Me Pain"

ANY person with Piles knows what suffering is. Piles cause you physical suffering. They cause you mental distress. They make you look worn and haggard.

Piles can take various forms—internal or external, itching or painful, bleeding or non-bleeding—but whatever form they take, they are a cause of misery and a danger.

A Scientific Formula

Effective treatment today for Piles is to be had in Pazo Ointment. Pazo is a scientific treatment for this trouble of proven efficacy. Pazo gives quick relief. It stops pain and itching. It assures comfort, day and night.

Pazo is reliable because it is threefold in effect. First, it is soothing, which tends to relieve soreness and inflammation. Second, it is lubricating, which tends to soften hard parts and also to make passage easy. Third, it is astringent, which tends to reduce swollen parts and to stop bleeding.

Real Results

Pazo comes in Collapsible Tube with Detachable Pile Pipe which permits application high up in rectum where it reaches and thoroughly covers affected parts. Pazo also now comes in suppository form. Pazo Suppositories are Pazo Ointment, simply in suppository form. Those who prefer suppositories will find Pazo the most satisfactory as well as the most economical.

Franchot Without Joan

acting was an exciting career. He gave me his own enthusiasm for the stage.

"This wasn't just another dramatic club. It was a very good little theater—not out to make money, but to present dramatic art. We put on three or four one-act plays every week-end, and six full-length plays strung out through the year. I didn't specialize in any one type of rôle. I played leads, character parts, comedy parts. I wanted variety. For that matter, I still want it.

"It wasn't long before I had serious acting ambitions—but I was keeping those ambitions more or less to myself. Mother knew about them, and she encouraged them. Every time I was in a play, she came down to Ithaca to see it. She understood that I wasn't just stage-struck; that I was half reaching out for a career. And if I thought I might develop into something on the stage, and be happy doing it—well, she was all for it. I know that there are stories to the effect that my family objected to my going on the stage. They aren't true. The family was all for me, all of the time. In fact, if it hadn't been for them, I wouldn't be here today."

He paused. I asked, "Did your stage ambitions interfere with college—or did college interfere with your ambitions?"

"My Senior year, I made Phi Beta Kappa, and Kappa Beta Phi. I earned a half-year's credit on an M. A. degree—which I would need if I wanted to teach. And I was assistant to the professor of Romance Languages; I wasn't doing any actual instructing, but I was keeping records, correcting papers, and serving as a general handy man, constantly dabbling in French. Just in case I needed it later. I hoped I wouldn't. I intended to work in stock during the summer, and make a go of acting.

"I got a job for the summer with the Gary McGarry Players in Buffalo. Then I thought I was ready for Broadway. Broadway thought differently. I was in New York eight weeks before I found my first job—a fifteen-dollar-a-week job. And it wasn't on Broadway. It was with the New Playwrights' Theater in Greenwich Village.

"The fifteen dollars helped me to eat, with the help I had from home. I don't know how I could have lasted many more weeks, if it hadn't been for that job . . . when it was so easy to go back to college, start studying again, and go into teaching.

"I thought I was going to work for an art theater—you know, the great ideal of every college dramatic club. It should have been an art theater, but it was a most awful flop. Finally, I was approached by a young crowd that called themselves The Group Theater. They had ideas about making art out of drama. I was inclined to be cynical, but I went to one of their meetings and listened, and it all sounded very good. . . ."

HIS cigarette burned short, he looked around for an ash-tray (something an actor never seems to have), and ended by crushing the cigarette under foot.

"That was in 1928. For three years we worked together, about thirty of us, before we ever produced a play. That's a long time to keep an ideal alive. Or to keep enthusiasm alive.

"The prime promoters of the idea were two men named Strasbourg and Klermon, who taught the rest of us all that they knew about the Stanislavsky method of dramatic technique. It was amazing, what they accomplished in my case. I had come to New York, couldn't get work, and finally had had to take a fifteen-dollar-a-week job. I held that job for six months, working with the Group Theater on the side all during that time. At the end of six months, I went up to Broadway again, read a part in a producer's office, and he wouldn't let me out until I had signed for the part. I never had any more trouble earning a living."

Thoughtfully, he fingered the make-believe, but realistic bandage that he was wearing on his right hand for a coming scene in the picture.

"In 1931, I was playing in The Age of Innocence with Katharine Cornell when Morris Carnoffsky, one of the leaders of the Group, told me that we had a chance at last to produce a play. The Theater Guild had agreed to let the Group Theater produce The House of Connelly and would put up half the money for production, if we could round up the other half. We found an 'angel' for our half, and then we fell to work. I dropped out of The Age of Innocence to join them.

"We went to a quiet little hamlet in Connecticut, called Brookfield Center, to rehearse. We lived in an old, broken-down boarding house and rehearsed in the barn—without scenery. We were there twelve weeks, and then we had to wait six weeks more for the Theater Guild to unwind red tape and approve the presentation. Most of us were starving by that time. We had gone up to Brookfield Center with just three thousand dollars. And thirty of us had lived on that for eighteen weeks!

"We made the critics conscious of us with our first play—but The House of Connelly was not a hit. Every play we produced from 1931 to 1934 was the same—an artistic success, a box-office 'dud.' Until finally we presented Men in White, by Sidney Kingsley, which was an instant success, ran a year, and was bought by the movies. Then we were on our way.

"When we took the jaunt to Brookfield Center and announced that we had formed a co-operative art theater to produce on Broadway, everybody said, 'How can you have a theater without actors?' Morris Carnoffsky and I were about the only ones who had actually appeared on Broadway. But nowadays, every time the Group Theater puts on a play, the critics say, 'As always in a Group Theater production, the performances are unexcelled on the current stage.'" He apparently derived great satisfaction from drawing this contrast. "The Thirty Who Were Scorned have become the white hopes of the American theater."

When did he first think of pictures? "Off and on, I would think of them," he confided. His eyes lighted, reminiscently. "When I was in college, I got steamed up about them. First National sent a director and a camera around to the major colleges, picking out prospects for films, and I was one of the ten chosen for tests at Cornell. For three weeks afterward, I was positive that I was going to Hollywood to make seventy-five dollars a week and become the hero of the hour. Then they ran off all ten tests in a local theater. And as soon as I saw mine, I was positive that I'd never be in pictures. . . . Out of all the 'discoveries' made at colleges on that junket, I understand there is only one left in Hollywood—and he is Fredric March's stand-in. So it was just as well that I didn't make the grade, I guess.

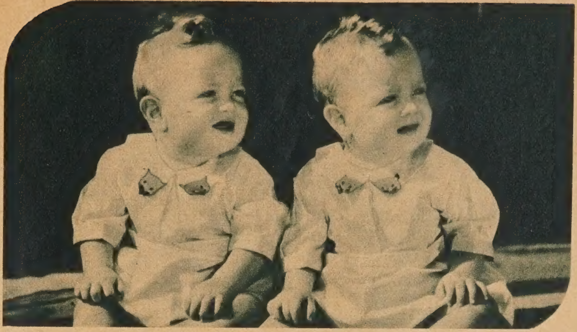
"Then, after I had done a few things in New York, I made more tests—more than fifteen of them. I was tested by every company except Universal and Columbia. Among others, I made two for Paramount, two for RKO, one for Warners, three for M-G-M, two for Fox. Finally, I just quit. As a movie possibility, I was apparently hopeless. Then I was in a play with Jane Cowl, A Thousand Summers, and Al Altman, the M-G-M talent scout, asked me to make one more test. I told him that it was useless, that I just wasn't a movie type. He said, 'We've got a new kind of film now. People are photographing much better.' I didn't know whether to believe him or not. I said, 'All right—if you'll make this test exhaustive.'

"It was exhaustive, all right. We worked on it two days, and I really made three tests, not just one. I did a dramatic scene, a comedy scene, and a character part. And I was signed—to do a character bit as a tough guy in a Jean Harlow picture. Jean and I are scheduled to play together in His Brother's Wife, but we weren't destined to be together in that first picture.

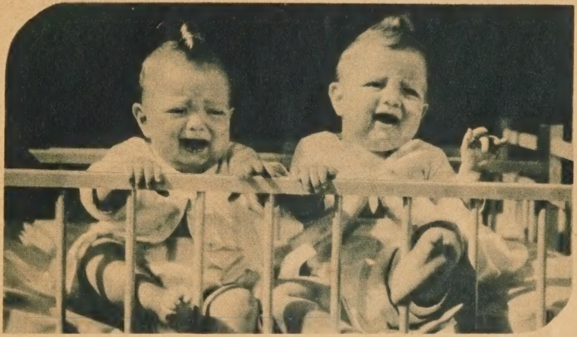
"'This is no tough guy,' the casting director said—and that was that. He put me in another picture, in a dress suit. I never wore evening clothes in all of the time I was on Broadway—six years. But they're about all I have worn on the screen."

WHO was the person with imagination who cast him for Lives of a Bengal Lancer? "That was an accident. They had been shooting eight days, with Harry Wilcoxon in the rôle, when they suddenly decided that they had two men of the same type—Gary Cooper and Wilcoxon—in the principal rôles. 'This will never do,' they said. 'We need contrast between these two characters.' I was the only actor available, so I was picked. (They told me all this.) I had just finished a picture, and I was all set for a month's vacation, but I had to go over to Paramount and report for work. I went around for two weeks, grumping. Then, when the picture was nearly finished, Henry Hathaway, the director, told me that he wanted to make a few retakes of the first scenes. He said, 'I know how you felt, those first few days—but you'll be happier if those scenes are made over.' We made retakes of almost all of them.

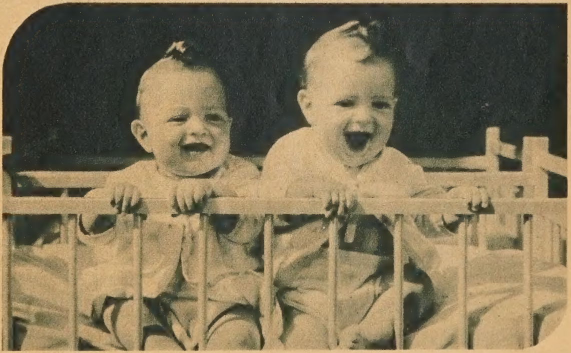
"You know, I fought the idea of playing an Englishman—especially a silly Englishman. That was the way the part was originally written; it was changed after we started shooting. Gary Cooper was a Canadian; Dick Cromwell was alibied as having gone to school in America; I was the only one of the trio who had to be an out-and-out Englishman. But that's one picture I'm glad now that I have made. Mutiny on the Bounty was another. And again I was an Englishman! Now I'm an English lord and lawyer in this picture—and I'm getting worried. Maybe they're going to type me." (He didn't look worried.)



"What! Go to bed? . . . Well, that's a dirty trick! We let you get us dressed up, and we did stunts for your old company . . . and now your dinner's ready, you pack us off to bed!"



"We won't lie down and go to sleep! Not one eye will we close all night long . . . you'll see how much noise twins can make! Our feelings are hurt—and we're prickly and cross!"



'Ah-h . . . ! She's getting the Johnson's Baby Powder! (Good teamwork, eh?) When we get rubbed with that silky-slick powder, we'll purr like kittens. Mother—we forgive you!"

How to Build Up WEAK, SKINNY RUNDOWN NERVOUS FOLKS..!

Feed Them "Strength Building Iodine" for Blood and Glands!

Thousands Say It's Quickest Way to Add Lbs. of Solid Flesh—Make You Strong and Rugged—Make You Sleep, Eat and Feel Better—Advise Seedol Kelpamalt for Best Results!

Here's new hope and encouragement for thousands of even naturally skinny, weak, worn out, haggard-looking men and women whose energy and strength have been sapped by overwork and worry, who are nervous, irritable, always half sick and ailing. Science says one of the principal causes of these rundown conditions is "GLANDS STARVING FOR IODINE." When these glands don't work properly, all the food in the world can't help you. It just isn't turned into flesh. The result is, you stay skinny, pale, tired-out and rundown.

The most important gland—the one which actually controls body weight and strength-building—needs a definite ration of NATURAL ASSIMILABLE IODINE all the time—to regulate metabolism—the body's process of converted digesed food into firm flesh, new strength and energy.

Thousands say, for NATURAL IODINE in convenient concentrated and assimilable form, take Seedol Kelpamalt—now recognized as the world's richest source of this precious substance. It contains 1,300 times more iodine than oysters, once considered the best source. 6 tablets alone contain more NATURAL IODINE than 486 lbs. of spinach or 1,387 lbs. of lettuce.

Try Seedol Kelpamalt for one week and notice the difference. If you don't gain at least 5 lbs. of "stay there flesh," feel stronger, eat better and sleep better, the trial is free. 100 jumbo size Seedol Kelpamalt Tablets—four to five times the size of ordinary tablets—cost but a few cents a day to use. IF YOU TOOK A SCREEN TEST!

You might be frightened as famous stars were or, oddly enough you might not

Evelyn Venable congratulates husband, Hal Mohr, on winning the best photography award. Read what Mohr has to say in this interesting interview

By Mark Dowling

AL JOLSON became a nervous wreck. Garbo was badly made up. Edward Arnold showed his excitement by pacing up and down. Leslie Howard remained cool as a cucumber.

That's how these now-famous stars reacted when they faced the Waterloo of many a Hollywood newcomer—their first tests!

They weren't famous, then, many of them. Just bewildered, hopeful aspirants to movie fame and fortune, gambling their futures against a brief fifteen minutes on the screen.

And the man behind the cameras, judging their fate, was Hal Mohr, ace cameraman, who has recently directed photography of such pictures as Midsummer Night's Dream, Captain Blood and The Green Pastures.

"Don't lose hope—even if you've had no experience in acting," he told me. "Strangely enough, experience never helps in a first test before the movie cameras. Veterans of the stage are more nervous than real amateurs! Al Jolson was a Broadway headliner when I tested him for The Jazz Singer. He became so upset that I thought he'd have a nervous collapse."

A soft spoken, friendly man who has known the picture industry since its infancy, Hal Mohr is in private life the husband of Evelyn Venable, and the father of little Dolores Venable Mohr, now three months old.

"That test of Al was the most important I ever made," he explained, "since the success of the first all talking picture depended on his taking the part. I stopped shooting, every few minutes, and chatted with him, hoping to overcome his nervousness. Finally we got some pretty fair stuff—and he made the picture that changed Hollywood overnight."

The same courtesy is shown every newcomer, be she famous Broadway headliner or unknown aspirant from some small town. But most who take tests are pitifully unprepared. Few can afford the elaborate preparation of Gladys Swarthout, who studied for months before making her first tests!

"I tested Garbo when she was completely unknown in this country except as a protégée of the famous director, Stiller," Mohr told me. "I made a few close-ups of her—and reported that I believed she had little chance because she photographed poorly."

Hal couldn't know that Garbo's shyness in a strange new land—and the fact that make-up artists had so smeared her expressive features with heavy grease-paints—were responsible!

"MY WIFE, Evelyn Venable, has told me the other side of the story. She knows how a 'testee' feels whereas I usually can appreciate only the reactions of those behind the cameras. Evalyn came from the stage, and the glaring lights of the movie studios almost blinded her at first. The range of the camera is much more limited than a stage, too—and that confuses Broadway veterans."

Even present-day stars don't show at their best when they undergo tests for new rôles, Mohr added. You'd be surprised at the fright of world-famous actresses when they must go to the studio for an important test for a new part.

"The most interesting test I have made lately was of Boris Karloff for The Walking Dead," Mohr told me. "Boris plays a typical Karloffian creation, a man who is electrocuted and then brought back to life by a doctor's genius. The process of rejuvenation distorts one side of his face to a leering mask—that's where my problem came in.

"The beginning of the scene had to show Boris with a natural face. Then the audience must watch it gradually distort until it was a mask of horror at the end of the scene. We refused to resort to tricks of cutting."

And the "horror" make-up must be applied before the scene began—and remain somehow invisible during the first part! Mohr drew a red mark on his hand with a bit of red crayon, and held a piece of red glass before my eyes. Looking through it, the red mark of the crayon became invisible!

"Using this principle, that red seen through red does not show—we used red make-up on Karloff's face, and 'shot' him under bright red lights. Even to the naked eye, the red make-up didn't show. Gradually I added blue lights, which made the make-up stand out more and more."

Remember this—and you'll appreciate the scene all the more when you see the new Karloff picture, The Walking Dead! Knowing such tricks is what makes Hal Mohr valuable to producers, for whom he has worked ever since he became a cameraman at the age of fifteen.

Bluff and hearty, beloved by everyone who works with him, he is nevertheless a tireless student of everything pertaining to his profession. He has followed photography, first as a hobby and then as a job, ever since he was a youngster.

Between school hours, he got hold of an old projection machine and from its parts built a modern picture camera—that worked. He spent his vacation time filming local news events around his home city of San Francisco. Sid Grauman's father owned the Empress Theater, and

Gary's First Love

ever tell you about the time we were coming back from New York and the plane had to come down in the emergency field outside Palm Springs?"

He knew darned well he hadn't, but I didn't say a word. Afraid of stopping the flow once it started.

"Well, we were just going to hop out and phone in for a car to take us the rest of the way when we saw the field attendant leaning out of the shack on the field and waving at us to stay put. Couldn't figure out what was the matter, why he didn't come on out the door if something was wrong. Pretty soon he leans through the window with a pump action .22 and starts popping away at the ground sometimes here, sometimes there. We began to figure the guy had gone loco—you know, out there on a lonely field by himself too long!"

Gary chuckled. "The pilot and I were wondering whether we ought to make a run for it and get his gun or just wait and see if he'd quit of his own accord when all of a sudden we saw something squiggling on the ground right where the attendant had shot last. It was a rattler. Field was lousy with them. Rains had run 'em down out of the hills and a couple of dozen had picked out the landing field to roost in. We had to shoot our way out! We weren't in much of a hurry, anyway, so we just parked there in the plane and popped at 'em for a while. Kept track of hits and had kind of a competition. Between the three of us we bagged quite a few. I enjoyed that trip."

"You got funny ways of enjoyin' yourself, Mister! I'll stick to a typewriter and you can have your rattlers—I'll be alive still when you miss one of those shots once!"

"Not the way you write, you won't!" Nice guy, Coop! I was beginning to wish I hadn't gotten him talking.

GARY is a funny sort of man. I don't think he likes civilization if you figure civilization to mean cities and lots of people. He can't stand cocktail parties and all that stuff.

Therefore most of his free time you'll find him roaming the hills with a dog, pipe and gun or forked over a horse. If you've never done it, he'll tell you that you'd be amazed the grand and sensible things you'll hear that way, and then when it's quiet and dark you can pull up by a fire and listen to it crackling which sure beats the tar out of hearing Blondie Hollywood prattle about how her leading man tried to swipe a scene from her today, the big baboon!

Gary Cooper is the only man that I know that hasn't been changed by Hollywood. Maybe one reason is that he never took his feminine fan mail too seriously. It kind of embarrassed him more than anything else when some of the ladies got sentimental about him. Another thing, he'd be a lot happier if he didn't look so much like himself. But you couldn't miss that long, lean guy in any crowd. He stands out and he gets recognized and his face flushes some and he wishes he could get the hell out of there. But he doesn't. He'd be afraid of being rude to somebody and hurting their feelings. His courtesy is too ingrained to allow that. At first an awful lot of people took advantage of that sensitiveness, but somehow now he's got a couple of friends that watch out for him, in situations like that. They work for him, but that doesn't mean they've jobs with Gary Cooper—they're just good friends. The fact that they get paid doesn't signify—they're just part of the Cooper outfit. There are three of them and I don't think there's a thing on earth they wouldn't do for him. Jack Moss, Cracker Henderson and Slim wouldn't be nice guys to tangle with in case they figured you'd done anything to hurt "Coop." He inspires that sort of feeling in the few people who really know the guy.

HOLLYWOOD interviewers squawk a lot about what a tough subject Gary is to write about. The trouble isn't with Gary. It's with them. Ask Gary a lot of intimate questions like that and he's miserable from a combination of embarrassment and a carefully controlled desire to smack somebody on the snoot. After seven years in pictures he still thinks its his business whether or not he sleeps raw and some people in Hollywood think he's backward or taciturn because he doesn't tell them. Personally, I think he's got more sense than the whole kit and caboodle. Another thing, leading men are supposed to talk about ladies and the Grand Passion. Well, the funny thing there is that Gary still figures that gentlemen don't talk about ladies in public!

By the time you read this Gary will be sitting on the taff rail of a cruiser somewhere off the coast of Bermuda. He'll have a heavy rod in his hands and a lot of line out and he'll be hauling away and slacking up—playing a sail-fish, if his luck holds, in one of the toughest battles a man can find on sea-water. But you can bet his bottom dollar he won't be leaping up and down and yelling. His mouth will be a tight smile and the only emotion he'll show will be the ripple of a jaw muscle when the fish pulls a smart stunt trying to get unhooked. Gary doesn't waste his energy trying to make people look at him.

He's gotten pretty much what he's wanted out of life by that quiet concentration of his. He doesn't get off on the wrong track once he's set his bearings. Gary wanted a ranch of his own. He wanted a house to stay in when he's working in town fixed up the way he likes a house—which doesn't mean modernistic and fashionable, it means comfort, leather and wood-smoke. He wanted a smaller ranch house in the desert near Hollywood where he could keep horses and get away for a week-end. He wanted all those things when he wandered into town, a ranch-hand looking for a job, seven years ago. And he wanted a couple of real friends.

Gary Cooper is one man who got what he wanted out of Hollywood and didn't have to sell his soul to get it. You see, out under the night skies of the Montana plains you get a pretty good idea of what you want out of life and what you're willing to give for it. "Coop" was never willing to sacrifice his self-respect for anything on earth. That's why he's happy today.

And he got what he wanted by doing it. How about the rest of us?

MYSTERY—Would lose its charm in revealing any of the plot to a potential audience. It is a confounding puzzler, by virtue of its novel motive, and other movie producers will be kicking themselves around the block for not having thought up the idea, which emerged from the brains of Al Cohen and Robert T. Shannon.

Such nice persons are suspected as slayers of Leo Carrillo, an operatic star! Benita Hume, Katherine Alexander, for instance! Then there's J. Carrol Naish, as a maniacal composer, who is a cinch to be guilty of the crime. H. B. Warner's modest demeanor makes him a candidate for the questionable honor. Duncan Renaldo and Leonard Ceeley are rival tenors who look very suspicious under the circumstances while Pedro de Cordoba's sinister manner furnishes him with the perfect aura for accusation.

Since Chester Morris is a young, bright-eyed detective with the perfect nose for ferreting out crime, and since Madge Evans is around to help him, in her amateurish fashion, there is no reason for the audience to get jittery while the hectic plot unfolds.

Carrillo's first flight into theatrical fame came through Lombardi, Ltd., when he played the love-sick Italian dress-designer who believed the wrong woman. He has since swung into the roué realm, reaching an amusing place in the current film with his beguiling manner.

Bette Davis In Person

She had never been to Hollywood before. She had never seen a movie star in person. But, an ardent movie fan, as many people seem to be these days, she was intensely interested in the stars, especially as personalities. She explained:

"I can see them in pictures and judge them as actors and actresses, myself. But their real characters—that is a different matter. What I wish I could know is: Off the screen, what are they like? Take Bette Davis, for instance, a favorite of mine. I know she is a fine actress; but—is she a fine woman or is she just commonplace? She is talented; but is she nice or a regular little vixen? She is attractive; but is she friendly or completely high-hat? Having won the Academy Award, she is tops on the screen, but is she tops off the screen as well? What is Bette Davis really like?

I suppose that is a question many fans are asking, especially since the Academy Award and its attendant new limelight for Bette. And I believe it is one I can answer. Because I've known Bette for a long time. . . .

What is she like? Well, the first thing I would say is that she is innately kind. This is what I mean:

The first time I ever saw Bette was at the Chapman Park hotel in Los Angeles, official headquarters for women athletes during the Olympic Games of 1932. I was working for a Los Angeles newspaper then and was assigned to "cover" the women and the women's events at the Games.

They had had some of the women's track events that hot August afternoon I am talking about, among them the javelin throwing. I don't remember what team won but I do remember something else—the almost pitiful showing of the Japanese girls' team. They were so small, so bewildered in this strange land. They seemed so much younger. They tried gallantly, but they were no match for the older, stronger, inherently huskier girls of other nations. Down they went to defeat—last in every event they entered.

And now they were back at the Chapman Park hotel, gathered in a corner of the music room with their ever-present chaperon. One of them was sobbing out her disappointment in her own language which made it all the more pitiful, somehow.

And then Bette Davis walked into the hotel. Bette always has been a fine swimmer and she had come to see the Olympic swimming stars, some of whom she knew. She paused on the threshold of the music room and one of the Japanese youngsters saw her. The little girl's face lighted up and she cried out something in Japanese. The chaperon came over to Bette.

"You are Mees Dav'ees?" she questioned. Her English was broken but wonderfully polite.

"Why, yes," said Bette.

"Ah, we have seen your peeect-ures," said the little Japanese woman. "Would you grant honor by shaking the hand?" She thrust out her small brown hand and Bette shook it warmly while the little Japanese girls gathered around, chattering in their own tongue. Finally, the one who had been crying proffered an autograph album to Bette with a shy question. The chaperon translated a bit hesitantly:

"She asks you to please make your name on the page?"

Smilingly, Bette scribbled out that big signature of hers. And then she made a lovely gesture. Offering a book of her own to the little girl who had felt so badly over the Olympics, she said: "I saw you on the track this afternoon. You were very courageous in the face of defeat. Won't you do me the honor of writing your name in my book?"

It wasn't an autograph book. It was just an address book she carried in her purse. But it served its purpose. Her disappointment completely forgotten, the little girl pleasedly inscribed her name on one of its pages, as did the others when she had finished. . . .

I SAW Bette a couple of nights later at the Coconut Grove. She was with a tall, slender, quiet-mannered chap with dark, curly hair. Not terribly good-looking, but nice-looking. All through that evening she laughed and danced with this chap, and looked into his eyes with an expression that meant only one thing—love. She was pretty well known in pictures by this time and people kept staring at her, but she never seemed to notice. She was aware only of her partner. . . . He was Harmon O. Nelson, Olympic orchestra leader. They're married now, as you probably know. She always calls him Ham. He calls her Spuds. They're still in love. . . .

If you know Bette you also will enjoy in her that incorrigible flair for practical jokes. Not the mean kind, but certainly very complicated ones. There is, for example, the matter of the automobile she bought for Ham's birthday.

It seems that Ham likes to drive a car, drives one very well and, with real justification, is a little proud of his prowess at the wheel. So Bette decided to get him a new car as a birthday surprise. That is, another car. She wasn't working at the time and she spent five days finding just the right car—a nifty 1919 T-model Ford, stripped. Price $20. The deal made, she had the car driven to a garage near her home and promptly went into serious conference with the head mechanic.

That was on a Wednesday. The following Saturday night Bette had a party for Ham. When the guests had arrived and also the peak o' the evening, as it were, came a ringing of the door bell, and there stood a messenger with a placard for Ham.

"Happy birthday to you!" it read. Then the messenger stepped aside and, behold, the $20 automobile stood in the driveway, painted a pale pink.

Bette appeared at Ham's side. "Do you think you can drive it?" she inquired, innocently.

Ham bristled. "Sure I can drive it," he asserted. "Watch me!"

Grandly, he seated himself on the pink seat. Someone cranked the thing with resulting roar.

"Adios!" yelled Ham above the din. "I'm off for a jaunt!" But fate decreed otherwise—aided by Bette and the neighborhood mechanic. With increasing shimmying and sputtering, the car suddenly accomplished what is probably the only perfect imitation of the one hoss shay demise in history. It went completely to pieces, setting Ham down hard amid the wreckage. Everyone shouted, except Bette who looked very demure as she helped her husband dust himself off.

"Well, we were watching," she remarked, innocently.

Ham surveyed her with a wry grin. "You little devil!" he remarked. "I'll get even with you!" But he hasn't yet.

WHAT is Bette Davis like? Well, another thing—she's one of the most persistent girls I've ever known. "Blankety-blank persistent" was the way Jack Warner may have phrased it in the matter of the Golden Arrow company getting off for the Santa Anita races for the handicap.

Everyone from Bette down to the third grip on the set wanted to go. But the studio schedule said work—work all day. So Bette took pen in hand.

"Dear Mr. Warner," she wrote (or words to that effect) "we'd like very much to get off for the races some Saturday."

Well, Mr. Warner liked his employees to have a good time, but to suspend production on a picture for a whole afternoon was not to be considered. So his answering note to Miss Davis said: "No." Kindly but firmly.

The company lost hope, then, but Miss Davis wasn't daunted. She wrote another note. Same text. Different wording.

Like the auto episode, this began on Wednesday. By Saturday morning, Mr. Warner had received some seven notes, all from Miss Davis concerning the desired vacation for the races. But he was still holding out.

Then Bette staged her master stroke. She "said it with flowers." At ten o'clock a lovely bunch of forget-me-nots arrived at the Warner sanctum, with card inscribed: "Ah, please."

I wasn't there, but they do say Jack Warner gave up the ghost. At any rate, he sent for Sam Bischoff, supervisor, and Tenny Wright, in charge of production operations, and between them they worked out a schedule for shooting so that there would be no lost production time on Golden Arrow.

So Bette went to the races and lost eleven dollars.

I COULD show you other Bettes too, if this were a book instead of just a story. I could show you the Bette who works sixteen hours a day when a picture is in the making, keeping "in character" even when she is off the set. I could show you a Bette who is so honest she freely admits, sometimes vouchsafes the information that her blondeness "came out of a bottle." I could show you the Bette whose eyes fill with tears, even now, when she speaks of the sacrifices her mother made that she might study for the stage. The Bette that can't do enough for that mother, now that fame and fortune have come. The Bette who remembers all of the old friends who "knew her when." The Bette whose temper flares when she sees an injustice—and sometimes with less worthy provocation, but who is ready an instant later to say she is sorry.

There's not much of the touted "Hollywood glamour" about Bette Davis. She's too real. There's not much of the Hollywood stamp of beauty, either. She's too much herself. There isn't anything overly high-brow or Heaven-anointed or genius-set-apart about her.

Every girl owes it to herself to make this "Armhole Odor" Test

If moisture once collects on the armhole of your dress, the warmth of your body will bring out stale "armhole odor" each time you wear your dress.

IT is a terrible thing for any nice girl to learn that she is not free from perspiration odor. Yet 9 out of 10 girls who deodorize only will discover this embarrassing fact by making a simple test.

You owe it to yourself to make the test tonight. When you take off your dress, remember to smell the fabric under the arm. If moisture has collected on the armhole, even once, you will be able to detect a stale "armhole odor."

You cannot protect yourself completely by the use of creams or sticks, which deodorize only. They cannot keep the little hollow under your arm dry.

You may be completely dainty, but people near you are conscious of the stale "armhole odor" of your dress! They think it is you!

There is one SURE protection

Once a woman realizes what the problem is, she will insist on underarm dryness. That is why millions of fastidious women regularly use Liquid Odorono. With the gentle closing of the tiny pores in the small area under the arm, no moisture can ever collect on the armhole of your dress, to embarrass you later by creating an impression of uncleanliness.

Any doctor will tell you that Odorono is entirely safe. With Odorono, the excess perspiration is simply diverted to less "closed-in" parts of the body, where it is unnoticeable and evaporates freely.

Saves your lovely gowns

There's no grease to get on your clothes. And with all moisture banished, there's no risk of spoiling an expensive costume in one wearing. Just by spending those few extra moments required to use Odorono, you'll be repaid not only in assurance of complete daintiness, but in money and clothes saved, too!

Odorono comes in two strengths—Regular and Instant. Regular Odorono (Ruby colored) need be used only twice a week. For especially sensitive skin or hurried use, use Instant Odorono (Colorless) daily or every other day. At all toilet-goods counters.

If you want to be completely at ease and assured, send today for samples of the two Odoronos and leaflet on complete underarm dryness offered below.

BRUSHING brings Beauty

IF your hair is dull and drab, you can make it lustrous with life, beautiful for all to see. STRANZIT, the new kind of hair brush, does it almost magically. Beauty Editors all say it is marvelous for waves. Instead of spoiling waves, its U. S. Patent design actually helps them. That's why Stranzit is used in most movie studios.

$1.50 to $3.50

Remember, real honest beauty of hair and skin comes from within. You must nourish both, say dermatologists, by stimulating blood circulation. The easy, pleasant way to do this is brushing. But avoid "sissy" brushes. Be sure to get husky, penetrating bristle which really works and lasts. The Pro-phy-lac-tic name is your guarantee of bristle excellence. Look for it on hair brushes, complexion brushes, bath brushes, hand and nail brushes.

Flowers In Her Hair

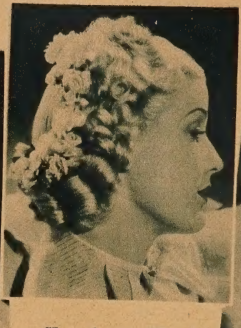
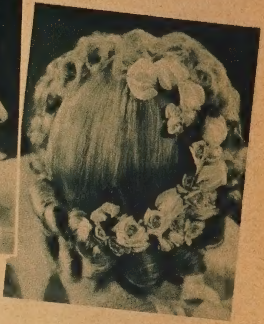
Charming Anita Louise offers a Victorian knot of pale pink carnations for your approval. This style is grand for the short girl giving a semblance of more height



How do you like the flower garden fantasy Anita Louise wears with so much grace? This is lovely for the very youthful type



This rear view of Miss Louise's hairdress shows tiny rosebuds and sweet peas fastened inside the halo effect making the coiffure reminiscent of gentle Ophelia none at the sides of the face; indeed, the hair should be brushed back smoothly, with the ears exposed. Similarly, if there is fullness at the sides of the face, with the ears full or partially covered (as in Lois Lindsay's coiffure), the hair should be brushed smoothly off the brow.

Those are pink rosebuds and blue forget-me-nots woven into Lois' demure yet sophisticated coiffure. It looks modern from the front and left side, but quaint and girlish from the right side, where a thick cluster of curls covers the entire side of the head. The almost invisible fringe of bangs over the right eye adds to the flattering femininity of this style, without destroying the lines and general off-the-face feeling.

And how do you like the two flower-garden fantasies Anita Louise wears with so much grace? It's the same basic hairstyle, but with different floral decorations. In the photo where she is smiling, Anita wears a Victorian top-knot of pale pink carnations. This particular style will give a semblance of height and dignity to the girl who needs it. You can see for yourself in the profile and rear view photos that the hairs is arranged in a sort of halo of curls that encircles the head. A crescent of tiny rose-buds and sweet peas is fastened inside this halo, to make the whole coiffure tenderly reminiscent of gentle Ophelia.

I imagine you are thinking, at the moment: "Those coiffures are all right for movie stars, but out of the question for me!" There, however, you are wrong. The stars' hair receives the same kind of treatment as yours—provided, of course, that you don't neglect your hair, but shampoo it every week, brush it daily and have good permanent waves. If you have a knack at copying hairstyles yourself, all you need to achieve the same effects as those shown here are: (1) a good permanent wave, (2) wave lotion, (3) curlers and bob pins, (4) a sprig of flowers and (5) a little imagination. If you haven't this priceless knack, then there are lots and lots of good beauty operators who will supply it for a small sum. Even try; and the quality of the solution used as well as the instructions given to operators make it more than certain that your wave will turn out well. The one warning I have to offer you—is not to disregard trade names. It's foolish to buy a car without knowing what kind it is; but no more so than to ask for a permanent wave without specifying the manufacturer's name and, furthermore, seeing to it that you get what you ask for. You may be sure that the movie stars demand nationally advertised waves. Their appearance means too much to risk having their hair ruined, even temporarily.

The tyrannical camera "picks up" and highlights each hair so clearly that shampoos every few days are an essential for film actresses. . . . You may not have to face a camera, or have a big contract at stake, but it's just as necessary to your business and social success that your hair be thoroughly cleansed at least once a week. . . . This is especially true in warm weather, for then, if you neglect hair hygiene, you risk offending two senses instead of one—sight and smell!

STANDING in a row like the Three Bears in the photo on page 62, are bottles of Drene, a greenish-amber liquid that takes a lot of the boredom out of shampooing. It requires only one teaspoonful of Drene, one sudsing and one rinsing to cleanse your hair thoroughly, making it lustrous, film-free and fresh as a flower! Soft or stubborn hair is extremely pliable and easily set, too, after a Drene shampoo. The large size bottle contains six ounces, enough for twenty-four shampoos, and costs $1.

Two more aids to hair beauty illustrated here are the Pro-phy-lac-tic Stranzit Brushes. The Patrician, in the foreground, has a gleaming maple back and is of generous proportions; while the Junior Stranzit in the background is smaller, cozier—just right for anyone with small hands and bobbed hair. It has a plastic back that comes in several bright shades. The serrated bristles, characteristic of these Pro-phy-lac-tic brushes, give the scalp a stimulating massage and make it easier for you to brush your hair properly—that is, strand by strand, in an upward motion. Each of these brushes costs $2.50, a modest price for such sturdiness and utility.

Summer nights spent dancing place a definite emphasis on your hair—not only on its lustre but also on its scent. . . . So if you want to make the most of your opportunities you'll be canny and get some of the new Halo Hair Fragrance pictured in that atomizer bottle. It's made by the Ogilvie Sisters, expressly for use on the hair, and besides scenting your locks sublimely, adds gloss and helps to keep your wave in place. You simply spray it on after your hair is dressed. Without the atomizer it costs $1.25 and with it, $1.75—at leading department and drug stores.

Two products that add to eye allure are the recently repackaged Delica-Brow and the new lotion, Eye-Gene, both pictured. Delica-Brow itself is well-established, but the swanky red and gold metal container in which this excellent mascara now appears is new. . . . There's a black bakelite tray to eliminate messiness, a serviceable mirror and a good brush to help you make your pale lashes dark and glamorous. Price is 75 cents.

Apply mascara and eye shadow, by all means, but before you do, use a good cleansing, refreshing lotion, like Eye-Gene, to soothe and clear the eyes. Make it a daily habit, like brushing your teeth, and you won't regret it! Eye-Gene is grand after outdoor sports, cleaning house, crying over spilt milk, or spending an evening in a smoke-filled room. Its handy flat blue bottle with dropper attached can be tucked into your purse easily. Eye-Gene costs 60 cents and is made by Scott Phillips, Chicago.

LOTS of new products this month! The one Kathleen Burke is using is a new all-purpose preparation called Creme of Milk. It actually does contain the natural oils found only in cream or milk, so its name is no empty gesture. It is white, creamy and easily spread, and has a delicately unobtrusive fragrance. The container, I think, is stunning—white with a cerise label, very simple and modern. Creme of Milk is made by Duart, the permanent wave people, and is priced at 50 cents and $1 a jar.

Food produce is entering the beauty picture—what with facial cream made of milk and now—Lavena, a facial made of oatmeal! Both milk and oatmeal have definite beautifying properties, as our great-grammas well knew, but science, fortunately has eliminated their messy properties. . . . Oatmeal as a food just doesn't intrigue me, personally, but I'm getting more and more enthusiastic over oatmeal as Lavena dishes it up. Whenever Life begins to batter me, I just give myself a Lavena Facial and pay no attention! A fine, lavender-scented powder, Lavena is mixed with water to form a paste, spread on the skin and allowed to remain two minutes, for a quick "pick up" facial. For a prolonged face pack, leave it on until it dries (while you're taking your bath, for instance). There is an immediate improvement in the texture of your skin—it becomes smoother, softer and more refined. The large can illustrated holds enough for 30 treatments and costs only 65 cents.

The two jars of Mum are a reminder—and I hope a timely and effective one—that (1) personal daintiness is still one of the major requirements for beauty and that (2) Mum provides an easy and sure way of attaining that daintiness. If every girl would consider her deodorant as indispensable as her lipstick, there'd be a great deal more charm and beauty in this not-quite-satisfactory world. Don't you agree with me? For practical purposes, I recommend the 60 cent jar of Mum for your bathroom shelf and the 30 cent size for your desk, purse or week-end bag.

Good looks mean constant care, but a simple and faithfully followed formula will help you clip coupons of success both in your social and business life. You must realize that each day you face a battery of glances, and many times you are judged by your appearance. Is your hair cut and curled to make you look your best? Is your dress correctly fitted, clean and becomingly cut? There are tricks of make-up to be learned in these columns that will make you a lovelier person—and a more agreeable one, for a charming woman is a woman who knows she is admired.

BECAUSE KOTEX CAN'T CHAFE . . . CAN'T FAIL . . . CAN'T SHOW

CAN'T CHAFE

The sides of Kotex are cushioned in a special, soft, downy cotton to prevent chafing and irritation. Thus Wondersoft Kotex provides lasting comfort and freedom. But sides only are cushioned—the center surface is free to absorb.

CAN'T FAIL

Kotex has a special "Equalizer" center whose channels guide moisture evenly the whole length of the pad. Gives "body" but not bulk—prevents twisting and roping. The filler of Kotex is actually 5 TIMES more absorbent than cotton.

CAN'T SHOW

The rounded ends of Kotex are flattened and tapered to provide absolute invisibility. Even the sheerest dress, the closest-fitting gown, reveals no telltale lines or wrinkles.

THREE TYPES OF KOTEX

1. REGULAR—IN THE BLUE BOX—For the ordinary needs of most women.
2. JUNIOR—IN THE GREEN BOX—Somewhat narrower—when less protection is needed.
3. SUPER—IN THE BROWN BOX—Extra layers give extra protection, yet no longer or wider than Regular.

Why Claudette's Love Theory Failed!

she had bound herself to a new pattern of living, which, on acquaintance, was by no means as fair as it seemed to be at first.

She realized that neither she nor Norman were achieving the happiness and contentment to which they were entitled. She recognized that a woman's rôle was to be protected and that a man's rôle was to protect. And that she was paying a price too high for the right to manage her own household, to look after her own affairs, to fight her own battles, and to lean on her own courage.

IN THE beginning, her modern marriage seemed feasible. It seemed even essential. Norman is a quiet, studious person, happiest when he is alone, when he can sink into himself. Without the responsibilities of family relationships or obligations. On the contrary, Claudette is gregarious. She is most content when she is with her family, when she can exercise her latent gifts for housewifery. When she is surrounded by her laughing, intimate circle.

It was this consideration of their different temperaments which first gave them the idea of separate establishments. In addition to that, Claudette was so intent on a career, so eager to protect herself against too many encroachments on it, that any marital arrangement which guaranteed her immunity against the ordinary concerns of marriage, seemed wise.

But then, Claudette had not cut her eye teeth on life's experiences. She had met problems and had conquered them; had met heartaches and had overcome them. But always alone. Sharing troubles seemed to her a violation of herself as an individual, and an admission of defeat.

She was too young, too untutored in the ways of men and women to realize that marriage is built primarily on companionship — a companionship equally compounded of the high-lights of life and of its shadows.

She and Norman had their high-lights together. The shadows they kept to themselves. And so for the first two years they were blissfully content. It was because their modern marriage was more in the nature of an adventure, than of a partnership between two people dedicated to each other and to each other's welfare.

Unquestionably, if Claudette and Norman had undertaken marriage in the usual way, they would have encountered numerous bumps in the first months of their marriage. They would have had their squabbles, their disagreements, their moments of angry passion, followed by sweet and healing reconciliation. But during all this they would have made their adjustments to each other. They would have become a blend, a unit, which is the basis of real marriage.

And so the marriage which began as a marriage of convenience, became a marriage of great inconvenience. For when the break came it involved not only the end of marriage, but also a complete abandonment of modern theories.

IT IS my belief that spiritually Claudette's and Norman's marriage ended long ago. Long before she went to Mexico for her divorce. But both were unwilling to admit defeat of their experiment. They had cherished their theories even at the cost of contentment and happiness.

The novelty of her independence wore off. As Claudette matured spiritually and artistically, she began to have a larger vision of a woman's purpose and position in life. She knew that her independence was a wall against romance, a wall against masculine tribute, a wall against all the small things which embroider life.

Undoubtedly, Norman would have been much more content if Claudette had depended upon him more. Came to expect him to wait on her, to protect her. If she had made him feel the sturdy oak instead of a pal with whom she had entered into a marital arrangement. It would have subsidized a masculine ego, made him believe that he was essential to her well being. But as it was, here was Claudette, not only able, but insistent upon doing everything for herself; upon taking all burdens on her own shoulders, the knocks on her own chin. If life gave her a kick, she would pick herself up and dust herself off. Not for one instant did Norman feel that he was making life either easier or happier for Claudette. And that, of course, was a contradiction of woman's sphere and of man's sphere; of woman's nature and of man's nature.

The actress conceded that each individual case presented individual approach, but she struggled, sometimes against better judgment to keep her theory alive.

After the first flashing days of romance, they had nothing left. No community of memory to carry them over the days when love languished.

CLAUDETTE today, in her second marriage, is not keeping love at arm's length. She has blossomed as she has matured. In her second marriage she is finding the answer to all of a woman's yearning for protection. Dr. Pressman is a specialist of note. He has a distinguished place in medical circles of Los Angeles, and his skill is recognized. Theirs is a partnership of love and not of convenience. Claudette's admiration for her husband is boundless. Because she is so sensitive, because in the last few years she has achieved a new viewpoint regarding human relationships, she pays proper tribute to his position and his work in assuming all the duties of wifehood.

Claudette's growth in the past two years has been remarkable, not only as an actress, but also as a person. Her brilliant and intuitive mind has given characterizations to the screen extraordinarily vivid. And it is this ability to analyze, not only situations but also herself, which undoubtedly helped Claudette abandon her theories of "separate" marriage, for a marriage in accordance with age-old pattern.

Her courage has brought her fame as an actress, has led her feet to the highest rung on the Ladder of Fame!

Her courage in readjusting her ideas of living will undoubtedly bring her a new, a fresh, a vibrant happiness she has never known before—in this, her second marriage.

You will see a more glorious Claudette in her next Paramount picture.

Thirteen Hours By Air

★★½

COMEDY-MELODRAMA — Disregarding the importance of plot and concentrating upon fast dialogue and situations, vigorous melodrama, disguised as comedy, fairly shoves Fred MacMurray into a pilot's seat where he can cast suspicious glances at Joan Bennett while he tries to conquer his love.

It is a story with moss on it. The motley throng of transcontinental air passengers who get mixed in a mystery when a blizzard forces the ship down, try to get unscrambled.

Amusing and at times exciting, Mitchell Leisen directs the melodramatic phases of this piece with broadness so as to overcome hokum that might tempt audiences to boredom, or what is worse, lure them into the open spaces these fresh summer nights.

MacMurray is definitely a personality to be reckoned with among potential male stars. He accepts his post good-humoredly and makes the best of scanty material.

Joan Bennett's slightly petulant, baby face, is piquant as usual. She is a captivating blonde who can express comedy in a fashion few newcomers to the screen comprehend.

It is ZaSu Pitts who forlornly waves her hands and flutters her eyelids to the amusement of audiences. Fred Keating, recently recuperated from his third operation since arriving in Hollywood, contributes a well-etched performance as the fortune-seeking count. Bennie Bartlett, a juvenile of promise,

Norma Shearer—from Extra Girl to Stardom

"The rooming house isn't much of a place," the aunt explained "but the woman who runs it is a good sport and she'll trust you for your rent until you can get on your feet."

About all that could be said for the room in which the Shearer trio settled was that it contained a none too comfortable double bed plus a less comfortable cot and it was large enough to contain a wardrobe trunk. The trunk served as a table off which they ate their breakfast which usually consisted of rolls purchased at a nearby delicatessen and coffee made over a tin of Sterno.

Outside their window the elevated trains rushed by making a constant din. To Norma, however, this strange new way of living spelled drama. Bagdad-on-the-subway. Anything might happen.

Norma knew nothing whatever about the Broadway ropes. She had a few letters of introduction to theatrical agents and producers which she promptly presented. She might as well have dropped them into the nearest waste basket.

It was characteristic of Norma that she should aim high. And almost as soon as she arrived in New York she went to see Ziegfeld in the hope that he would allow her to decorate the Follies. Instead, he advised her to forget show business.

"You see, my dear girl, you really have nothing to offer," he told her. "You can't sing, you can't dance, and you're too small for a show girl."

"And of course he was right," says Norma in recalling that interview. "I didn't have anything to offer—not even experience. All I had was determination and the knowledge that I had to find work—or starve."
